Two daughters from Vancouver and Chicago respectively arrived in time for the funeral thus making a full family of eight to pay the last sad rites to the departed. Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Redmond also came from Calgary. M. S. J. and C. G. Craig were present from Olds as also Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Craig. Many letters of condolence were received from the numerous friends of the deceased in the east and west. Much sympathy is also expressed for the husband and children in their sorrow.

"Oh stars that glide through Heaven's unfathomed sea
May I not meet her in Abegame?
Oh let me know, as oft in childhood's harass That peace found only nestling in her arms. Gone the grey hair, the eyes that wept in vain. Gone the sad smile I ne'er shall see again. Gone the true heart, the soft love laden breast. Gone the one mother to her last long rest."

A Grand Ball under the auspices of the local bachelors, will be held on Friday Dec. 2nd. Mr. Jack Collins our enterprising young bandmaster has the affair in hand and under his management should prove a big success. During supper, which will be served at 12 o'clock sharp, a large fortune cake will be divided and contains a solid gold wedding ring, a button and a coin. All bachelors are requested to attend and try their luck. Tickets will be on sale at Brimacombe Bros. F. C. Long's drug store, C. E. Slaters, West Bros, Reed & Youngblut or J. A. Collins. Price $1.00 including supper. Ladies free.

PUBLIC NOTICE

S.S Teachers Hold Enjoyable Banquet

The annual banquet of the Sunday School teachers and officers of Vermilion took place on Tuesday night in the rooms occupied by Miss Brimacombe over the Post Office. Promptly at 7.30 the guests to the number of thirty sat down to the well filled tables. A most appetizing and bountiful repast was enjoyed after which the assembly adjourned to the main room where a short programme of speeches and music was given. It had been the intention to have had a report from H. F. Kenny, provincial S. S. Secretary, on the recent convention in Calgary. Mr. Kenny was not able to get here however. Speeches touching on different phases of S. S. work were given by Messrs. Simons, Day, Kempton and Hodgins. The subject of Missions was the main topic of the evening. Mr. Day spoke very interestingly on the difficulties of Mission work in the Far North. The meeting broke up with the National Anthem about 10.30.

Chairman

An attractive looking young woman, who gave her name as Mrs. May De Mille, of Hamilton, Ont, Monday pleaded guilty before Justice Barber to the charge laid against her of being drunk and disorderly in the streets of Vermilion. The charge was laid by Constable McPhail, R. N. W. M. P. On being asked what she had to say for herself May went on to tell how she was at one time a society belle but had reached her present state through drink and fast men. She was advised by his worship to turn a sharp corner and henceforth endeavor to lead a virtuous life and further informed that her presence was not desired in this community. By paying the costs of the court and promising to leave Vermilion she was discharged.

(Nov. 17th, 1910)

Mr. Percy Nolan left this week for England where he will spend the winter.

Mr. J. J. Walker of Vegreville, has taken a position in the Canadian Bank of Commerce here. The fact that another man is required here is ample evidence of the increase in business in Innisfree, as we all remember that less than two years ago two men for two days a week were able to handle the business here, while it now requires three men for the full six days a week.

Mrs. C. Ellis, accompanied by her daughter Florence, left this week for Edmonton, where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. S. Wintermute returned to town this week; Mr. Wintermute is expected in a few days.

Moose Hunters Surprised at Northern Settlement

Couldn't Get Away From It Even 60 Miles North of Mighty Saskatchewan

Messrs. Whyte & Daniel have returned recently from a hunting trip which terminated in somewhat of a dilemma. The party consisting of five, left Hardisty on Oct. 25th, with James Wells as guide and went due north through Vermilion, and crossed the mighty Saskatchewan at Hopkinsville, by means of the Government Ferry. A course somewhat N. E. was then taken and after five days hard travelling the hunters made permanent camp two miles north of Moose Lake. Here signs of moose were noticed and everyone was hopeful that it would not be long before the coveted prize was secured.

Next morning a plan was laid out by J. Wells and a five mile drive commenced toward Beaver River which resulted in tiring the hunters but produced no moose.

The next day a similar drive was made and again disappointment. It was evident that unless snow fell it was almost impossible to approach the wary animals, and likewise impossible to track them.

On the third morning snow fell but only very lightly. However, it facilitated tracking somewhat and with fresh ardour the hunt again commenced. This time Mr. Orr of Daysland, came upon a bull moose, but it escaped before he had time to get a shot. It was only on the fifth day that fortune smiled upon the hunt and Mr. J. Wells secured a fine moose and he made no mistake when he got sight of it. The animal was quickly skinned and quartered and carried through the brush to the wagon and down to camp.

Messrs. Wells and Jacobs having decided to stay in this district to trap, the return trip commenced [illegible] the prize. The weather had been very cold and it was anticipated that it would be difficult to get across the Saskatchewan, a very quick retreat was made. St. Paul des Metis was reached in a blizzard and with waiting only but a short time a dash was made for the ferry 18 miles distant. However fate was unkind and it was found that the ferry was [illegible] operation and it was only by the means of a small skiff that the hunters got across. The horses and wagons, all equipment and also the moose, were left on the north side of the [illegible]. Vermilion was reached by means of couple of freighters [illegible] turn to Vermilion. It was then decided to reach Hardisty by train [illegible]

APPLICATION BEING MADE TO PARLIAMENT FOR ROAD FROM LLOYDMINSTER TO BRUDERHEIM

This is Line Northern Settlers Petitioned for Last Year

The Canada Gazette contains notice that application will be made to Parliament for authority to construct branch lines to the number of no less than nineteen in the West. A number of these are of an interesting nature being cross country roads and on construction will form a substantial net work of railways.

Perhaps the most important one to this portion of Alberta is the application, which is contained in the list, for power to construct [illegible] from Lloydminster, northwesterly and westerly to Bruderheim. This is the line petitioned for by settlers throughout that territory [illegible] and laid before Mr. Mackenzie by the Hon. A. C. Rutherford, the premier, and Minister of Railways at the time. Consequently the above information will be received by the farmers throughout this long stretch of country with feelings of the keenest satisfaction.

The Vanishing Smuggler

By STEPHEN CHALMERS

(Copyright, 1905, by Edward J. Clode).

Queer Doings

The Thistle drew near the bar and soon in strange detention should smug gling be the case. Besides, the boat could be captured before it reached the rock and towed back to the schooner. The men beat their backs and stressed their muscles over their oars, but the tide grew race over against them, and the time was lost. "Smugglers sometimes!" Larkin knew how to navigate nearly as well as they did. And it was broad daylight. The whole thing was exciting and refreshing from the shore.

But to the Thistle's crew—aboard the smuggler—the long interval seemed like a year. The chief of Larkin's men, who acted as lookout, kept his head over the top of the sail a great deal but was so marked on a new moon. What was he grunting about? Larkin's forehead bled—bled. He felt his very brain bleeding.

His eyes ran red, and he heard how he could not see. Even now, while he was sure some the tidal roar of the on bankers was in his ears, he heard the oars from the ice. Larkin's eyes were bloodshot, and he could not see. He could hear his men's voices, but he could not see the color of their faces.

"Pull!" he shouted. "Pull, you devils!" Then he knew he was not able. Insane to answer "Aye, aye!" Then he knew he was not able to answer "Aye, aye!" Then he knew he was not able to answer "Aye, aye!" Then he knew he was not able

Vermilion Wheat Finest Yet Seen

Third Seed Grain Fair Again Splendid Success

The seed grain fair held in the Town Hall on Thursday was good evidence that in spite of the unfavorable season we can grow first class wheat in Vermilion. Many of the samples of spring wheat were almost perfect and the competition was keen that only half a point separated first and second prizes. Mr. C. A. Hodgins is to be complimented on taking first prize as he did at the Fall Fair. His wheat scored 92 points, D. L. Kennedy was second with 91½ points, P. G. Pilkie third 88 points and Wm. Steele fourth 87 points. All the samples were heavy—some of them 66½ lbs per bushel. The sample of Fall wheat shown by C. A. Hodgins although not quite such a good color as one could have wished was remarkably fine grain, the kernels were very large and uniform in size. He took 1st prize with a score of 89 points. Oats did not come up to last years standard either in quality or weight per bushel. Mr. D. L. Kennedy was first with a good sample of Abundance which scored 90 points and weighed 45 and half lbs per bushel, Norman McClellan was only 1 and a half points behind for second place. For Newmarket oats S. Ferrell took first and W. Lee and LeRoy West were second and third for Banner oats. There was only a small show of barley but what there was was good. D. L. Kennedy took first for six-rowed and Wm. Lee first for two-rowed. Flax was only a medium sample. Potatoes were as usual for Vermilion very good. After the Fair we had two addresses by Mr. W. C. McKillican of the seed department Calgary and Mr. G. H. Hutton from the experimental farm at Lacombe. Mr. McKillican was the first speaker and complimented the exhibitors on the fine display of wheat which he considered was the finest he had seen this season. He then gave detailed report of the prize winners. He pointed out the importance of growing Fall wheat as it was proved by the sample exhibited that it could be grown successfully in Vermilion and had many advantages over spring wheat. One of these is that you seldom see a low grade of fall wheat because it ripens seven to 14 days earlier than spring wheat and so escapes early frost which lowers the grade and price of spring wheat. Then it is a much heavier cropper and through ripening earlier it spreads the harvesting over a greater time and avoids having so much rush in cutting. Many farmers have failed with fall wheat through not sowing at proper time. The best time is first and second week in August. Sow as low as seed bed is packed just below loose soil. The best variety is Turkey Red. He emphasized the importance of having good pure clean seed and recommended growing a special plot for seed, preferably on breaking as that was usually the cleanest land and the free use of the fanning mill. None of the audience appeared to have found one to do satisfactory work and from the remarks made it appears that the perfect fanning mill is yet to be made. The speaker said it was the liveliest discussion on fanning mills he had heard in the province and was delighted to see so much interest taken in endeavouring to keep grain clean. Mr. G. H. Hutton was asked to make some remarks on general farming, said this was rather a large order but he would select a few subjects that he thought might be of general interest. First he spoke on the use of the packer. At present they have only a surface packer in use at Lacombe but next year they will have two others. From the statistics of the experiments made it is proved that a packer will pay for itself in a very short time. In tests made in 1908 there was an increase of 15 bushels 30 lbs on packed land over unpacked land and as the packing can be done at a cost of about 12 cents per acre for labor the advantage is obvious. He then spoke of the trials he had made in light and heavy seeding. Recently there has been a good many advocate for light seeding in semi-arid districts, but his experiments went to prove that in our district light seeding leads to light crops every time and he strongly advised heavy seeding. Not necessarily so heavy as the heaviest tests made at Lacombe but it is well to err on the heavy side. The following are some of the results of the tests.

Marquis Wheat

weight of seed sown per acre	days coming to maturity	weight per acre
¾ bushel	136	43 bu 10lbs
1½ "	139	36 " 30 "
2¼ "	144	43 " 41 "

Barley

weight of seed sown per acre	days coming to maturity	weight per acre
1 "	141	48 " 21 "
2 "	132	44 " [illegible] "
3 "	128	[illegible] " 20 "

Mensury Barley

weight of seed sown per acre	days coming to maturity	weight per acre
1 "	128	[illegible] " [illegible] "
3 "	119	[illegible] " [illegible] "

It will be noticed from the above tests that the heavy sowings are not only heavier crops but also considerably earlier in coming to maturity. Mr. Hutton advised all stock keepers to grow Alfalfa. Speaking of the importance of inoculating the soil for this he said that inoculated soil yielded a crop of 7200 lbs per acre against 3630 from land that had not been inoculated. Sow Alfalfa about 1st June. The meeting closed with hearty vote of thanks to the lecturers.

Mrs. E. Lee, and Master O. [illegible] left on Monday night on a week's visit to friends in Vegreville.

In this way may be explained the fact that the hawk that breeds in Eastern Siberia and Manchuria passes the winter in India and South Africa. Likewise wander the hoopoe and the crook-billed strand-snipe to Madagascar, while both are unknown in Africa south of the equator. They follow the long chain of islands along which the migration of their ancestors toward the southwest occurred, and we can assume nothing other than that this migration was effected along a northern territorial connection, it may be by way of Syria and Arabia, along the eastern coast of the black continent, or perhaps along the chain of islands, which, as relics of a former continent, might have been present in far greater numbers in the past than at the present day. It is, therefore, a valid conclusion that in the course of time the flight overland, over a path of bridges of land, has become a migration across the ocean. The birds, however, did not choose the bridges of land especially to avoid passage across sea and ocean, rather their path of migration was the result of the fact that the former territorial connection afforded them the sole possibility of scattering themselves toward the north or of a retreat to the south. Their lines of passage of the present day, consequently, are nothing other than the stupendously old paths which the birds have followed from time immemorial.

FITTING HOGS FOR THE SHOW RING

By the time this appears in print the summer and fall fairs will all be over, and the wise exhibitor will have made plans for next season's shows. Some, no doubt, will say, "Why that fellow is taking time by the forelock." But just let these kind of exhibitors think on and forget to look forward to the next year's show, then let them try and beat the fellow that begins to prepare for next year as soon as this year's show is over.

The latter's ribbons will help sell his surplus stock and the former will have to use all kinds of talk to sell his.

Now is the time to pick your next year's yearlings and the sow that you want to breed for the sow and litter class, also the sow that is the best prospect to raise the calendar year pigs. You may leave such matters to luck or chance, but life is too short to take such fellows in as partners. Look back and see where your herd was weak this year and try and strengthen every entry you have had, and double so in the weak parts.

[illegible]

...States, an instance of this kind came under my observation. This judge was a breeder of Chester Whites, and when he tied the ribbons on the Poland Chinas he failed so utterly and the dissatisfaction was so great and caused so much comment that the matter was taken up by the American Poland China Record Association at their next meeting. As a result of their discussion, a number of names of capable breeders were recommended who it was thought would do the work right. Nearly all the large fairs and the International at Chicago selected their Poland China judges from this list. I need not assure you that every exhibitor went home from the show well satisfied—that is a self-evident fact. I suggest that if the fair associations will get a Berkshire breeder to judge the Berks, and the other breeds the same, and announce the name in their prize list, their exhibits will be larger and they will find that one great cause of so much dissatisfaction will be removed. If such a method is too expensive then why not get a competent professor from one of the agricultural colleges. He will be unbiased, and might make the awards to all breeds. Perhaps he could judge some of the other live stock, which would save quite an item in expense. My experience in mixing with managers of fair associations is that they they all want to do the right thing at the right time. So I think it is up to the exhibitors to let their wants be known before the prize lists are issued.

THE JERSEY AS A FAMILY COW

Her past history, the circumstances that have controlled her evolution, her inborn characteristics, her temperament, her dairy utility, and her conformation and appearance, all combine to render the Jersey the ideal family cow.

On her native island the Jersey has been developed in an intimate domestic environment on the farms of small peasant proprietors. The intensive farming practised on the island of Jersey has necessitated the tethering of the cattle while in pasture, and they are housed at night. They have been treated almost as members of the family. This frequent handling and close association with her owners have developed in the Jersey a marked gentleness and docility of disposition.

Cows giving rich milk have been continuously selected on the island of Jersey as breeders and the Jersey has been famous for two hundred years as a large butter producer. The ability to yield milk containing a high percentage of butter fat has thus far become a fixed characteristic of the race, and its further development by American breeders has added to this inborn habit the ability to produce a large quantity of milk so that the breed is much sought after for the business dairy.

The large milk production is due more to the persistency with which the Jersey maintains her milk flow throughout the year than to heavy milking while fresh. As an illustration of this characteristic, the work of a certain Jersey cow under authenticated test for a year shows a yield of 1,010 pounds of milk the first month after freshening gradually diminishing to a yield of [illegible]

No Liniment Like "Nerviline"

Fifty Years' Use Proves It The Strongest, Safest, Best

1,000,000 Bottles Sold Annually

The unexampled success of "Nerviline" is due to the fact that it is five times stronger, three times more penetrating, more pain-relieving than any other liniment.

One million bottles used every year—think what this means! Surely stronger proof is not possible that Nerviline is a trusty liniment, a household remedy upon which mothers can depend in case of accident or sudden sickness. Scarcely an ache or a pain that Nerviline won't cure—among the hundreds of ailments for which it is guaranteed are the following:—

Headache	Neuralgia
Sciatica	Rheumatism
Lumbago	Chest Colds
Sore Back	Toothache
Earache	Cramps
Diarrhoea	Bowel Disorders

Doctors will tell you that nothing but the purest and most healing antiseptic drugs are used in Nerviline—that's why it is so safe for general family use, for the baby as well as the parent. If you haven't tried Nerviline, do so now—your neighbors are almost sure to know of its manifold merits and uses.

Refuse any substitute for Nerviline, sold the world over in two sizes, 50c and 25c., all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A S the train bounded northwards to Edinburgh the Englishman in the corner felt first in one pocket and then in another for something. What ever it was, he could not find it. Leaning towards the Scot sitting opposite him, he said

"Excuse me, but could you oblige me with a match?"

Sandy glowered a moment over the top of his newspaper at him, and said

"Maist'ainly, sir."

The Englishman put the match on the seat beside him, and drew forth his pipe and tobacco pouch. A look of distress came over his features, as he remarked sadly

"I have no tobacco!"

Sandy reached over to the match, and said

"Ah, mon, ye'll no need the match."

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

THIS season special attention is paid to the reception gowns and to the theatre and restaurant gowns, and already there are exhibited many different models which almost without exception are extremely attractive. Novelty is demanded in the general style as well as in the combinations of color and material, and fortunately novelty does not mean, as it too often does, eccentricity. On the contrary, the newest models are far more conservative than any heretofore displayed.

One of the marked features of the theatre and restaurant gown is the fur and velvet trimmings used with lace and chiffon. There is something delightfully incongruous about fur and lace that is always attractive, and as they are now combined it is really almost irresistible. White gowns have not been too popular of late—that is, the all white gowns—but suddenly they have been restored to favor and now trimmed with fur, preferably sable or ermine, are destined to receive universal approval. White lace combined with chiffon or net and trimmed with bands of ermine is smart and effective, while voile de soie embroidered with silk and also with bands of ermine is most becoming.

The fashion for short skirts continues to be decreed, and even the most expensive materials are made in this style, but that the fashion will last is not to be too strongly relied upon. Dressmakers have reached a marvelous proficiency in their art when they can turn out short skirted gowns made on such charming lines as are to be seen to-day, but the smartest short skirt ever made lacks the grace and charm of one that has a train, even though it be merely a short one.

Flounced skirts of lace and chiffon are on the old picture order, with a narrow edge of ermine heading each flounce, and the long coat is edged with ermine to match. The body of the gown, coat and skirt is of the chiffon or voile de soie...

To the Zam-Buk Co.

Dear Sirs,—I have found Zam-Buk most valuable for healing cuts and abrasions, while for the relief of skin irritation it is invaluable. Yours faithfully, (Signed) RODNEY M. LLOYD, Admiral.

Praises Zam-Buk

How It Healed a Terrible Burn.

From top to bottom of the great British naval ladder Zam-Buk is known and used. Admiral and stoker alike have proved its value, as the foregoing and the following show.

Stoker Kingsnorth, of H. M. First Class Cruiser "Cochrane," says:—"One day I slipped and fell with my arm on an exhaust steam pipe, which fairly frizzled the skin. At once the ship's surgeon dressed my arm, but from the first, the burns took the wrong way, owing to a lot of coal dust and dirt from the pipe having got embedded in the flesh and setting up blood-poison. A large scab appeared, and from underneath the festering flesh matter oozed out. I was in fearful pain and didn't know how to get ease.

"For weeks I remained under treatment, but the ordinary ointments proved no good for my arm. Indeed, I got worse, and I became alarmed at the spreading of the poison. I therefore obtained a supply of Zam-Buk and almost as soon as this was applied I got ease. From the very first application, healing commenced, and a few boxes of Zam-Buk healed my wound completely."

No matter in what occupation or stage of life you may be, for skin injuries and diseases of all kinds you will find Zam-Buk is the latest and best in scientific healing. That is why it is so popular to-day. Mothers should see that it is always handy in the home.

It is a proved cure for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, ringworm, poisoned wounds, tetter, itch, bad leg, varicose ulcers, suppurating wounds, cold sores, chapped hands, babies' sores, inflamed patches, etc. Zam-Buk is also a specific for piles. All druggists and stores at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse all substitutes and harmful imitations.

No matter how deep rooted the corn or wart may be, it must yield to Holloway's Corn Cure if used as directed.

INWARD CLEANING

No greater mistake than to imagine that irregularity is a sign of good health—it is no advantage, but if your skin is murky and your spirits dull, it is the surest sign that nature is lagging a little. Now by lagging is meant that the liver is a little lazy—the kidneys weak—the stomach failing just a little in its work. It may be a little of all three.

Just one remedy—toward commencing with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. This removes, so to speak, a cobweb here and there, a visible sign of careless inward house cleaning.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills insure beauty, give a dainty complexion, act upon the skin, upon your spirits. Some will ask, How do Dr. Hamilton's Pills act? Why mildly of course but very effectively upon that great trio of health, the stomach, liver and kidneys.

To get that robust hearty health, to have the spirits of a girl or a lad, feel always at your best, use and regulate your system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Thousands find them good—so will you—refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

SHE: "Father believes in the pleasures of anticipation."

He: "Do you agree with him?"

She: "Oh, yes, indeed. In the summer he promises to buy me a sealskin coat the following winter if I'll give up going to the seaside, and in the winter he promises to send me to the seaside the following summer if I give up the sealskin coat. So, you see, I am always happy."

THE following testimonial was given to a servant girl:

"This is to certify that the bearer has been in my service one year less eleven months. During this time I found her to be diligent at the back door, temperate at her work, prompt at excuses, amiable towards young gentlemen, faithful to her sweethearts, and honest when everything was safe under lock and key."

These white corpuscles eat any germ of disease that gains an entrance to the body, when they're in large enough numbers and sufficiently strong.

When they're not sufficiently strong, the disease germs devour them and disease holds the body.

Now we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us and we'll give your druggist an order (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

COUPON No. 95

The Sea Serpent of Brockton Point

THERE is one vice that is absolutely unknown to the red man; he was born without it, and amongst all the regrettable things he has learned from the white races, this at least he has never acquired—that is, the vice of avarice. That the Indian looks upon greed of gain, miserliness, avariciousness and wealth accumulated above the head of his poorer neighbor as one of the lowest degradations he can fall to, is perhaps more aptly illustrated in this legend than anything I could quote to demonstrate his horror of what he calls "the white man's unkindness." In a very wide and varied experience with many tribes, I have yet to find even one instance of avarice, and I have encountered but one single case of a "stingy Indian," and this man was so marked amongst his fellows that at mention of his name his tribespeople jeered, and would remark contemptuously that he was like a white man, who hated to share his money and his possessions. All red races are born socialists, and most tribes carry out their communistic ideas to the letter.

Amongst the Iroquois it is considered disgraceful to have food if your neighbor has none. To be a creditable member of the nation you must divide your possessions with your less fortunate fellows. I find it much the same amongst the Coast Indians, and though they are less bitter in their hatred of the extremes of wealth and poverty than are the Eastern tribes, still the very fact that they have preserved this legend, in which they liken avarice to a slimy sea-serpent, shows the trend of their ideas; shows, too, that an Indian is an Indian, no matter what his tribe, shows that he cannot or will not hoard money; shows that his native morals demand that the spirit of greed must be strangled at all cost.

The chief and I had sat long over ...

... waters, one hideous head rested on the bluffs at Brockton Point, the other rested on a group of rocks, just below Mission, at the western edge of North Vancouver. If you care to go there some day I will show you the hollow in one great stone where that head lay. The tribespeople were stunned with horror. They loathed the creature, they hated it, they feared it. Day after day it lay there, its monstrous heads lifted out of the waters, its mile-long body blocking all entrance from the Narrows, all outlet from the North Arm. The chiefs made council, the medicine men danced and chanted, but the salt-chuck oluk never moved, it could not move, for it was the hated token of what now rules the white man's world—greed and love of chickamin. No one can ever move the love of chickamin from the white man's heart; no one can ever make him divide all with the poor. But after the chiefs and medicine men had done all in their power, and still the salt-chuck oluk lay across the waters, a handsome boy of 16 approached them and reminded them of the words of the Saghalie Tyee, 'That he who pierced the monster's heart would kill the disease of greed forever amongst his people.'

"'Let me try to find this evil heart, O great men of my tribe,' he cried. 'Let me war upon this creature, let me try to rid my people of this pestilence.'

The boy was brave and very beautiful; his tribes-people called him the Tenas Tyee (Little Chief), and they loved him. Of all his wealth of fish and furs, of game and hyiu ... (large shell money), he gave to the boys who had none. He hunted food for the old people, he tanned skins and furs for those whose feet were feeble, whose eyes were fading, whose blood ran thin with age.

... the evil, selfish heart; but on the fifth morning they saw him rise out of the sea, climb to the summit of Prospect Point and greet the rising sun with outstretched arms.

"Weeks and months went by, still the Tenas Tyee would swim daily, searching for that heart of greed—and each morning the sunrise glinted on his slender young copper-colored body as he stood with outstretched arms at the tip of Prospect Point greeting the coming day, and then plunging from the summit into the sea.

And at his home on the North Shore his mother dressed his bed with fresh furs each morning. The seasons drifted by, winter followed summer, summer followed winter. But it was four years before the Tenas Tyee found the centre of the great salt-chuck oluk, and plunged his hunting knife into its evil heart. In its death agony it writhed through the Narrows leaving a trail of blackness on the waters, its huge body began to shrink; it became dwarfed and withered until nothing but the bones of its back remained, and they, sea-bleached and lifeless, soon sank to the bed of the ocean leagues off from the rim of land. But as the Tenas Tyee swam homeward, and his clean young body crossed through the black stain left by the serpent, the waters became clear and blue, and sparkling. He had overcome even the trail of the salt chuck oluk.

"When at last he stood in the doorway of his home he said:

"'My mother, I would not have killed the monster of greed amongst my people had you not helped me by keeping one place for me at home fresh and clean for my return.'

"She looked at him as only mothers look. 'Each day these four years, fresh furs have I laid for your bed. Sleep now and rest, oh, my Tenas Tyee,'" she said.

The chief unfolded his arms and his voice took another tone, as he asked: "What do you call that story—a legend?"

"The white people would call it an allegory," I answered. He shook his head. "No savvy," he smiled. I explained as simply as possible and with his customary alertness he immediately understood. "That's what we say it means ..."

LOCAL NEWS.

A new blacksmith shop has opened up for business near Alberta Ave. and First St. north.

Practices for the annual Xmas entertainment of the Presbyterian church are now in full progress. The date is Dec. 20th.

The adv. of the new "City Livery" appears in this issue of the Standard. Look it up and call around and get acquainted.

Jos. McKone was successful in his recent hunting trip north, returning to town with a large moose.

Messrs. Stone & Davis unloaded their recently acquired diamond well drilling outfit this week and expect to undertake a number of contracts this winter.

The drop in the mercury Tuesday to around the zero mark has given a marked impetus to the coal trade. Local dealers report heavy deliveries.

The town sale of stock Saturday went off successfully good prices being realized. Spring calves brought from $12 to $14 each.

Messrs. A. Gilde and H. A. Collins were passengers Tuesday night for England. Mr Collins, we understand goes on government business.

Councillors Hayward and Cooper have decided on the location of the third of the three new electric lights, and have had the same placed at the south-west corner of Main street and Alberta Ave, just across from the Bank of Commerce.

While returning home from south of the track one evening last week, with his gasoline sawing outfit, C. M. Edwards had the misfortune to have a smash-up at the railway crossing which was very dark at the time the electric light placed there being out. The outfit was overturned, the owner thrown and the horses mixed up in the wreck. As a result the machine was rendered hors de combat for several days. When finally reinstated, the condition of the Vermilion labor market was amply demonstrated, by the fact that Mr. Edwards was unable to procure a man as an assistant, and those desirous of having their wood sawn had to turn in and shove up the poles.

WANTED—Work of any kind for all or part of the winter. Wages arranged with employer. Gilbert Wetter, Irvinville P. O. 28 29

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets do not sicken or gripe, and may be taken with perfect safety by the most delicate woman or the youngest child. The old and feeble will also find them a most suitable remedy for aiding and strengthening their weakened digestion and for regulating the bowels. For sale by Fred C. Long, Druggist.

Mr. Fishbourne left Monday evening on a trip to England.

Mr. J. Brown of Cummings was in town Saturday.

A sawing outfit is working north of town and has large contracts with a number of farmers.

Mr. Algott of Landonville has put on a sawmill, and is turning out square timber and lumber.

H. M. Jones, postmaster at Ethelwyn drew a load of live pork to W. J. Rutherford's slaughterhouse on the 24th.

Next Monday, December 5th, is nomination day. For the council, nominations will be received for Mayor and three councillors. Three members are to be elected on the School Board.

Thos. Caines, and son, of Auburndale paid a business visit to Vermilion on the 26th. Mr. Caines is an old-timer in Vermilion and notices a marked change here since his last visit.

Mr and Mrs. Mat. Omerod of Alandale leave in a few weeks for their old home in Northern Wisconsin. They will probably make a two months stay, returning here sometime in February. This will make the first return to the old home for Mr. and Mrs. Omerod, in over 20 years.

A bumper house greeted the appearance of the Royal Welsh ladies choir in Alexandra Hall Thursday night last. Numerous were the congratulations extended to C. E. Slater in giving the public the privilege of enjoying so delightful a treat. The Choir came direct from Edmonton where they appeared the previous evening.

Look Out for the Grand Bachelors Ball Friday Dec. 2nd. The best dance of the season. Jack Collin's orchestra in attendance.

R. C. Hartley of Pincher Creek, brother of Principal Hartley, is in town with a view to locating here. Mr. Hartley was formerly in the Bank of Hamilton, but owing to ill health was advised to engage in an open air avocation. He has been engaged in ranching in the southern part of the province and we trust to see him locate here.

A box social will be given in 18 52-6 church on Friday evening Dec. 9th. A programme will be rendered. All ladies attending will please bring boxes, for which gentlemen will have the privilege of paying the nominal price of 75 cents. For any who may not be successful in securing a fair lady, boxes will be provided for the sum of thirty-five cents. Come one and all and have a pleasant evening.

A Slight Misunderstanding

A lady staying in a hotel was frightened by a noise like that of a person running about in a room over the one she occupied.

The noise went on at intervals for two nights, and then changed, as if the occupant on the floor above had gone mad and was skipping about. The lady did not believe in ghosts, but she was afraid of them so she asked the proprietor to investigate the mystery.

It was a sick foreigner obeying the imperfectly understood directions of an English medical man 'Take the medicine two nights running, then skip a night.

The quicker a cold is gotten rid of the less the danger from pneumonia and other serious diseases. Mr B. W. L. Hall, of Waverly, Va., says: "I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by Fred C. Long, Druggist.

The Vanishing Smuggler

By STEPHEN CHALMERS

Copyright, 1909, by Edward J. Clode.

Grand to the Rescue

"Is the young man known as Smuggle-ovie in court? Stand up and, in the name of God, I adjure you to speak the truth!"

"Yes, sir! In the name of God and manhood, I'll tell the whole truth, and nothing but the truth!" said Smuggle-ovie, standing up by the table and raising his hand.

And he told it, beginning at the beginning when Giles Scrymegeour fed him on bread and water, because "he said he took me out of the workhouse." He told how he had been made a smuggler, and how he had been saved by the master of the Thistle Down from being [illegible]

[illegible]

... that they had taken the barrel containing Horsecraft's body aboard the schooner, but denied that either he or any man of the schooner with the exception of the Red Mole and Archibald had [illegible] that it contained anything but whisky.

[illegible]

... turn over a page and stop smuggling, for his daughter's sake. He had been forced into this last business by Giles Scrymegeour, who had threatened to tell [illegible] that he was a smuggler [illegible] lodge, but only by what the girl's father had told him in the presence of Giles Scrymegeour and several of the Thistle Down's men.

The dominie, at this point, whispered to one of the villagers, who promptly tiptoed out of the room.

[illegible] the Thistle Down prior to the finding of the body. There was hardly a dry eye in court when Smuggle-ovie, in a voice and manner which betrayed [illegible] the night the Thistle Down sailed half a hundred barrels came from the Cut Home Inn, which, as everybody knows, is run by this red-haired man."

[illegible]

"Thank you," said the dominie. "I think it should be easy to prove where the barrel came from. The evidence of the lieutenant, coupled with the evidence of the crew of the Thistle Down——"

"Why should it?" Giles Scrymegeour suddenly squeaked. "Why should it prove anything? And what have I got to do with that, anyway? The whole bang ing o' them is conspirin' agin Baldy Curran. He says he saw them do it. Is not that enough?"

"Pardon me," said the dominie sweetly, "I had quite forgotten that [illegible]

[illegible]

... town in search of a friendly face. There was not one, but there was also none that he saw any logical reason to fear greatly.

They were smugglers all of them and he had taken care to conduct his affairs with a view to wriggling out [illegible] The smuggling [illegible] was not serious, to his mind. [illegible] was a merchant, he assured himself, [illegible] there was nothing wrong in [illegible] a little profit when it came his way. What had he to do with the Thistle Down and its comings and goings, save to buy what was offered him and pay the price? He was no keeper of other folk's consciences. He was safe. He was safe, so long as the Red Mole and Archibald stood by him. And they dared not speak, or their own necks would stiffen in a rope.

Of course, it was a great pity that the body had not been landed in England, for then it might never have been traced back, and if it had been—why, then, it came from a smuggler ship whose captain was the notorious Heather Bloom. Thus did Scryme could have wriggled out quite easily. And, [illegible]

[illegible]

"Heather Bloom's Inn. A conspiracy, I tell ye!"

"Don't listen to that shrimp!" cried Smuggle-ovie, jumping to his feet. "I'll tell ye what she was doing there."

Grand cast a small glance at Smuggle-ovie, whether of reproach or gratitude, it would be hard to say. Smuggle-ovie replied with a flash of determination, and spoke up. When the truth was out, he sat down, very red in the face, and studied the toes of his sea boots. The dominie nodded his head approvingly.

"It was a brave man who spoke that confession," he said. "I believe every word of it."

Grand resumed her narrative.

"Afterward they carried the lieutenant [illegible]

[illegible]

... the door. The Red Mole and that other man with him were there. I remember that distinctly, because the others had a quarrel with them."

GUN RUNNING FOR A LIVING

Any amount of excellent, second hand military rifles can be purchased in Great Britain for about a pound apiece, in lots of hundreds or thousands.

Not long ago, a London firm had for sale a million brand new, single shot rifles in perfect condition. These belonged to a certain small European state, which was re-arming its forces, and was ready to get rid of the obsolete weapons for a song to anyone who would take them out of the country. A million rifles with almost unlimited ammunition would be a serious matter if they happened to fall into the hands of revolutionaries.

Now, these rifles which can be purchased so cheaply in England are worth from five to ten times their original price in many parts of Asia and Africa. The hill tribes on the Indian frontier think so highly of rifles that they will risk their lives creeping into British frontier posts by night in order to steal weapons from the racks. The average Pathan will readily give all that he possesses for a modern rifle and a small stock of ammunition.

The Arab tribes and the nomadic [illegible]

[illegible]

Three years ago, there took place a most amazing tragedy which proves the risks incurred by gun runners.

A three masted ship arrived off Tunis, and began unloading cargo into a dhow (native boat). Some French officers, armed with powerful telescopes, spotted the cargo to be rifles and cases of cartridges. The vessel flew no flag, and a canvas screen hid her name.

The French authorities sent out by night a number of armed boats which surrounded the vessel, and waited till dawn to board. Suddenly came a terrible explosion. The spot where the smuggler had been lying was hidden by a cloud of smoke. When it blew away the vessel had disappeared. Her captain, seeing himself outnumbered, had fired the cargo, consisting of five hundred barrels of powder, and blown himself, his ship, and the whole of his crew to destruction.

AIRSHIPS BIGGER THAN DREADNOUGHTS

THE new airship which is being built for the British navy at Barrow in Furness, and which is now practically completed, is by far the largest, swiftest, and most powerful aerial craft [illegible]

[illegible]

... thirty feet less than that of the "Dreadnought's," so that the latest monster of the air will be slenderer than the newest monster of the sea.

Her lifting capacity is reckoned in terms of tons, and her immensely powerful engines will, it is confidently predicted, drive her through the air at a speed hitherto undreamt of by designers of dirigibles.

AN old man, who seeks fame by proxy, is James Mitchell, of Arrow Lake, Man., the inventor of a lifeboat that he wants tested. [illegible]

MOTORING NOTES

IN scraping gear set bearing it should be done with half round or triangular tools made for the purpose. The journal is smeared thinly and evenly with red lead mixed with oil and is turned in the bushing to show the high spots by contact. The high spots are scraped down and the process repeated by trial and error till the journal has a fair bearing all over. At this time it must, of course, run true in the bearing at the other end. When the work is done the journal must turn without binding when the other half of the bearing is bolted down solidly, with its edges against the shims if they are used. Of course, the shims must be divided equally between the two edges to avoid distortion of the bearing cap. A micrometer, if you have one, is the best means of equalizing the shims. Before the shaft is finally assembled it must be oiled, and it is well to rub a little graphite over the surfaces of the bushings. As the utmost care in scraping will not prevent high spots and as these high spots will wear down in the first [illegible], it is proper to set up the bearing with a just perceptible tightness—not too much or the bearing will cut—and to feed somewhat thinner oil than usual freely for the first 50 or 100 miles. It is well also to add half a teaspoonful of fine flake graphite to each quart of oil.

... to every conceivable test around Detroit and Michigan. Sand hills had been negotiated and all the other customary stunts had been successfully done. Apparently the car was all right, but harder tests had to be given it to satisfy its sponsors, so with Messrs. F. H. Trego and William H. McCulla, two technical experts, the car was sent to Pennsylvania.

Trego and McCulla were told to smash the car if they could without running into telegraph poles or water plugs. Hudson dealers in the various surrounding towns assembled to see how the car would perform. If automobile buyers were as hard to convince as these experts, it would take about a week of continuous demonstrating to sell a car. Mr. Trego and Mr. McCulla, who did the driving, made mountaineers of themselves. They were ordered to climb about every road in the Alleghanies and haul as many dealers as they could get into the car. Driver McCulla, who was once a tester for the Darracq and Mercedes, was not new at the job of trying to wear out a motor car.

"One of the funniest things that happened on the trip," said Mr. McCulla, "was after we had hauled the Somerset Pa., dealer up over the mountain range, a fierce grade for seven miles. We had five passengers in the car and went along on second speed. After we had [illegible]

Gas Distended His Stomach

Caused Palpitation and Prevented Sleep. When Health Was Gone, Cure Followed Use of "Nerviline."

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well known boot and shoe traveller of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would waken with a start and find my heart jumping like a thumping machine. This was caused by gas on my stomach pressing against my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the travelling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact, there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

PLANNING the winter outfit is a task for which there can be no hard and fast rules laid down. So much depends upon where and how the winter is to be spent, whether social life is to be all important, whether there is to be a succession of entertainments given and attended, or whether merely the customary round is to be adhered to. The woman who goes out constantly and also gives many evening entertainments requires many more gowns than when one or two dinners a week and no dances comprise the list of festivities.

There are one or two statements hitherto accepted as facts which this year will have to be done away with—that it is necessary to have only one or two well made and becoming gowns in order to be satisfactorily gowned, for the newest fashions are too distinctive and pronounced to be worn an indefinite number of times, and as for changing them in any way, retrimming or redraping, it is almost impossible. The radical change of style since last winter has affected all evening gowns as much as the street gowns, and this is quite unusual, for as a rule, while there are always changes as to material, trimming and general effect from year to year, there [illegible]

... and in a diagonal line across the front of the skirt is a popular method of trimming, and when, as is so often seen, the skirt is cut open at the side, showing an under skirt of another material, this embroidery finishing the upper skirt adds greatly to its beauty. Often the design of the brocade is worked out in embroidery of heavy silk or of crystal beads, and this is most effective, for it does not break into the design as do the bands of embroidered passementerie. All these small or apparently small, details count for so much in the finish of the modern evening gown that it is worth while studying them carefully.

Veiled effects are still fashionable, but the evening gowns are now more often veiled with embroidered lace and net, the plain veiling of voile de soie or mousseline de soie used as been so utilized for less elaborate gowns as to make it seem hardly appropriate for the more costly ones. It seems quite like vandalism to embroider the beautiful laces and lace nets that are now used for the veiling, but only the finest of hand work is thought possible, and it is contended that outlining the pattern with crystal, pearl or even jet beads merely makes the design more effective. Certainly for those who love to work in beautiful fabrics Dame Fashion has this year provided all that could be desired, for the brocades, satin, velvet or crepe, the exquisite laces and the hand embroidery are all of the most costly description, and there is no fixed rule as to what colors and materials are to be combined, so that it is really a matter of taste as to what shall be chosen.

Artificial flowers play an important part in evening dress this season, and many of the smartest gowns have the waists so fashioned that the flowers are part of the trimming and so arranged that they can be changed [illegible] blue satin evening gown trimmed with [illegible] look half [illegible] velvet roses with green leaves placed in the front of the waist just where the bands of lace are crossed. A yellow and white brocade gown would lack color and smartness were it not for the spray of yellow roses, shading to deepest orange, that is placed in the folds of brocade that cross above the high girdle. Artificial flowers have reached a perfection of manufacture that makes them appropriate as a trimming or finish to the most elaborate of gowns, and [illegible] ferable to the ornaments of [illegible] popular for so long. All kinds of flowers [illegible] and many unknown, are wonderfully copied—gardenias, hydrangeas, calla lilies, orchids and roses of every shade being the favorites. They are made of silk, satin, or velvet, and the number that is included in the provision for the winter season is somewhat overwhelming. [illegible]

Oddly enough there are dressmakers who know how a gown should be cut to show to the best possible advantage the figure, and yet who do not in the least understand the secret of a graceful and at the same time a smart gown. [illegible]

THE WIFE BLEACHED HER HAIR

In Spite of the Husband's Protests in the Latest Slang, She Used Peroxide—But He Got Even

THE wife of a young business man became dissatisfied, not long ago, with the shade of her hair.

... dreaming of, anyhow?"

"Just this," she replied. "Yellow hair would just suit me. I've always been crazy about light hair, and plenty of good people are doing theirs over nowadays."

"Well, I'll tell you one thing," he retorted, [illegible] "if you do it I'll bet me out. It'll be the finish. I'll—"

"But, Jim"—and she came over to the arm of his chair—"I'm just crazy to see how 'twould look."

"Nope, it don't go. Not!" was Jim's retort. [illegible]

WHY SUFFER FROM PILES?

Zam-Buk Gives Certain Ease

Friction on veins (the hemorrhoid veins) that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of people have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others? Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from the use of Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief; as I continued it and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 143-145 St. Joseph Street, St. Roch, Quebec, P.Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles."

... need be done ... agricultural. Satisfactory ... ditions are with the farmer, there is much yet to be done before he has reached the maximum of production and the best quality of what he produces. There are many things the government, and those who are gathered at Ottawa can do to help the farmers of Canada. The farmers' interests are paramount, not because of the farmer himself, but that upon the success of the farmers calling depends in such a large measure the prosperity of the country as a whole. Put thus broadly, no government in an agricultural country like this can afford to ignore the claims of agriculture. Much has been accomplished, but we say it advisedly, agriculture in Canada has only made a good beginning in what it is capable of doing in building up the country. We are only learning what our possibilities are, and everything a government can do should be done to help the Canadian farmer.—Canadian Farm.

FARM WEEDS OF CANADA

A revised and enlarged edition of "Farm Weeds" has been prepared and published by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, to meet the urgent requests from individuals who desire this book for their personal use. The expense entailed in issuing this book precludes it from free distribution. The nominal price fixed ... will restrict its distribution to those who will preserve and make proper use of it, and will meet a ... of the unusual expense incurred in its issue.

In regard to the number of weeds described, the new edition, as might be expected, surpasses the first, there being about ... as compared with 500. Some of the pages are filled up with extracts from quaint old English writers, as, for instance, the following from John Fritz-Herberts, Boke of Husbandry, 1523: "In the latter ende of May is tyme to wede thy corne. There be divers maner of wedes, as thystles, kedlokes (charlock), dockes, cocle, darnolde, gouldes, and dog fenell. The thystle is an ill wede, and there be other wedes, as ... and many other that ... be harme."

And this from Shakespeare—Richard II, Act III:

The whole land
Is full of weeds, her fairest flowers choked up,
Her fruit trees all unpruned, her hedges ruin'd,
Her knots disorder'd, and her wholesome herbs
Swarming with caterpillars.

Triple Tragedy Near Wilkie

Wilkie, Sask., Dec. 2nd—A triple tragedy occurred at section 4, township 39, range 21, west of third meridian, last Sunday night, when four young men were asphyxiated by coal gas, three of them being dead when found, the fourth being in a very weak condition. Dr. McLeary, coroner of Wilkie, was notified and went out and investigated.

On Sunday night, Norman Langhland, aged 19; John Thom, aged 27, John Borrell, aged 22, and Frank Langhland, aged 18, went to bed at eight o'clock. Before going to bed, John Thom put a scuttle of coal on the ... but neglected to open the ... and left the damper ...

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

THIS is the so-called dead season in the realm of fashion, in the showrooms of the big shops and private dressmakers. The employees in all departments are off on vacations, and apparently for just a brief space of time the all absorbing question of dress is in abeyance; but it is only a very brief space after all, and in the meantime designers are busy with the winter models so soon to be displayed to the general public, while already to a favored few is vouchsafed an occasional glimpse of what will ere long be given out for approbation or disapproval.

This is the season above all others when clothes are thoroughly enjoyed, when gowns are being worn, not being made, and when, in consequence, women are looking their very best in the fascinating gowns on which so much time, thought and, ...

Gown of Cornflower Blue Voile

... incidentally, money have been expended. ...

... ly veiled, the overdress finished merely with a wide hemstitching. The new skirts cross in front and a most popular fashion for the veiled gowns has a narrow band of embroidery outlining the two fronts. Pearl, crystal, jet or silver beads are used for this embroidery or some effective passementerie, the latter much less expensive; or a fold of satin or velvet ribbon is also effective.

One of the daintiest afternoon gowns is of palest mauve silk voile, made with coat to match. Skirt, waist and coat are accordion plaited, and skirt and coat alike are finished only with a wide hemstitching. The model is an extremely difficult one to copy, for with accordion pleats or tucks there is always danger that the figure will not look well. But this gown, made by an artist in the dressmaking profession, is so carefully and perfectly cut that the pleats merely give straight lines and make the wearer slender. The only trimming is the transparent lace yoke and collar, and perhaps a bow of real Valenciennes lace, or revers and cuffs of the finest lingerie trimmed with narrow Valenciennes. These simple gowns, with the touch of real lace and hand work, have an immense amount of style and originality, and are in delightful contrast with the too exaggerated and over-elaborate fashions that challenge attention by their eccentricity and are gaining in favor every day. They are far from cheap for as yet they require to be made by the best of work people, but it will not be long before the knowledge of how to attain the simple lines that are so becoming will be acquired, and the women of good taste are already loud in their praise of such fashion.

Striped voiles are made up in most effective gowns for afternoon entertainments and are also used for dinner and theatre gowns. The black satin stripe with a pale rose or mauve chiffon or voile is attractive in coloring, and, if not too wide a stripe, is invariably becoming. These striped materials are made up over plain color, preferably white, and are charmingly light and cool in appearance. Then for those who like the striped effects there are the soft finish taffeta silks in black satin and white. A popular model for a theatre gown is of this design, the skirt made with the material drawn across the front and laid in thin pleats at the left quite high on the skirt, the back is one double box pleat gives an exaggerated high waist effect that is softened and modified by four rhinestone buttons that hold down the pleat in the normal waist line. ...

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF VERMILION

Having decided to stand for election as mayor for the coming year I believe it only just and fair to the electorate that I should publish some of the reasons why I am opposing the present mayor. In the issue of the STANDARD of Nov. 30th a report was given of the ratepayers meeting. Being absent from town on that occasion I deem it a duty to express some opinions now which I would have expressed had I been present at that meeting. In the first place I believe the STANDARD has given undue credit to the council for the work accomplished during the past year.

What have they done? Simply carried out the plans laid by the council of 1909, or rather part of them, ... money had to be raised for public ... outside of the current year ... money had already been ... for ... improvement and sidewalk ... and the only ...

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TOWN OF VERMILION

At the request of a number of ratepayers I have accepted the nomination as councillor for the Town of Vermilion for another two years.

The Horseman

Powell, one of the younger generation of eastern Canadian reinsmen, and while Powell's experience was more or less limited, he liked the horse he was about to train, was bred right for the work, as his father, the veteran Geo. Powell, now of Belleville, Ont., is one of the most noted of Canadian horsemen.

Last year, in the fall of his four year old form, Mr. Hodgson decided to send young Joe to the races with a view of educating him in the racing game preparatory to a campaign on the ice. Consequently he was started a few times at the fall fairs in his locality, but was never asked to do his best in company. However, after returning to Orillia to prepare for the ice races, Mr. Hodgson was anxious to know just what speed the son of Joe Patchen possessed, with the result that Powell drove the young horse a half mile over the Orillia track more than a second faster than the Canadian record for pacing a half mile on a two-lap track.

Joe Patchen was not raced at all at Toronto last winter, where the ice racing season was opened, but made his first start at Lindsay, where he won, defeating the crack pacer, Flying Jib, that had performed so well at Toronto. The next week at Peterboro Joe again won, and paced a mile in 2:17¼, which stands as a world's record for a green pacer on a half mile ice track.

GRATEFUL FOR MEDICAL AID

"Though I had passed by seventieth birthday," writes H. A. Silvers from Duncan P.O., "I am painfully aware that one of the penalties of old age is the slowing down of the activities of the system. One of the most dangerous conditions of old age is constipation, an indirect cause of many sudden deaths. I have used many medicines, but none so suited to old age as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They are wonderful regulators—keep the stomach and bowels in perfect condition, prevent indigestion, biliousness, liver complaint, and constipation. I recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills because they never grip nor cause distress—just a mild tonic laxative."

By using Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly you have a guarantee of good health. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Peevish, pale, restless, and sickly children owe their condition to worms. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator will relieve them and restore health.

That Cold Room

on the side of the house where winter blasts strike hardest always has a lower temperature than the rest of the house. There are times when it is necessary to raise the temperature quickly or to keep the temperature up for a long period. That can't be done by the regular method of heating without great trouble and overheating the rest of the house. The only reliable method of heating such a room alone by other means is to use a which can be kept at full or low heat for a short or long time.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

Four quarts of oil will give a glowing heat for nine hours, without smoke or smell.

An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. Filler-cap does not screw on; but is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached by a chain and cannot get lost.

An automatic-locking flame spreader prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that it can be cleaned in an instant.

LOCAL NEWS.

D. L. Richardson paid a flying visit to Vermilion Saturday.

Mr and Mrs. Fred Ball spent the week-end in town.

Oren Coskey and H. Hinchey returned last week from an unsuccessful moose hunt in the north country.

A. Gardiner from north of Islay was in Vermilion for a load of freight, Thursday.

Mrs. W. R. Tully and infant son returned home, Sunday from a six weeks stay in Mannville.

W. J. Price, merchant of Cold Lake who has been making a lengthy visit to Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg and other points, stayed over the 1st here.

Mr Ludwig Johnson of Hopkins drew out a load of freight for the Hopkins Trading Co. on Thursday. This company has been doing sufficient business to keep at least one man freighting on the trail all the time.

Miss Eva Smith who has been with Miss E. M. Hayward for the past year, left on Wednesday on a two months visit to her parents in the Wellsdale district.

Fred Huff, of 33-7 brought a large quantity of preserved wild fruits to Vermilion on the 5th and disposed of them to the Brunswick at a good figure.

P. H. McNamara and W. McNamara of Landonville came to Vermilion for supplies Monday. They rested their teams here Tuesday and returned early Wednesday morning.

Jas. Salmer returned from Cold Lake on the 1st with the first load of fish of the season. He had about 3000 lbs of whitefish and the well known Cold lake trout, which he disposed of to the merchants around town. He had a hard trip but made very good time. The fish are in prime condition and average up well for size.

Peter Gervais who has been working on D. G. survey during the past summer returned home on Monday. He has been employed in the neighborhood of Island lake, south and east of Cold Lake. He reports this lake to be teeming with whitefish of a very superior size and quality.

At the last meeting of the Methodist Ladies Aid it was decided to establish a sewing circle to meet every second Tuesday evening, the initial meeting to take place on the 1st Tuesday in January at the home of Mrs. A. Vaughan. The plan is for each member either to take her own sewing and contribute 10c to the society or to ... for the member of the society at whose home the meeting is held ... to contribute 50c to the society for the work done.

H. Switzer is suffering from a severe attack of La Grippe.

Miss Hilda Glanville is laid up with a serious attack of Tonsilitis.

The Annual Xmas entertainment of St. Saviour's Sunday school will be held in the church on Friday Dec. 23rd.

The Methodist Sunday school will give a Xmas tree and entertainment in the church on Wednesday Dec. 28.

The W. A. of St. Saviour's church will hold a sale of work on Friday Dec. 16th. Everyone invited to attend.

R. MacDonald the C. N. R. townsite man spent Wednesday in town completing the transfer of the lots to W. N. Trimble for his new sale stable.

Frank Greensides, who has spent the past year with his father at Rosyth, Alta, returned on the fifth to spend the winter with his mother Mrs W. S. Greensides.

Walter Worden left for the East Sunday morning. He will visit Toronto, Brockville and other eastern points and will return in the course of a couple of months. It is rumored he will not return alone.

Don't forget the entertainment and box social at the church nine miles north of town 13-52-6 next Friday evening Dec. 9th. Boxes disposed of at the uniform price of 75 cents with single boxes at 35c. The Methodist choir from the town assisted by other talent from Vermilion will assist on programme.

W. N. Trimble of Islay with Mrs. Trimble and family have moved to town for the winter. They are at present staying at the Alberta but purpose moving into one of the new Stevens cottages as soon as it is ready for occupancy. Mr. Trimble has bought two lots just east of W. F. Haddats blacksmith shop on 1st St. South and proposes the immediate erection of a Sale stable on the site acquired.

Jas. Caldwell, a homesteader southwest of town had a narrow escape in a runaway accident. He was standing in his sleigh, driving across section 3-50-7. The sleigh runner struck a stone and stopped suddenly, throwing Mr. Caldwell forward along the pole. He was able to clutch this and keep himself from going under the horses. The latter plunged, kicked and ran away. He was dragged in this awkward situation for some rods ... he succeeded in reaching one of the reins and wheeling the team ... fence of W. Wood's place ... Beyond a few bruises and a ... shaking up, Mr. Caldwell escaped uninjured from what might ... have been a fatality.

The Vanishing Smuggler

By STEPHEN CHALMERS

Copyright, 1909, by Edward J. Clode.

"WHAT was the quarrel about, Miss Grant?" asked the dominie.

"About two things. First, there was a big barrel, bigger than the rest, and Smuggle-erie asked the Red Male what they meant by sending a baby in a barrel the size of a ship. That was the way he put it."

"Stop a minute, my dear," said the dominie shrewdly. "It pains me to have to ask you to look at this barrel. Never mind what is in it. Just look at the outside of the barrel, for that was all you could have seen. Is this the same barrel?"

"Yes," replied Grizel, bravely facing the barrel.

"Thank you, my child," said the dominie. "I think that will do now and you may go home to your father. I hope he is better."

"Thank you," she said. Then she burst out suddenly: "Oh, no, no! There is something else I must tell you."

"Indeed!" said the dominie, surprised.

LA MODE, taken in her most gracious spirit and afforded every opportunity of irreproachable expression, is unquestionably attractive. If the successful winter season, as prophesied, comes to pass, it will make history as one notable in every way for beautiful evening toilettes.

The picturesque high waist Empire frock is a leading note. This slim classic style finds enviable expression in both transparent stuffs and soft satins, enhanced by exquisite embroideries. There is a delicate orchidee mauve ninon arranged in double tunic form over a clinging satin skirt, each overdress outlined by a curious medieval embroidery arranged in a succession of plaques, alternately square and oblong, the former worked with closely massed gun metal beads and ribbon embroidery, and the other with a soft gold galon ribbon. Although giving the impression of weighting down the ninon, this embroidery is of scarcely any appreciable weight.

A strikingly effective alliance comprises an elephant grey ninon, veiling an underdress of pure white satin, and hemmed up at the sides to an extreme depth with black satin char-

Charlie is a strapping lad of eleven strong and fair. His mother is dead and he needs the strong guiding hand of a foster father. Under existing circumstances little Mike's mother [illegible] was quite unable to feed, clothe, educate and train a strong hungry boy of seven and a half. Mike is dark and rather good looking. He is splendid material and will make a good Canadian. Frank is four years old. His mother is dead. The lad is big for his age and fair. We are desirous of securing a good home for Frank at an early date. Then there is another Frank with brown hair and eyes, nine years of of age. He has been a fish out of water for some time. If he finds a home in which he fits in naturally and no-sense responsibilities, he should make good. These little children are heart hungry for real home life and real home love.

It will soon be Christmas. Let us hope that before the 25th of December each of these children will not only have a roomy of his own and her own but a warm fireside and foster parents who will recognize and cultivate the beauty and strength of character, the industry, in short the gamut of possibility which exists in every normal minded and normal bodied child.

The Superintendent of Neglected Children, Edmonton, will be glad to give full particulars concerning these children to prospective foster parents.

POSITIVELY CASH

[illegible] say that I have decided to run a STRICTLY CASH business on and after the 1st day of January 1911. I have, as my customers know, always sold at Cash Prices, charging no interest to those who asked for credit by so doing losing the loss and now after two years of credit business I have decided to start strictly cash as I feel that by so doing I can do better for my customers and myself by keeping a larger and more varied stock which they will find complete.

Thanking you for your patronage in the past and soliciting a continuance of the same, also wishing you one and all the compliments of the season.

HOPKINS

Miss Mary Ross has resigned her position as post mistress and J. K. Valentine is to fill the place vacated by Miss Ross.

There is a petition being circulated to have the mail come from Vermilion semi-weekly instead of weekly as heretofore.

Mr. J. W. Green returned home last week from Iowa, where he had been for the last six months acting as agent for a U. S. syndicate who are disposing of their Canadian land. We welcome him back again. He brought back horses and farm implements which seems to signify that he expects to remain with us.

The lyceum held at the Lambright home last Wed. night is reported by those present as both instructive and entertaining.

We have Fred Lampert as the champion trapper in this immediate vicinity, having captured 500 muskrat and twenty weasels. Good for Fred.

Fred Green and J. T. Mobley returned from Vermilion Thursday.

There is to be a school election Dec. 1[illegible] three trustees, and there [illegible] that it may be legal. FARMER TELLS INTERESTING STORY

Whether Sick or Well, in Good Weather or in Stormy, He is Obliged to Work Always

Market people complain about prices they have to pay for farm produce. They forget that rain or shine, warm or cold, the farmer must keep at it or else the narrow profit, his bare living, will be lost to him.

A well known Haldimand farmer, Mr. J. F. Pelletier, writes: "For nearly three years I was in poor health. A drenching storm caught me in the fields and wet me to the skin. I got home only to find I was threatened with inflammation of the bowels. I never got over it and felt weak and heavy and my system never worked quite right. But a farmer [illegible]—and I found myself going down hill with stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Failure [illegible] follow everything. I remained wretched and sick until advised to use [illegible]ton's Pills. It is not easy [illegible] the sort of feeling a sick man gets when he strikes a medicine that he can see is doing him a lot of good. I was overjoyed—Hamilton's Pills put new life into me and everything went right. Since cured with Dr. Hamilton's Pills I haven't had a single symptom of stomach, liver or kidney trouble. I am free from headaches, languor and weakness, as strong, robust as a man [illegible] be." No better medicine for general family use than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They are mild, healthful and certain to cure. Sold in yellow 25c boxes, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

[illegible] horsemen on their methods of racing. There are several reasons for this, but the principal one is that the game has been comparatively free from the evil influences of the bookmaker. Wagering has nearly all been done by the auction-pool system, which corresponds to a large extent with the mutuels. What bookmaking there has been at the harness horse meetings has been on the heats and heat betting is the one evil connected with the sport.

So the mutuel system of betting would purify the running meetings, so the same system would benefit the trotting and pacing races. All wagering in connection with the latter should be [illegible]

[illegible] proper legislation, which would legalize only the mutuel or auction systems of betting, doing away entirely with the bookmaker.

The Imperial Oil Company, Limited.

The next time you don't feel just right, let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine from your druggist to give you to cure your indisposition and prevent worse ailments.

This being ill is curious business.

It usually commences in a subtle fashion, almost unconsciously.

Yet if you do not check your illness, it grows and grows.

And one fine day you find you're sick.

The greatest scavengers of the body are the white corpuscles, or phagocytes in the blood.

These white corpuscles attack and eat up every germ of disease that invades the body.

That is when they are strong enough and in sufficient numbers.

If they're not strong enough, then they wage an unequal warfare until they are finally overcome by their more powerful enemies.

The body becomes steadily sicker and sicker until actual disease sets in.

Now we have had all sorts of so-called cures.

And a great many people have seriously endangered their health experimenting with them.

But years ago—before even science was able to tell we had the right treatment for disease viz. herbs, nature's own remedies.

Now that science can tell us so almost certainty, we know why certain herbs cure disease.

Because they strengthen and increase the white corpuscles or phagocytes.

A third of a century ago Psychine made remarkable cures.

To-day it is making remarkable cures.

In the interim, millions of bottles of Psychine have been sold.

Hundreds of thousands of people made well and kept well.

Why?

Because Psychine is largely made up of those herbs that scientists now know increase and strengthen the white corpuscles, the phagocytes.

That's why we have received hundreds of thousands of unsolicited testimonials. That's why we can afford to buy and give away hundreds of thousands of 50-cent bottles of Psychine, that's why Psychine benefits these diseases:

La Grippe	Bronchial Coughs
Bronchitis	Weak Lungs
Hemorrhages	Weak Voice
Sore Throat	Spring Weakness
Anaemia	Early Decline
Female Weakness	Catarrhal Affections
Indigestion	Catarrh of Stomach
Poor Appetite	Night Sweats
Chills and Fevers	Obstinate Coughs
Sleeplessness and Nervous Troubles	Laryngitis and Dyspepsia

After-effects of Pleurisy, Pneumonia and La Grippe.

Now we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effects of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below—mail it to us and we'll give your druggist an order (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our 30 years' experience with this splendid preparation, with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

Police-Station Nurseries

As a matter of fact—said an old New York police captain—the socialist idea of the State caring for the community's children has been established for years in this centre of capitalism. The police stations in the tenement districts are the nurseries; the policemen serve as nursemaids, that duty being one of their many odd jobs, says Harper's Weekly.

A policeman sees a little girl wandering aimlessly along the sidewalk or standing pensively in front of a bakery window. He keeps his eye on her. She meets some other children in the street. They know nothing of formalities, and in five minutes are playing as if they had known one another always. The sun sinks, the city begins to grow dim; the lights are turned on.

"Mag-gee-ee-ee!" calls a strident voice from a fifth floor window.

"Willie-ee-ee!" calls another.

The crowd scatters, leaving on the sidewalk a little girl who begins to realize that she doesn't know how to get back to her home. Her appetite asserts itself. The running away of her new-found playmates emphasizes her forlorn state. One fist goes up to her eyes, then another, and she rests her head perhaps against an undertaker's dingy, black-curtained window, sobbing vigorously.

"Where do you live, little girl?" asks the policeman as a matter of form. He knows that she is lost. Then he leads her to the precinct station, where she tells her first name, that is all she can remember. She is written down in the blotter, for instance, as Mary, aged four, lost child, blue eyes, black hair, red checked dress, button shoe on right foot, slipper on left, and so on.

Mary goes to the matron's room. If she is not called for before nine o'clock she and all the other lost and still uncalled-for children in the station are taken over to the rooms of the Children's Society. That is serious, because, once there, the society's agents may begin to investigate whether or not the child should be taken from the parents and entrusted to better guardianship.

[illegible] begin to feel at ease. Then they begin to explore regions beyond the matron's room. They venture farther and farther out, until finally they have penetrated to the back room in which the reserve policemen, waiting for emergency calls, are trying to kill time in the pleasantest ways. All lost children are welcomed there. And there they enjoy the entertainment furnished by a sort of combined vaudeville show, circus, and dime museum, all got up for their benefit. Near by restaurants, bakeries, and candy stores are their commissaries, yielding on order what the youngsters like best—except when the matron interferes in the name of physiology and hygiene.

Nor is the entertainment all one-sided. Over at the Tenderloin station the other afternoon old Sibley ranged eight or nine of the temporarily lost on a bench and asked them how they had come to be in their forlorn condition.

Stephen, five years old, said that a carriage had driven up in front of a building in his neighborhood, and that some ladies had got out of it and gone into the tenement. The carriage had excited much admiration among the boys and girls. Stephen had ridden away on it seated on the springs behind—"where the driver can't reach you with his whip." He had often made up his mind to drop off and get back into his own territory, but he had hesitated time after time for the sake of the ride, so that when he did drop to the pavement he was so far from home that he could not find his way back.

A slow-moving Italian funeral, headed by a brass band, had lured black-eyed Yetta, aged four, up and down, across and back main avenues and cross streets, until her sense of direction had become so confused that she sat down on the curbstone and cried. A policeman had brought her in.

Alice, with blue eyes, had followed a brown butterfly, blown across from New Jersey by a high wind to a wilderness of hard walls and paved streets. When she had caught the butterfly they were both lost.

Mike, aged seven, had been lost once [illegible] about ten inches in diameter and three inches thick, and came from the bottom of a merchant vessel, the Timandra, after a cruise in the Indian Ocean and Chinese waters.

The effect of a foul bottom on the horse-power required for a vessel is very marked. Vessels of the South Dakota class burn about 100 tons of coal per day when cruising with a clean bottom at 12 knots, and require about [illegible] power. The extra horse-power required for a vessel as foul as the South Dakota can only be conjectured, but quite a time before the vessels were docked, steaming trials showed that the coal consumption at 12 knots had risen from 100 to 133 tons per day and the horse power from 3,500 to 5,000. The miles per ton at this speed had dropped from 2.9 to 2.1.

Another interesting case of the effect of fouling on horse power is that of the scout cruisers which went to the west coast of Africa in March, 1909. During a stay of three weeks at Monrovia, Liberia, the bottom of the Chester became so completely covered with a growth of barnacles that the usual consumption of coal of the vessel for a speed of 13 knots produced only 9.73 knots. The propellers had also become so foul that, though the turbines expended horse-power enough to produce the usual number of revolutions for 13 knots, the resistance so increased that they could only actually turn fast enough for a speed of 1½ knots with a clean bottom. The further reduction from 12 knots to 9.73 mentioned above was caused by the resistance of the barnacles on the bottom proper. The propellers were cleaned as well as possible by divers and an increase of three-quarters of a knot was obtained.

When vessels are docked, after cleaning, the bottoms are painted first with an anti-corrosive paint to protect the steel from the effect of the salt water and with a second coat of anti-fouling to prevent adherence of animal and vegetable growth. About 250 gallons of each are required for vessels of the size of the South Dakota, and it requires about five hours for 175 men to apply it.

In addition to protection from ordinary corrosion and fouling, it is necessary to add special protection to prevent galvanic action where a brass valve opening or brass shaft housing will form a battery with the salt water and steel hull. This protection is accomplished by the use of zinc plates which will be attached in preference [illegible]

A Sure Corrective of Flatulency.—When the undigested food lies in the stomach it throws off gases causing pains and oppression in the stomach region. The belching of eructation of these gases is offensive and the only way to prevent them is to restore the stomach to proper action. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do this. Simple directions go with each packet and a course of them taken systematically is certain to effect a cure.

Last Meeting Old Council

The final regular meeting of the 1910 council was held Monday night in the council chamber, Mayor Steph- ens in the chair and Councillors Rosborough, Rutherford, Craig and Cooper present.

Before proceeding with the regular business the secy-treas. was instructed to write the Hon. A. L. Sifton, minister of Public Works and representative of this constituency, urging upon him the need of a crossing over the Grizzly Bear coulee at or near Sec 33 or 34 [illegible], and that the present time would be favorable to construct the bridge and see any necessary hauling on approaches.

The minutes of the last regular meeting and the two special meetings of the board were then read and approved.

Communications as follows were received from D. K. Adams Coal Co, Winnipeg, acknowledging receipt of order from town for car of nut coal [illegible] plant purposes, from [illegible] asking that they be advised of any farmer desiring assistance in this vicinity now or in the near future.

The resignation of Coun. Dunsmore was read by the mayor and on motion accepted.

By-law 73, appointing S. R. P. Cooper returning officer for election of councillor to replace R. G. Dunsmore, resigned, and the election of a school trustee to fill vacancy on school board to be held on Dec 27 and at election subsequent, if necessary - was read a first, second, and third time and being passed was signed, sealed and delivered by the mayor and secy-treas. and ordered engrossed by the latter.

A motion was passed ordering that the balance owed Wiebe & Son, millers, be paid after deducting the expenses of registering the mill property.

On motion, after a lengthy discussion, [illegible] Murray, amounting to $333.22 for services from 1st May 1909 to date, was ordered to be paid.

The accounts closing up the year's business were passed.

The Mayor and Councillors donated their salaries ($50.00 each) for the year to the town in trust to the Hospital Fund, already established, as [illegible].

This being the last meeting over which he would preside the Mayor briefly made some fitting references to [illegible] the earnestness evinced by the coun[illegible] to the mayor referring to his ability management and sound advice and saying that he had nothing [illegible] of the chair but [illegible] to be proud of. Councillors Cooper and Rutherford also spoke.

We call attention to the opening of WINTER TERM at the Grand Trunk Business College, Edmonton, [illegible] Jan 3rd. This college is [illegible] throughout the province as a high grade institution [illegible]

Treacher's Christmas Turkey

MR. Joseph Treacher fixed his shirt and firmly on his head, turned up the collar of his overcoat, and then opening the door, bent his umbrella from the stand and gloomily surveyed the snow outside.

The path to the gate lay thick with snow, the three sets of footmarks—those of the milkman, the postman and the baker—were being rapidly obliterated, and the smallness of the snow-flakes, the determined gusts of wind which whirled them into the heart of a scrimmage, but it thought seemed entirely disposed to remain in the throat of the portly, middle-aged gentleman about to venture into the mist and a half walk to the station.

"I wonder," he muttered, "if the milkman—came from a farm in Norfolk, or somewhere?"

At length," said Mr. Treacher, "I'll take it, get it in a bag, and carry up, and—"

He digested with bat the man put the bad news most tenderly, good for it, and then he was ready to wrestle with the situation.

It was when he was half way up the hill that he remembered his own remarks on what is called the turn, that Mr. Treacher suddenly remembered that he had no turkey for Christmas. A Christmas without turkey would be horrible, but worse than that, it would be a small story in the village, and that is a fate which he fervently wished to avoid.

There was but one thing for it, he must go on the hill and get some by the time he got home. Nothing on Christmas Eve would be found cheap, and he must get one, no matter what it cost.

Mr. Treacher was a man of his word, and it took him a little more than half an hour to get to the top of the hill, and when he reached the summit he was very hot and very angry.

He had been cheated, and he knew it, and he had allowed himself to be cheated, and he knew that also.

He had walked up the hill with the intention of buying a turkey, and he had walked down again without one.

He had been cheated by a man who was now no doubt chuckling over the success of his scheme, and he had been cheated by a man who was a stranger to him, and who, therefore, he could not punish.

Mr. Treacher was a man who loved to be revenged on those who had done him an injury, and he was determined that he would be revenged on this man, if it were possible.

He would not be cheated in this way and allow the man to escape with the money.

He would find him out, and then—

Mr. Treacher's face lit up with a sudden idea, and he began to grin from the pleasure of anticipation.

Then Mr. Treacher's eyes fell upon a turkey peacefully reposing upon the neck where a gentleman in the poultry trade, with whom he had dealt on his return, was absolutely out.

He glanced quickly up to see if his enemy was in sight, and then, feeling safe and loosed at the bird beside him. But the moment the turkey in question was upon the cart. Then, with a shout he turned him to drop his signs to the ground, and then he knew that he would be realised that he must have left the bird in the confusion of the moment.

He let down the window, allowing a quantity of cold air and snow to penetrate into the carriage, and fumbled for the address.

But soon as he fumbled, the train began to move, and a guard, one of the stern sons of the railway, and a man of strong arm pulled him back into the centre of the carriage.

"Let me go, you fool," he panted, "I've left my turkey behind!"

The gentle gentleman who was sharing his compartment looked at him with a look of astonishment, and then, with a sudden and brutality that, whilst in the ordinary way he had been wrong, was quite excusable in the circumstances, he remarked that he must have left the bird in the refreshment room

VERMILION, ALTA., DEC 21 1910

The Standard extends to its readers the heartiest wishes for "A Merry Christmas" and "A Happy New Year".

Wellsdale

Again winter has settled upon us, and while we shivered at the thought of its approach, we do enjoy it. The many beautiful scenes in our wooded north country are charming indeed. As one passes over slopes and through dales, with the trees, shrubs and long grass, the hills covered with frost, in the soft sunlight or the bright moonlight, the scenes lend enchantment and fairyland seems near, or as "Anne of Green Gables" would say, "we get such a thrill".

There have been a number of skating parties at which the young people of our district have enjoyed that favorite winter sport.

Miss Eva Smith has returned from Vermilion and will spend the winter at her home here. Her mother gave a party in honor of her birthday last Tuesday.

Mr. Leonard Knupe leaves shortly for England. We wish him a safe voyage.

Mr. F. Hardwick of Vermilion called on friends here on Sunday and Monday.

The Council of L. I. D. 27-C-4 met at the home of C. A. Hodgins on Tuesday Dec. 6th to finish the business of the year. Their ladies, who accompanied them, were the guests of Mrs. Hodgins for the day.

On Thursday Dec. 1st the people of Wellsdale had a pleasure out of the ordinary, when through the efforts of Mr. F. Lawes, pres. of our U. F. A., Mr. T. L. Swift of the Grain Grower's Grain Co. Calgary, had been secured to address us.

Mr. Swift made himself both instructive and entertaining. Valuable information and inspiration was intermingled with humour of the real Irish sort.

He dwelt largely upon the injustice the farmers and particularly the grain growers suffer from the combines of moneyed interests and also from protective tariff. The unprotected farmer is at the mercy of the elevator men, the Railways Cos., the Banks, Manufacturing Cos. and other capitalists; but the speaker showed clearly how this condition may be improved by united effort, by farmer's unions that stay united even when the other fellow offers more dollars. He laid stress upon the work of the U. F. A. and the Grain Growers Association and the need of strengthing these organizations.

The Grain Growers Grain Company to which he belonged, as a young company had made rapid progress, in face of the opposition of the elevator interests, and the work done by that farmers organization in the four short years of its existence, was but the beginning of what might be done with more complete and active union.

The condition at terminal elevators which allowed of such enormous and unfair profits to the elevators Co's. at the expense of the farmer, also the tariff on agricultural implements which made prices exorbitant, were evils which the farmer should fight and which he can only fight through organization.

Mr. Swift also gave much useful information on the grading and marketing of grain and showed how the Grain Grower's Grain Co. could benefit and assist the farmers in these [illegible] days. He recommended that a delegate be sent to Ottawa to join the large delegation who are to interview the Federal Government with regard to these and other questions of interest.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Swift for his instructive address, after which the ladies, who of course were present, served refreshments, while Mr. J. Bollington entertained with his gramophone and so a pleasant and profitable evening was ended.

At their meeting on Dec. 7th the U. F. A. elected officers and arranged to have a debate at next meeting, subject—"Resolved that grain-growing is more profitable than mixed farming."

King Edward Jots

We are nearing another milestone on the march of time. It will be well for one and all to face the close of 1910, with courage and greet 1911 with hope. The habitants of this burg extend the usual greetings to all their fellow settlers who have cast in their lot within the territory tributary to Vermilion and who are, like us, interested in the progress of the town. May their efforts in the year just ahead of us be crowned with success. May sickness or death never cross their threshold and at the close of 1911, we hope to see abundance in every cellar and granary, and also many new settlers who will add to the social life of every community.

There are many vacant claims in Alberta, left in solitude in the corners, while their late occupants are crossing the briny deep, to renew old acquaintances and greet with joy and affection the forms of relatives in the old lands, from whom they have been separated for years. We miss them from our social gathering, but the winter is even now passing rapidly and soon the lengthening of the days will constantly suggest to us the approach of spring, when the wanderers will be back with the ducks, probably bringing some with them from across the sea.

Some of our King Edward people took in the dance at Queenie Creek on Friday night. They report good music, good grub and lots of it, and altogether they had a large time.

The frost leaked out one still last night and froze up everything mighty tight. He sneaked down the valley and over the height, but his playing no one had seen. He closed up the hole where we water the cows, where crowding to drink they had had many rows. He filled up the troughs where we feed the old sows. You could easily see where he'd been. He went to the hen-house and covered the glass, with ice so blamed thick that the light couldn't pass through into the scratching pen where our brave lass, feeds dry-farming wheat to the fowls. He nipped the kids ears as they hurried to school to get there at nine just according to rule. He made no distinction both wise man and fool were thawing themselves out with howls. He threaded his way through the banks of the house and into the cellar as sly as a mouse. He nipped all the taters, which caused my old spouse to raise a blue fog in the morn. He made a hard ball of the little tree toad. He made the sleighs grind on the Government road. He piled on my whiskers an icicle load, which made my old mug look forlorn. If you think there is beauty in frost or in snow, just take a long drive when its forty below. Your frost-bitten members will cause you to know there's more poetry in by the fire. The man who is dressed up in furs a foot thick and sits in the back of the sleigh box so slick and sings of the beautiful snow, we'll say quick, he's sitting quite close to a liar.

Northern Valley

(South Hopkins)

Thirty two miles as "the Crow flies", north of Vermilion is the garden valley of Alberta, known by the non-romantic name of Northern Valley.

Lying at a right angle to, and adjoining the north Saskatchewan River, it is a longitudinal valley, drained by a useful little waterway, Snake Creek, so called because of its serpentine course.

Here is to be found a community of English-speaking people, whose progress is not excelled in the annals of pioneer farming.

Law-abiding, Hospitable, Sociable, and Industrious; the stranger going amongst them may rest assured that he will always find the "Latch-string" out.

With its well defined natural boundaries, it presents, today one of the finest rural views encountered in the West.

The settlement offers nothing of interest to either the historian or the antiquarian. It has no hoary legend as its stock in trade. It is purely present-day.

Its beginning was in the most casual and unostentatious manner.

Unpromising as the prospect may have been at the time, the opportunity and the man duly arrived. Mr. G. E. Mainwaring, a worthy son of dear old Uncle Sam, is responsible, in a very large measure, for the settling of this beautiful rural gem, barely four years ago.

Making for himself a neat little dug-out cabin, he set to work clearing and fencing his land. By this time the merits of the place were noised abroad, and land-seekers arrived from the corners of the earth, in vast numbers. Some to return disappointed, because of the distance from a Railroad, while those with better foresight remained.

"Shacks", barns and rail-fences of every conceivable design, sprang up as if by magic, and soon friend Mainwaring replaced his humble dug-out with a more pretentious edifice, a handsome two-story mansion, which now presents quite a solid mark on the landscape.

I was up in the north country, hunting big game, and stumbled upon this settlement quite by accident whilst making for the nearest light when I had lost my bearings and was overtaken by night.

While there, I enquired, of some of these "Northern Robes", the results of their farming operations during the past [illegible] greatly surprised to learn that all had had excellent returns. My informant assured me, that in spite of the phenomenally dry summer the result was equal to the best they would expect in a season with all things favorable.

Wheat yielded from twenty to thirty bushels per acre, Barley from 30 to 40 bushels, and Oats from 25 to 70 bu. per acre, all good quality.

Judging by my friends well stocked cellar, the garden had produced equally well in all branches.

Such being the case, I naturally assumed that all these people must be expert sound farmers. But I was told that there are not more than two such men in the valley. In fact, there are almost as many trades or professions represented as settlers; ranging from Preceptor to Stenographer. Nevertheless, they all, without exception, seemed to be "making things go". Worry seemed to be a minus quantity amongst them, everybody wore a smile that appeared to be able to withstand the combined effects of soap and water, and all seemed to be getting something really enjoyable out of life.

Truly a model settlement.

I also learnt that these progressive people have a proposal for a school house on its way through the necessary formalities; to be named after our present King George. I gathered from the notices posted in this connection, that a loan of two thousand dollars is to be raised for the purpose of building the school-house; so they evidently intend to do the right thing well. Such an edifice will doubtless be a great boon to the community, and will enhance the land value.

These worthy followers of the calling of Cain, appear to [illegible] atmosphere all their own, [illegible] with their sport.

A stranger going [illegible] them is suddenly awakened to a [illegible] realization of an agreeable change from the typical western settlement.

Indeed, much of the good feeling exhibited is, I think, attributable to these incomparable surroundings.

It is verily "a lovely spot, for all that life can ask, salubrious, mild."

"Nomad."

POSITIVELY CASH

To my many friends and patrons I will say that I have decided to run a STRICTLY CASH business on and after the 1st day of January 1911. I have, as my customers know, always sold at Cash Prices, charging no interest to those who asked for credit, by so doing losing the loser and now after five years of credit business I have decided to start strictly cash as I feel that by so doing I can do better for my customers and myself by keeping a larger and more varied stock which they will find complete.

Thanking you for your patronage in the past and soliciting a continuance of the same, also wishing you one and all the compliments of the season,

I remain yours respectfully
I. Winters

DIED

On December 18th., 1910, at the Misericordia Hospital, Edmonton, "Lydia", the beloved wife of Oswald Harle of Vermilion.

It was with profound sorrow that the Standard received the sad intimation as above in a letter from Edmonton, Tuesday. Three weeks ago the announcement of the marriage of the deceased and Mr. Oswald Harle was contained in this paper. Owing to the necessity for an immediate operation for appendicitis, Mrs. Harle remained in Edmonton following the wedding, to undergo the operation and was quite cheerful and bright when parting from her husband, anticipating a speedy recovery and the joy of joining him at his home here in a very short period of time. It is a more than usually sad event Mr. Harle having sent for his bride-to-be to New Zealand, and though unwell on reaching Vancouver she continued the long journey so as to arrive at Edmonton on the date she was expected by her now grief stricken and heart broken husband. As a warm personal friend we extend our heart felt sympathy to the sorrowing husband in his irreparable loss.

Every family has need of a good reliable liniment. For sprains, bruises, soreness of the muscles and rheumatic pains there is none better than Chamberlain's. Sold by Fred C. Long, Druggist.

COMMUNICATION

We do not hold ourselves responsible for opinions expressed by correspondents. Personalities will not be published.

The Editor,
Vermilion Standard,
Town

Sir: It has been brought to my attention that certain parties, better known for their ignorance than their intelligence, are busy circulating a story to the effect that Mayor Stephens, Councillor Craig and myself as Town Solicitor, "doctored" the Voters List used at the recent Municipal Election for the purpose of bettering the chances of election of Stephens and Craig, and I have no doubt there are a number of fair-minded people who are credulous enough to believe this. To clear us it should only be necessary for me to point out that such a charge, if true, would qualify Mr. Stephens, Mr. Craig and myself for a term in the penitentiary, but as this is the Christmas season I propose to use this charge for the purpose of increasing the fund which is being raised to erect a hospital in our town. My object is also to brand as a cowardly and malignant liar any person who continues to make this charge without taking up the offer which I now make.

My offer is as follows: I have deposited with the Secretary treasurer the sum of fifty dollars, to be given to the hospital fund if any person can show that Mr. Stephens, Mr. Craig or myself, jointly or severally, directly or indirectly, prevented any person from voting at the recent Municipal Election who was entitled to vote thereat. In connection with this offer I have two conditions: First; the party making the charge is to deposit fifty dollars with the Secy-treas., to be turned over to the Hospital fund if he fails to substantiate his charge. Secondly; the judges shall be named by myself. This, at first glance, seems as if I were asking too much but when I name the parties I think there will be no objection from the most ill-disposed scandal monger. The judges I propose are two of our ex mayors, Dr. Ryan and M. A. Brimacombe and our Mayor elect, R. G. Dunsmore, and any resident of the town who has not been asleep for the last few years, knows that these gentlemen and myself do not see eye to eye any more often than we have to. I am taking the liberty of mentioning their names without their consent but as they are all good sports and all interested in the Hospital fund I think I can count on them acting as judges.

This offer is open till the first of January and by that time one of two good things will have happened; either the Hospital fund will have increased by $50.00 or the deliberate malice of some lying tongue shall have been directed to some other object.

It might be advisable to explain here how my name came to be associated with the compilation of the Voter's List. On the 9th day of December, three days before the election, the Secy treas. consulted me, as Town Solicitor, as to the persons who were qualified to vote at the approaching election, there being several amendments to the Municipal Act. I made no attempt to learn who would vote for by any any decision of mine but gave my opinion to Mr. Caesar in writing and Mr. Caesar, very wisely, followed my instructions, thereby avoiding the difficulties that would have arisen had he added to his list the names of certain persons who were clamoring for a vote and who were in no way entitled to one. My letter to Mr. Caesar is on file in his office, open to the inspection of any rate-payer. I have only to add that I gave no advice to the Secy treas. except on his request, when, if the matter is of any importance, my opinion is in writing.

I trust, Mr. Editor, that your readers will pardon the rather [illegible] epithets I have made use of but I consider the occasion more than justifies them as the cowardly attack is made against me both professionally and personally and is only one of a number that have emanated from the same source and which heretofore I have ignored. This is the first occasion and I trust the last upon which I shall use your columns in connection with my personal affairs, and I hardly would have felt called upon to publish this letter had not the names of others been dragged into this matter.

Yours truly
Norman Murray.

Maritime Magistrate's Case

Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., a Justice of the Peace for the county, and a Deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick, says: "I have used Zam-Buk for piles and found it a splendid remedy. It cured me."

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from the use of Zam-Buk. Last summer I had a fever, which left me with piles. I started to use Zam-Buk, and found it gave me relief, so I continued with it. After using three or four boxes it effected a complete cure."

When the Reindeer Ran Away

(By Lois Forrester)

HELEN did not open the telegram until she had made sure that Chap was not watching her. The messenger waited in the dimly lighted hallway, his cap off, his round, boyish face alight with anticipation.

Back in the studio came Chap's rolling tones, a bit husky from the cold he had caught crossing the ferry in the storm, but still sweet and happy, with just a suggestion of a lisp. Chap was proud of that lisp. It marked an epoch in his life, when, as he had said, "a perfectly good toof dropped out." They had treated the event with the distinction it deserved, he and the girlish person he called "Muvver." They had acted quite foolishly over it, wrapped it in pink cotton and sent it off in a tiny jewelry box as a present to the father boy way out West, with a line to the effect that Chap had made it all himself, and it had taken him one and a half years to do it.

"Our rull, bruvvers, our rull! Our rull joyfullee!
Our rull the good tidings, our rull merrilee!"

Somehow the tears rose quickly to Helen's eyes as she listened, and almost blinded her as she read the message from the father boy. It was brief and most sadly to the point.

"Trains blocked by storm. Money as soon as I deliver goods at office in New York. Cheer up. Merry Christmas.
"Bob."

That was all. And it was Christmas Eve and she had just seventeen cents on hand.

"Is this message prepaid?" She looked up at the boy anxiously.

"Yessum." He grinned a bit sheepishly and handed her a little dingy card with a verse printed on it.

"Christmas is coming, turkeys are fat. Please drop a nickel in your messenger's hat."

In spite of her trouble Helen smiled and nodded. Back she went softly through the short hallway and found her purse. Five cents of the seventeen was laid in the messenger's palm and he went away whistling softly.

Chap was curled up on the window seat. Out of doors horns were blowing, bells were chiming, even the clang of the street car gongs sounded festive and unusual. Down stairs in the studio ...

... and tried to think clearly ... money in the world could not make it a merry Christmas for her. ...

"Awaiing, sonny boy?"

"Yawning. And they've got a big collie in there named Tom, and they've got the front thing out of their grate, muvver."

Chap had stopped there. There was a grate in their apartment, also, but the "front thing" was fastened in, for the radiator gave sufficient heat.

"They've got it open," Chap had continued, in a secretive way, "so HE can get in without a latch key."

"He?" Helen opened her eyes wider. Was there a mystery in the quiet, conventional studio building?

"Santa Claus, muvver," Chap had added, his blue eyes full of anticipation. "Kate, that's the littlest girl, says he always comes down their chimney."

Helen was silent, and after a pause Chap had suggested, "Don't you think we ought to take out our grate, too? He can't get through hot water pipes, can he?"

Chap's voice roused her now, as he spoke to her from the window seat.

"Muvver, can I have your latch key just for to-night? I want to tie it on the end of a thing and let it down from the window to the front door, then he can get in."

The buzzer at the hall door sounded again and Helen welcomed the interruption. It was another messenger boy. And the telegram was for Chap. She almost laughed as she read. It was so like Bob to send it to him to save the day. They looked at it together, after the messenger boy had gone she knelt beside him, with one arm holding him close to her. Chap's face was intensely serious, and well it might be, for that telegram bore amazing tidings from an important personage.

"Reindeer have run away. Be at your house as soon as I catch them.
"S. C."

"Do — do you know what that meanth?" Chap's eyes were wide and startled. "That meanth HIM! Santa Clauth!"

fore Helen, the stranger, could catch her breath, she found herself back in her own apartment, with a circle of her neighbors around her, all whispering, "Hush!"

They made her sit down on the divan and give orders. Barney and the man from upstairs who took baths every morning, set up the tree. Then the girls trimmed it, draped gold and silver ropes of glittering tinsel over its dark rich boughs, hung dangling ornaments at every tip, tied chocolate dolls and strange candy animals and dangling angels all around.

Helen felt swept off her feet with the suddenness of the change. When the tree was trimmed to the satisfaction of all they raised the windows and listened to the midnight bells pealing out their sweet old world tidings to Manhattan. The same Manhattan that had seemed to Helen so lonely, so selfish, so far away in her hour of trouble. And suddenly it came to her, as she listened and looked at the eager happy faces around her that Christmas is not a thing of ... of money, or ... It is the great gladsome spirit of good will ... that breaks down the little barriers conventionality hedges us around with.

"I guess we'd better go to the ..."

ly. There was ample excuse, he considered, for even a grown-up mother to cry. It isn't every Christmas the reindeer run away.

CELEBRATING CHRISTMAS IN ITALY

(By Lucretia M. Davidson)

AN Italian Christmas is a very different thing from the Christmas of ... They have a proverb in Italy, "Christmas where you like, New Year with your family," which perhaps, expresses their view of the importance of the day as well as any lengthy description. Yet their own customs are very interesting.

To begin with, there is the Presepio, the Ceppo and the Christmas dinner.

The Presepio, as almost every one knows, is the representation of the manger, a custom which is said to have originated with St. Francis of Assisi in 1223. Going from home to Mass about Christmas time, the saint halted in a wood, and in a grotto erected an altar representing at its base the scene of the manger with a heap of hay, a figure of the Bambino carved from olive wood, a canvas for background painted with figures of ... The peasants of the neighborhood soon gathered around these outward and visible signs of the birth of the Saviour which ...

In nearly all of the Florentine churches the Presepio is a most important feature at Christmas. The Italian "Ceppo" is the substitute for the Yule log of England and the Christmas tree of Germany and America. ...

W. Noble of Noble Bros., north of the Saskatchewan, the well known breeders of Shorthorn cattle, has just returned from a trip to the cattle farms west for a distance of some 70 miles. He is well satisfied with the outcome and expects to place a number of his young bulls with various dealers.

Chas. Hood of Elk Point, north of the Saskatchewan river, marketed 1000 lbs of wool at Vermilion Saturday. Mr. Hood is an extensive sheep raiser and progressive settler, his admiration for "Teddy" Roosevelt being no detriment to him in this respect. He has also recently purchased a quarter section of land (160 acres) adjoining his farm, for $2000.00 cash. When it is noted that the nearest [illegible] is [illegible] distant from this settlement and a river to cross by ferry as well, an idea can be obtained relative to land values.

An enthusiastic meeting of curlers was held in the town hall Thursday night last and a long list of business transacted towards ensuring a keen and successful curling season. Messrs McKone and Yungblut were appointed to make up a list of curlers and report same to secy. when the skips will meet and select rinks. Nine skips were elected mostly all old war-horses at the game and things will soon begin to hum. Those elected were Messrs. Slater, Jones, McKone, Yungblut, Cooper, C. Pilkie, W. Pilkie, W. It is the desire of The Standard to give a building review of the town of Vermilion for the year 1910. It is well known that this has been an active season in this regard in the town and over 30 buildings have been erected. The growth in all lines has been of a most encouraging nature and the town is forging ahead on a sure and certain foundation. Being underlaid at a depth of 35 feet with a strata of rock it is not building on sand but rapidly mounting to its pedestal as the foremost city in the favored country known as North-eastern Alberta. We ask that details of buildings be left at this office during the next few days to aid in the compilation of complete returns.

Grade Near Saddle Lake

Rich Country North of the Saskatchewan Will Have Trains Next Fall Settlers Going In From Vermilion

That the grade of the Canadian Northern Battleford-Morinville line, constructed from the Battleford end, is now within 40 miles of the Saddle lake district, is the statement of F. E. Van Arnum, who is one of the first Dakotans to take up a homestead in Northern Alberta, and who has located on the Saskatchewan river, directly north of Vermilion, about 100 miles east of Edmonton. He filed on his land this week.

Mr. Van Arnum has just returned from a visit to his homestead, and has information to the effect that the C. N. R. have pushed their Battleford line up into Northern Alberta a considerable distance. The railway company have also started work on the Morinville end of this line, and expect to have the entire line completed next fall. Big Piano Contest Closed Saturday Night and Handsome Xmas Box Went to Popular Girl

[illegible] 2nd, and Mrs. Wongtedel [illegible]

Miss Vera Armstrong of Coyote Valley won the piano with 901,140 votes, in the contest which closed sharp at 10 p. m. on Saturday night at Craigs store.

There was great excitement around the big store on the corner of Main St. while the counters were counting the Coupons in the Big Piano Contest. No one had any idea who the winner would be until the judges handed their decision to Mr. Craig who immediately announced the result and congratulated Miss Armstrong on her success and for accumulating such a large number of votes.

Miss Armstrong we believe is a very deserving winner, it is understood she travelled the entire North country on horseback in search of coupons.

Staff Sergt Dubuque, of Qu Appelle, Sask., while searching for lost horses belonging to the government, found several strays in different parts of the district in the hands of farmers who had neither placed the animals in a pound or properly advertised them. In some cases these animals had been in possession of the parties considerably over a year. Prosecutions have followed, one of these cases being heard at Qu Appelle, when Jame McLean of Edgeley, appeared before F. Amos J. P., and pleaded guilty to having an estray horse in his possession and failing to advertise it as required. Defendant was fined $10 on the first charge and $15 on the second, this with the costs in each case made a total of forty dollars and twenty cents, which was paid.—Sask. Herald.

OBITUARY

We regret to have to record the untimely death of Mrs. James Hay at the early age of 51 years.

Mrs. Hay had been suffering from an affection of the throat for the greater part of the summer, but did not consider it serious until about a week ago when she was advised to go to Edmonton for treatment. Examination in the hospital revealed a very advanced cancer and an immediate operation was considered the only hope of saving her life. The operation was successful, but her depleted constitution was unequal to the strain and she succumbed at noon on Saturday, the 24th inst.

The funeral was held on Monday from the Presbyterian church and was largely attended by the numerous friends and sympathisers of the family.

Mrs. Hay was universally respected and beloved for her faithful and unobtrusive character and will be greatly missed by her many friends.

A WILSON STORY

WOODROW WILSON said at a recent dinner:

"When all the world is well educated, as all the world will be some day, then it will be better for everybody. Some foolish people, though, don't care to see all the world educated. These people want to shine and to shine, of course, one must have dark[ness].

"But that is a poor way to look at it. These ambitious people should rather say, 'The more education, the more appreciation.'

"There's nothing more disagreeable than want of appreciation. You know a multi-millionaire returned to his native village and erected a marble palace on a hill up there. One day after the palace was completed, he said to the postmaster and the crowd of loafers in the general store:

"'It's a million dollar house up on the hill is simply full of Titians.'

"The loafers exchanged looks of surprise and horror and the postmaster exclaimed, 'Good gracious, ain't there no way o' killin' 'em?'"

THE INQUIRING MIND

ROUND the old inn table they sat talking fish. The man in the waterproof cap spoke of the rainbow trout that he had killed, and the salmon he might have killed but for the fact that he did not kill them. The man in the old Norfolk exclaimed that the trout referred to could not have been to show, and that no salmon ever lived in the man with the waterproof cap's river. Having given his reasons, he passed on to the cold case test, averring that no good fish could be killed with any other. Bottlenose in a weak argument refuted this, and told them all about perch. With him the man in the waterproof cap tossed home.

They had been doing this for hours, and might have gone on doing it for more hours, but for the quiet man in the corner. In every inn there is a corner, and in every corner a quiet man. He is never interested in fish and his patience if long, is finite.

"Excuse me interrupting, gentlemen," said this one, politely, "but during the last two and a half hours I have learned all that can be learned about fish except one thing. You are, I take it, experts in the matter?"

There was a modest chorus of "No, no," but if ever a "No, no" meant "Yes, yes," this one did. It was plain that they were jointly and severally willing and ready to reveal all the known facts and many of the unknown concerning all the trout, salmon, perch, pike, chub, minnow, shark and fish that be.

"Would one of you mind telling me," continued the quiet man from his corner, "why it is that sardines never have heads?"

BRISTOL'S BID FOR CANADIAN TRADE

HUNDREDS of feet high on a tower that crowns a cone-like hill in the very centre of the city of Bristol a brilliant light burns [illegible] the darkness of the night to [illegible] the fact that Bristol discovered [illegible] great appreciation of the essentials of success."

The development of the modern ocean liner has made it a manifest impossibility to bring vessels of such titanic size up the tortuous Avon. Build new docks at Avonmouth, advised the experts. But Avonmouth was seven miles beyond the municipal limits. Then bring it in, said the city fathers. And bring it in they did, securing by Act of Parliament the right to annex a strip of land right down to the proposed site of the new docks. The next step was to spend nearly twenty million dollars for providing the most up-to-date facilities for accommodating vessels and handling cargo. Now that the new port is fully equipped, and two of the great railways of England, the Great Western and the Midland, have built lines to connect it with Bristol and all the centres of the United Kingdom, the Bristolian is looking for that appreciation his enterprise deserves.

William Mackenzie, of Toronto, was one of the first to reward the efforts of the dock commissioners. This shrewd Canadian, whose railway system taps a veritable empire of the best wheat-growing land, never lets anything out of his hands until it has yielded him every penny of profit that is legitimately his. He does not develop business in the West, for instance, that he may see other money-making institutions exact their toll from it as they pass it on. He completes the undertaking and takes what it is worth. The grain that he hauls to Lake Superior and stores in his own elevators he turns over to his own fresh water steamers, and at Montreal he transfers it again to his own ocean liners, of the newly established Royal line. It was while looking for the most favorable port in England for the marketing of the produce he carries that the advantages of Bristol first attracted his attention. Always quick to decide, he soon concluded that no other place would so well serve as the eastern terminal of the Canadian Northern's transportation system. A population of sixteen millions is located with a radius of a hundred and twenty miles, and a two hours' run will land passengers in the metropolis itself. More important still the unexpected possibilities of trade between the West of England and Canada promised a rich return to a courageous promoter. William Mackenzie is just the man for that kind of a proposition and the tour of Canada by West of England merchants, keen for business, and the interest which marked the inauguration of West of England Day at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto, argue well for his venture.

As Canada's relations with Bristol are bound to become peculiarly intimate that place is just now the object of more than ordinary attention. It is a city of half a million souls, with streets as hilly as Montreal's, but infinitely cleaner and better paved. One would surmise that the city fathers spent what was necessary to put the municipality in good shape, and then figured out the cost. Perhaps that is not very far from the truth, for the tenant, who is the party liable for the taxes, pays nine shillings in rates for every pound of his rental, which would appear to be equivalent to a tax rate of over thirty mills on the dollar. The City Council is almost as numerous as the Ontario Legislature, being composed of a sixty-two members, three-quarters of whom are elected by the people and called councillors. The councillors ballot for aldermen (eldermen), and by unwritten law eleven of these are Conservatives and eleven Liberals, the two parties agreeing to vote for one another's nominees. The remaining alderman is a Labor representative, whom the majority [illegible] allow the half dozen Labor councillors to appoint. As a rule aldermen are not chosen [illegible] that they have served about fifteen years as councillors. The Lord Mayor is also chosen by the Council and it is perfectly well understood that he shall [illegible]

With the Horses

THE following are answers by leading horsemen to the question, "What percentage of his mares should a stallion leave with foal in order to justify his owner's claim to a purchaser that he was a sure foal getter?"

This is, after all, one of the hardest questions which horsemen have to deal with. As an old Scotchman once dryly remarked, "There are few questions which have not two sides tae them, an' oftener there are three or four." There is a great deal of difference in the way in which horses are handled, and there are also things of the same kind always playing an important part in the case of each mare which the stallion serves.

A remarkable instance of this is to be found in the case of such a well known sire as the stallion Fullarton, a handsome, vigorous horse, now known as a sire of many high class colts. Up to middle age, Fullarton had not been considered a success, and he was finally disposed of by his owners at a sacrifice. An experienced horseman bought him, and by taking proper care of him, the stallion turned out a horse of more than ordinary fertility, and to-day, at a good age, he is still one of the most reliable of breeders. In this case, a little change in feeding, which the purchaser was shrewd enough to guess it, made all the difference.

Another striking instance was in one of the noted sons of the Matchless MacQueen. Of a breed noted for its fertility, he had failed to make good in even a moderate way, until he was put to work on the farm, and afterwards proved to be a first class stock horse.

Perhaps faults in these two things are accountable for more of the infertile horses or of those which fail to settle a profitable proportion of their mares than everything else put together, faults in feeding and in proper exercise. But another great factor is in the injudicious breeding of a horse. Giving a horse too much to do is a very injudicious thing, and has led to great losses.

However in a commercial way, every horse which is sold or bought is expected to meet all of his chances of mismanagement, and still make good a certain percentage. This is a condition of purchase insisted upon by buyers, and conceded to by sellers to an almost universal degree. Just what percentage would be fairest is a matter upon which the opinions of leading and experienced horsemen is about the best authority. Here are opinions gathered from a few of them. We would like to have the opinions of others of our readers.

"I would call a horse sure that gets 50 per cent. of his mares in foal. I think the average horse that I have known will average between 40 and 60 per cent., although I have known of as high as 75 per cent. or even more."—John A. Boag, Queensville.

"A good sure horse ought to get 50 per cent. of his mares in foal. I would not like to say what the average horse does in this way, but there are many which do not get above 50 per cent. I am satisfied that not over two-thirds of them do, perhaps not even half of them. Many mares lose their foals before time for inspection and collection and this makes it appear that the stallion was not prolific. Judgment should be used in the handling of a stallion. Just how many mares he should serve is hard to say, and varies greatly. Some horses will be able for no more than 70 mares, while others are good for many more. The Matchless MacQueen has served as many as 263 in one season, but in the short breeding season which most horses get there is [illegible] [illegible]

"I am one of those persons whose system requires aid," writes Mr. Young Gledhill from Picton, "but it is so easily affected by reason of the great sensitiveness of the bowels that ordinary drastic pills inflict great injury to the delicate coating, and excite such persistent activity as to be with difficulty checked.

"I wish in the highest terms to express the great value of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in cases like mine, and I am sure also for elderly people and the very weak, there is no pill like them.

"'I intend to lose these trinkets bit by bit. Some poor man or woman will find them, and it will give them no end of pleasure,' answered Elise."

When the King died, twenty-five years ago, he left his wife well provided for, and appointed the palace of La Penha at Cintra as her residence. There she lived for many years in the society of two American girls, her nieces.

As she died without children, her real property in Portugal went to her German relatives, who are wondering, as stated, whether or not the Government will include them in the decree of confiscation against the royal family.

A YOUNG lady expressed her regret at not being present at one of Sir Robert Ball's Lectures.

"Was it really?" she replied. "Then it would have greatly interested me, for, between you and me, Sir Robert, I have been a martyr to freckles all my life."

The Largest Public Ownership Venture on the Continent

THE greatest experiment in Government ownership on the continent is in progress in Western Canada. For a stretch of a thousand miles from Winnipeg to the Rockies, in the three prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, with a population now of a million and destined to support millions more, there is not a solitary Bell Telephone left. The telephone systems are entirely in the hands of either the Government, the municipalities, or independent companies. It was only some two years ago that the Bell was driven out of the West, so it is too soon yet to draw any dogmatic conclusions as to the success or failure of the scheme, but it is interesting and instructive at least to review the progress which the experiment has made.

A new country, with vested rights not so firmly entrenched as in the East, the West can more readily undertake advanced Government ownership schemes and can more easily enact progressive legislation. Western Canada, indeed, might be called the sociological laboratory of the continent. What adds to the value from the student's and legislator's standpoint of the Western experiment in Government ownership is the fact that all three provinces have adopted different methods of handling the problem.

Manitoba's telephones are managed by a commission, subject to the Government and under the Department of Public Works. Practically all of the telephones in the province are owned by the Government. There are a few municipal telephone systems, but they are being rapidly absorbed. Saskatchewan has a telephone department in connection with the Government which has complete jurisdiction over all matters pertaining to the construction and operation of telephones in the province. The department at the time of its creation was given power to purchase and operate existing lines and to proceed with the construction of long distance lines. It has a general supervising control over all systems constructed. The Government encourages the control of local lines by local companies, and for the encouragement of rural lines grants a bonus of all telephone poles required, provided the telephone system is approved by the department. Alberta, again, owns and operates practically all the local and long distance lines in the province, and they are under the direct jurisdiction of a department of telephones, with a Cabinet Minister at the head.

The credit of having initiated Government ownership of telephones in the West must be given to Alberta. In 1905 when the Rutherford Government was first returned to power, one of its [illegible]

[illegible] quirements fairly well met, the Government proceeded to take up the question of rural systems connecting with the long distance lines. Rural lines were rapidly proceeded with, so that to-day there are some 30 miles, with over 600 miles under course of construction this year. Alberta has now 1,642 miles of long distance lines, has 97 toll stations and 30 exchanges giving telephone connection with some 5,500 subscribers. By the end of the year the Government expects to have 2,573 miles in operation.

It was in 1905 that the question was first broached in the Manitoba Legislature. In the following year a committee was appointed to investigate the whole problem. They visited many of the States where there were municipal and independent companies in operation, and brought back a strong report favoring the adoption of some form of Government ownership. At the municipal elections of 1906 a referendum was taken, when a decisive majority was secured in favor of Government ownership. The Cabinet immediately went ahead with the construction of a system in opposition to the Bell. The Bell, which had been fighting the Government's plan tooth and nail, saw the Province was in earnest, and in January, 1908, sold out for $3,300,000.

During the two years of Government ownership the development of the system has been astonishing. At the time the Bell sold out there were some 14,000 subscribers. To-day there are over 25,000. The number of subscribers in Winnipeg has practically doubled, although the greatest increase has been in rural Manitoba. One of the greatest complaints against the Bell was its refusal to build rural lines. They did not pay as much as city lines. The Government's ideal is the telephone within the reach of every Manitoba farmer, 2,500 rural subscribers were actually added last year, and today there are some 9,000 farmers' phones in the province.

The Government has also pushed forward the construction of long distance lines. They have increased from 3,150 miles two years ago to 5,180 miles today. Under the Bell management there were 1,230 miles of rural poles; now there are 3,828. The system practically covers every settled district of Manitoba, and nearly every farmer having a phone is able to speak to Winnipeg without leaving his fireside. How great is the demand for farmers' phones is shown by the fact that there were no less than five thousand applications last year.

The first Saskatchewan legislation dealing with the problem was enacted in the early part of the year 1908. [illegible]

[illegible]

In Manitoba the rates on rural lines were reduced from $24 to $20. For business phones in the larger centres the old Bell rate of $30 still obtains, but the rates for private phones have been reduced from $30 to $25. These reductions were made at the end of the first year of Government operation. This year there were no changes in the rates.

The Bell rates in Saskatchewan, which were from $24 to $35 for business phones and $18 to $25 for private phones, have been maintained on all lines but those operated by the rural companies. The rural rates range from $12 to $20.

While there are many criticisms of the Governments of the various provinces in their operation of the systems, it is safe to say a vote as to the retention of Government ownership or a return to the old system would be almost unanimous for the present plan. Government ownership has been particularly beneficial to the rural and agricultural communities, and by the forward policy of construction of long distance lines has [l]inked up the business world of the West. It is still an experiment, but an experiment highly successful and well worth watching.

CURES ALCOHOLISM BY USE OF SURGEON'S KNIFE

ONE of the more recent contributions to medical literature deals with an original method of curing chronic alcoholism. The writer, Dr. J. W. Kenney, of San Antonio, Texas, declares that the only means of curing alcoholics is by surgery. In proof of his contention he cites a series of cases so treated by him, asserting that in a majority of them a cure was effected. His article, entitled "The Alcoholic Case and a Surgical Operation for the Cure of Chronic Alcoholism," appears in the current issue of the Texas Medical Journal.

Dr. Kenney's method is to make an artificial opening in the stomach, loop up the jejunum (a part of the intestine), make an artificial opening in the jejunum, and unite the two artificial openings. The operation is called a gastro-jejunostomy. Here are Dr. Kenney's reasons for resorting to this operation:

First—Because medical treatment fails in a majority, if not in all, cases and must necessarily continue to fail because it does not remove the cause of the gnawing or craving for alcohol.

Second—Because the pathological condition caused by alcohol is almost identical with pathological conditions produced by other causes which are relieved by surgical treatment.

"The drunkard in giving a history of his case usually points to his stomach as the cause of his drinking. Very few claim that the taste for liquor has anything to do with it. In the stomach will also be found the first evidence that the physical basis of life—protoplasm—has been injured, and the first to present pathological conditions.

"It has been proven that alcohol stimulates the action of the senses and organs of the body for a short time. This supra-normal condition is quickly followed by the infra-normal, which indicates a partial paralysis of the nerve ends and eventually of the nerve centres.

"Continued repetition of this process results in hardening and partial paralysis of the muscular coat of the stomach, and an inflamed or ulcerated condition of the mucous coat. Such a condition produces a vitiated appetite and impairs the action of the stomach which is the most important of the digestive processes. To relieve this condition when produced by any agent other than alcohol surgical measures are demanded. Why not apply the same principle in the alcoholic case?

"Reasoning along this line convinced me that all hope of curing a case of chronic alcoholism lay in a surgical direction, and I resolved to try the operation, but I had in mind [illegible] the first case that would grant me the privilege. [illegible] a young man of high degree [illegible] operation, and was due to angina pectoris. The relapsing case was that of a middle-aged, half witted man.

"It is not my purpose to advocate so grave a surgical procedure in all cases of chronic alcoholism, but only in those apparently hopeless cases where everything else has failed, and the patient is still in fair mental and physical condition and wants to be cured. The result at my hands has thus far exceeded expectations."

THE LAVENDER VENDOR

In the crowded city, the thronging thoroughfare,
Thro' the chill of winter, a fragrance on the air
Faint and fresh of lavender mocks at memory—
Mocks and murmurs softly, "Dreamer, come with me."
"Lavender, sweet lavender," vendor, you should call!
"Purple, perfumed packages with memories for all."
Lavender, sweet lavender, and tired souls are sent
Drifting down the Dream path to the Country of Content.

Subtle scents of lavender thro' the busy street
Vague, elusive memories, haunting, haunting sweet
Stealing soft on perfumed wings thro' the moving mass
White and tired faces brighten as they pass.

And the crowded city slowly drifts away,
Hushed the noise and clamor of the busy day
While for a fleeting second, they who dream are blest
With dreams of lavender and quiet country rest
"Lavender, sweet lavender," vendor, you should call,
"Purple, perfumed packages with memories for all."
Lavender, sweet lavender, and tired souls are sent
Drifting down the Dream path to the Country of Content.

With movement slow, wearied with woe,
Strange woe!
He gathereth fuel for a funeral pyre,
And sinking in the fiercely burning fire,
Of his own will none knoweth why

A GOOD MEASURE

The new [illegible] of school compulsory throughout the whole year will work in two directions. It will [illegible] ward abolishing [illegible] Province, and will [illegible] the children in the Province [illegible] ter chance of school training. [illegible] by little of what is known [illegible] folow, but [illegible] with the conditions [illegible] that many children are employed at work which not only prevents them attending school but which is in itself injurious to the development of mind and body, and perhaps morals as well. That should not be necessary in a country so rich as this, and whatever tends to prevent it will meet the cordial approval of the public. Equally deserving of approval is the requirement that all children shall attend school throughout the school year. A common school education is not a luxury, but a necessity, to the man or woman of the present generation. It will be more rather than less a necessity when the present boys and girls are men and women. The tendency of things everywhere is to make it harder rather than easier for the unschooled man or woman to get along in the world. This individualistic consideration alone fully justifies the state in saying that every child must have a chance to get the education without which it must be hopelessly handicapped in life. The broader view of social well-being is further warrant. The public have a right to insist that those who will have the direction of affairs in the years to come shall have a general knowledge of how the existing state of society has come about, and of what are the obligations and responsibilities it imposes upon the citizen, and also the means of intervening themselves concerning the problems which the future will have to solve. The Alberta Provincial Spring Live Stock Shows, including the Horse Show, Fat Stock Show, Pure-bred Cattle Show and Auction Sale, will be held under the auspices of the Alberta Live Stock Associations, and the Alberta and Dominion Departments of Agriculture April 18th to 21st at Calgary. Entries for the Auction Sale close February 15th and for the Horse Show and Fat Stock Show on March 31st. The Sheep and Swine Breeders' Associations pay all freight on sheep and swine entered for the Fat Stock Show from Alberta points. A large number of new classes have been added to the prize list, and nearly [illegible] each prizes. [illegible], secretary, Alberta Live Stock Associations, Calgary, will be glad to forward prize lists and entry forms on application.

The secretary is anxious to receive lists of animals wanted and for sale, that he may help in bringing buyers and seller together. No charge will be made for this service to either party.

Model Farms For Sunny Alberta

Outline of Scheme Undertaken by Hon Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture

Vermilion A Likely Point

The system, which it is the intention to [illegible] at the present time, calls for six demonstration farms to be established at various points in the province, for which a grant of $125,000 was obtained from the provincial government during the last session. So far only one has been located and consists of a section of land, adjacent to the town of Medicine Hat, which was formerly a school section and was secured from the Dominion government last May. The other five have not been located yet, but will be in the near future, and will consist of a half section of land, [illegible] if possible, close to a town.

A general superintendent will be appointed, who will have charge of all the farms, while a manager will be appointed for each individual farm. It is not the intention to erect large expensive buildings, but buildings of suitable type and [illegible] as any well-to-do farmer could be able to erect himself. A bulletin with plans, specifications and detail cost of the buildings, is to be issued in a short while.

A system of mixed farming is to be adopted on each farm, which is to be run more for utility purposes than experimental. Any experiments conducted will be done on 20 acre plots, and not in small plots as is the system followed on the purely experimental farms to-day. Besides this the growing of pure seed to type in large quantities will perhaps be one of the most important features of the farms, the idea being to be able to supply farmers with anywhere from 50 to 100 bushels of seed, which they know will not only be clean but be true to type. If the seed develops to any extent it is probable that grain will be bought that is known to have been grown from pure seed true to type, and will be so cleaned and sold at a reasonable price. The idea of distributing pure seed to the farmers is one of the most effective ways of fighting the weed problem, and as there is not more than 2 or 3 per cent. of the arable land in the province broken, the importance of the seed being seen to would not be overlooked.

Among the buildings to be erected on the farms is a large hall capable of accommodating about one hundred people, which is to be used for holding classes, as it is the intention to hold short courses varying from one to four weeks during the winter. These classes will consist of lectures, and practical demonstrations in stock judging, dairying, and cultivation, etc. Farmers will thus be able to come and receive a certain amount of scientific [illegible] not be available except at an agricultural college. Each farm will be required to work out in the [illegible] the problems that confront the farmers in that particular section, and [illegible] and end the next generation. It is not the intention to make [illegible] of the agricultural colleges, but [illegible] the necessary for agricultural colleges, as the boys after receiving the education available here will want to go to an agricultural college.

The original appropriation of the $125,000 was for the securing of the farms, the expense of putting the land in shape for crop, and the buying of the stock. A further grant of $[illegible] has been secured for the carrying of the five farms, and an additional appropriation of $12,000 has been made to put up buildings and stock the Medicine Hat farm. After they have been brought into running shape it is expected that each farm will pay its own running expenses at least, apart from the salaries of the superintendent and manager.

Apart from the establishing of the farms the regular work of the department will be carried on without much change. During the winter as usual three short courses, each lasting two weeks, will be held. The places where these will be held have not yet been decided but they will be somewhere in the north, centre, and south of the province. A competent staff of instructors will be secured for each place, and two carloads of pure-bred stock will be shipped to each place for demonstration purposes. Lectures are to be delivered on live stock, soil cultivation, judging of seed grain, extermination of weeds, etc., as well as practical demonstrations in dairying and poultry keeping. A travelling dairy and poultry [illegible] established at [illegible] secured from [illegible] and the [illegible] made right there. Incubators hatching [illegible] will also be on hand, as well as other [illegible] in fattening crates, which will be finished up and dressed for the market during the course.

In the summer months a vigorous provincial campaign against weeds will be waged. The appropriation for this work has been increased from $11,000 to $25,000 for this year, and it is the intention to push this work as far as possible.

Smothered in Well

A young man named Gamble, who was working with the Arthur's well-boring outfit north of Vermilion, was smothered in a well being sunk on the farm of a farmer named Dixon, on Thursday last. The sad affair took place after breakfast as work was about to be resumed for the day. The hole was down to a depth of 60 ft. and Gamble said he would go down and see what kind of sand they had struck. He was lowered in the saddle and those above not receiving any signal to pull up hauled up the rope when the saddle was found empty. With a wet sack over his head, Dixon went down in the rope attachment and though touching Gamble was also overcome and had to be brought to the surface. A hook was obtained and the body of Gamble recovered. It was shipped east from Vermilion Friday.

The deceased was a young man and experienced in his work.

The birth of a child to King George and Queen is expected in March. This will be the first child born at Buckingham Palace in fifty four years. The last child born to the King and Queen was Prince John Charles, July 12, 1905.

A mosquito-proof steamer named the Thomas Holt has left the Mersey for West Africa. The vessel is proof against the mosquito which is one of the deadliest enemies of the white man in West Africa. The plan adopted is to bar the way of the mosquito into all the living apartments on board by providing all doorways, side port openings, windows, skylights, ventilators and passages with close copper gauze coverings.

POSITIVELY CASH

To my many friends and patrons I will say that I have decided to run a STRICTLY CASH business on and after the 1st day of January 1911. I have, as my customers know, always sold at Cash Prices, charging no interest to those who asked for credit, by so doing losing the losses and now after five years of credit business I have decided to start strictly cash as I feel that by so doing I can do better for my customers and myself by keeping a larger and more varied stock which they will find complete.

Thanking you for your patronage in the past and soliciting a continuance of the same, also wishing you one and all the compliments of the season,

I remain yours respectfully

All we ask is for you to let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen) from your druggist and give it to you free to try.

It has only been within recent years that we have come to really know about the white corpuscles of the blood or the phagocytes and what their function is.

Thus they are the policemen or scavengers of the body.

Devouring every disease germ that enters the body when they are strong enough or in sufficient numbers.

And we have received hundreds of thousands of unsolicited testimonials.

All due to this marvellous power of strengthening and increasing the white corpuscles of the blood.

Here are the diseases in the treatment of which Psychine is indicated.

Here are the diseases of which Psychine has cured many thousand cases.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our 36 years' experience with this splendid preparation, with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

PLANK FELL ON HIM!

Hamilton Man Badly Injured

Reuben Atherton, of 267 Ferguson Ave., Hamilton, an employee of the ... Elevator Co., sustained serious injury while at work. A plank fell from a height on to his right foot, crushing it badly. He was taken home, where Zam-Buk was applied with good results.

Telling his experience of the balm, he said: "After the doctor had dressed the damaged foot with some preparation of his own I was in great pain, and as day after day I seemed to get no relief I left off medical treatment and tried Zam-Buk. From the very first application I traced an improvement. Zam-Buk really seemed to act like magic, cleaning all the unhealthy matter from the wounds, drawing out all discoloration, inflammation and soreness, and started healing in quick ... Zam-Buk balm is certainly a wonderful healer, and I would not care to be without a box in ..."

All ... should keep Zam-Buk ...

stood with his hand on the knob. "Now, Mrs. Hopkins," he said, reassuringly, "don't worry. We'll locate this pair. If you hear anything, I'm at the hotel. They think I'm a book agent there—all don't say a word about this to a soul. Understand? Not a word! If they ask where the professor is, tell them he's gone away. I'll see you to-morrow. Goodnight."

CHAPTER IV.

The Shadows on the Blind

Detective Sullivan left the Hopkins house well pleased with the result of his visit. He had been in Graydon now only a scant two hours and already had learned much that would be useful in building up a case. It was about nine o'clock when he said good-night to Mrs. Hopkins and started towards the village.

Ever alert and a believer in the adage that procrastination is the thief of time, he decided to take a stroll around the college before returning to the hotel, to familiarize himself with every point in the case. So he turned his steps in the direction of the hill on which the building was situated. But, prompt as he considered himself, Detective Sullivan was too late to witness a series of scenes that would have helped him to solve instantly what was destined to prove the greatest puzzle of his detective career.

THE gown entire, or the one piece gown, as it is generally known—in reality quite as often two pieces—is all important in this winter's wardrobe. Later on it will be worn under the fur coat. At the moment, unless the day is unseasonably cool, the gown is worn without any outer garment, and consequently is finished in accordance with that idea.

The simple little frock, for that is another name given it, requires to be most carefully made, for its very simplicity makes every fault visible, and there is singularly little trimming that is considered correct with its simplicity and which are becoming more accustomed to the straight narrow skirt and the waist of simple lines with only a small amount of fulness in front, for certainly the most critical of individuals would admit the smart appearance of these same gowns finished around the hem with a bias fold of the same material or better, with a fold of velvet, and with the straight flat panel down the front. Two box-pleat fronts, each headed with a band of material, is another style that is popular and sometimes more becoming, while the too severe and scant effect at the back is modified with a scant box pleat of the same material as the gown or with the fold of velvet. Velvet used as trimming is always effective and it will be extensively fashionable this winter used as has been described, or combined with cloth, just as cloth has been combined with voile to date. It looks equally well with cloth or with satin, but the latter material has been so fashionable all summer that the cloth or cashmere is really smarter.

Gray is a fashionable color at the moment, and for these simple gowns there is nothing more attractive nor more generally becoming. Not the dark stone gray, but a much lighter or silver gray shade. This can be made with velvet of the same shade or the sharp contrast of black velvet can be used, or all one material will work out well. Brown is also fashionable, a tobacco brown, but brown is a dangerous color to recommend too generally. If the shade is not just right or ...

MAYOR DUNSMORE

EX-MAYOR STEPHENS

Late Hours and Long Life.

A German doctor who has been collecting information about the habits of long lived persons finds that the majority of those who attained old age indulged in late hours. Eight out of ten persons over eighty never went to bed till well into the small hours and did not get up again till late in the day.

To Purify Water.

An ounce of powdered alum stirred into a hogshead of putrid water will render it sweet and fit for use in the course of a few hours.

Edible Mushrooms in China.

Large quantities of fungi are eaten by the Chinese of every province, and some have medical or dietetic properties assigned to them. The polypori or boleti are generally preferred to the agarics, so largely eaten in Europe.

A Tenant's Revenge.

In revenge for his landlord's refusal to paint his house an Antwerp tenant has hung out this sign: "At the Sign of the Dirty Front."

Compulsory Religion.

To such an extent does religion prevail at Tonga, in the south seas, that every man, woman and child on that island who does not go to church at least three times a week is liable to be arrested and fined, the fine going to the king.

Tourists in Italy.

Foreign tourists annually spend in Italy $100,000,000. Rome almost entirely lives on her foreign and provincial visitors.

Church Division.

It is stated that in the historic village of Hermannsburg, in Germany, there are four kinds of independent Lutheran churches, each of which refuses to recognize the other or to practice altar and pulpit fellowship.

Dreams.

Dreams, says a scientist, are promoted by warmth and chilled by the cold. Hence the Asiatics are rich dreamers, while the Eskimos sleep as sound as icebergs.

The Gutta Tree.

It is much more difficult to bleed the balata tree, from which gutta percha is derived, than the India rubber tree. But an expert at the work can obtain from forty to fifty pounds of the gum daily.

London Omnibuses.

More than 20,000 miles, or nearly the circumference of the earth at the equator, is the distance the average London busman drives in the course of a year.

A Curious Fact About Wool.

If wool is left on a suckling ewe till after the usual shearing time and her lamb is meanwhile weaned, the wool will start a second growth and will show a joint or ... in the fiber that will injure it ...

The oldest inhabited house in Great Britain ... the seat of the ... part of which dates from the ... century, or a couple of hundred years before the conquest of William the Norman.

Houses in Treetops.

Girls in Papua, or New Guinea, an island in the Pacific, have little chance to elope. Their dads force them to sleep in a little house on the topmost branches of a tall tree. Then the ladder is removed, and the slumber of the parents is not disturbed with fears of an elopement.

The Teapot.

When putting away a teapot, to prevent its getting musty put a lump of sugar inside. This will absorb all the damp and there will be no fear of the next brew of tea made in it having a musty taste.

European Birds Follow Traditions.

European birds seem tenacious of precedent. Migratory birds do not cross the Mediterranean at its narrowest point, but an examination has proved that the point at which they do cross was at one time the narrowest part of the sea.

A RAZOR'S EDGE.

Minute Teeth, Like Those of a Saw, Make Its Keenness.

The edge of a razor consists of innumerable points or "teeth," which if the razor is of good material follow each other throughout its whole length with great order and clearness. The unbroken regularity of these minute "teeth" goes to make up the blade's excessive keenness. The edge acts upon the beard not so much by the direct application of weight or force as it does by a slight "sawing" movement, which causes the successive "teeth" to act rapidly on one certain part of the hairy growth. The best razors, according to the microscopists, have the teeth of their edges set as regularly as those of a perfectly set saw.

This explains the magic effect of hot water on the razor's blade, the act of dipping it thoroughly cleansing the teeth of any greasy or dirty substance with which they may have been clogged. Barbers often claim that razors "get tired" of shaving and that they will be all right after awhile if permitted to take a rest. When in this "tired" condition a microscopic examination of the edge shows that constant stropping by the same person has caused the teeth or fibers of the edge to all arrange themselves in one direction. A month of disuse causes these fine particles to rearrange themselves so that they again present the heterogeneous saw toothed edge. After this little recreation each particle of the fine edge is up and ready to support his fellow, and it again takes some time to spoil the grain of the blade.

Verdi Was Right.

When Verdi was putting the last touches to "Il Trovatore," he was visited in his study by a privileged friend, who was one of the ablest living musicians and critics. He was permitted to examine the score and run over the "Anvil Chorus" on the pianoforte. "What do you think of that?" asked Verdi. "Trash!" responded the connoisseur. Verdi rubbed his hands and chuckled. "Now look at this," he said. "Rubbish!" said the other, rolling a cigarette. The composer rose and embraced him with a burst of joy. "What do you mean?" asked the critic. "My dear friend," cried Verdi, "I have been making a popular opera. In it I resolved to please everybody except the purists, the great judges, the classicists like you. Had I pleased you I should have pleased no one else. What you say assures me of success. In three months 'Il Trovatore' will be sung and roared and whistled and barrel organed all over Italy." And so it proved.

A Safe Proceeding.

Lord Lyons, English minister at Washington during the civil war and afterward ambassador to France, was a diplomatist to the core. He was exceedingly tactful in action and had the rare art of keeping his own counsel.

When Sir Edward Blount called upon him one day at the embassy in Paris he found that a well known journalist had preceded him. The visitor was laying down the law in a loud tone, and when, after his departure, Sir Edward was received, he took the liberty of saying:

"May I be allowed to ask if it is quite wise to discuss state secrets in such a loud tone? I heard every word that was said, my lord, as I sat in the anteroom."

"Ah!" said Lord Lyons. "But even then you could not hear what I said, for I said nothing."—Youth's Companion.

The Cherokees and Polytheism.

The Cherokee Indian was originally a polytheist. To him the spirit world was only a shadowy counterpart of this one. He had no great spirit, no happy hunting ground, no heaven, no hell, all of which ideas were first introduced to the American aborigines by Christian missionaries. Consequently death had for him no terrors, and he awaited the inevitable end with no anxiety as to the future. All his prayers were for temporal and tangible ... for long life, for ... and for revenge.

Dreams Explained

"Dreams ... on theosophy ... consist of recollections of the combined impressions received and workings of the physical and astral minds. The soul and subconscious ... the confusion arising from ... founding of the thoughts of the soul with the exaggerated interpretation of impressions received by subconsciousness which makes it so often impossible to remember dreams.

Better.

"I have no doubt you have heard some stories to my discredit," he said.

"I don't like to put it in that way," she quietly replied.

"How then?" he hopefully asked.

"I have never heard any stories to your credit," said she.

Papa—My son, I regret to see you so ... trouble so early in life.

Dominion Forestry Convention

Since Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, has issued a call to a Dominion Forestry Convention to be held in the City of Quebec, Jan. 18-19, 1911, the work preparation has been going forward rapidly.

The Convention is to be held under the auspices of the Canadian Forestry Association, of which his Excellency Earl Grey is the Patron, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, honorary President, and Hon. W. C. Edwards, the great Ottawa lumberman, President. The Ministers of Crown lands in the various provinces are territorial Vice-Presidents, and Mr. R. L. Borden, M. P. is on the Board of Directors, which includes leading lumbermen, forest ... and ...

The Commission of Conservation, of which Hon. Clifford Sifton is Chairman, will hold its annual meeting in the City of Quebec on Jan. 17, so that the Ancient Capital will that week be the Mecca of all interested in the preservation of forests and all that depends upon them, such as navigation, water-powers, agriculture, fish and game, recreation, health and tourist travel. The absolute dependence of the miner upon the forest for pit props will also be fully dealt with. The Commission of Conservation, which has been all year gathering information about all of Canada's natural resources, will, through its experts, indicate the present state of each. The Forestry Convention will discuss and make clear the duty of public, the press and governments to Canada's forests.

The Premier of Quebec, Sir Lomer Gouin, and the members of the Government are enthusiastically taking up the project, the details of which will come under the direction of Hon. Jules Allard, the Minister of Lands and Forests. Mr. James Lawler, the Secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association, whose headquarters are in Ottawa, and to whom enquiries about the programme, etc., may be addressed, will visit Quebec frequently between now and the date of the convention to confer with Mr. Allard and the committee of the association there to see that no detail of the work is left undone.

Everything points to the largest and most practical forestry convention ever held in Canada. The legislature of Quebec will be in session at this time. Railways have granted special rates, and a strong programme is being prepared, the details of which will be announced later, or may be had from the Secretary.

The Mystery of The Yellow Room

By GASTON LEROUX. COPYRIGHT, 1908 BY BRENTANO'S.

M. de Marquet compressed his lips and seemed ready to relapse into obstinate silence. He only relaxed a little when Rouletabille no longer left him in ignorance of the fact that we were going to the Glandier for the purpose of shaking hands with an "old and intimate friend," M. Robert Darzac—a man whom Rouletabille had perhaps seen once in his life.

"Poor Robert!" continued the young reporter, "this dreadful affair may be his death—he is so deeply in love with Mlle. Stangerson. It is to be hoped that Mlle. Stangerson's life will be saved."

"Let us hope so. Her father told me yesterday that if she does not recover it will not be long before he joins her in the grave. What an incalculable loss to science his death would be!"

"The wound on her temple is serious, is it not?"

"Evidently, but by a wonderful chance it has not proved mortal. The blow was given with great force."

"Then it was not with the revolver she was wounded," said Rouletabille, [illegible]

M. de Marquet appeared greatly embarrassed.

"I didn't say anything. I don't want to say anything. I will not say anything," he said. And he turned toward his registrar as if he no longer knew us.

But Rouletabille was not to be so easily shaken off. He moved nearer to the examining magistrate and, drawing a copy of the Matin from his pocket, he showed it to him and said:

"There is one thing, monsieur, which I may inquire of you without committing an indiscretion. You have, of course, seen the account given in the Matin? It is absurd, is it not?"

"Not in the slightest, monsieur."

"What! The yellow room has but one barred window, the bars of which have not been moved, and only one door, which had to be broken open, and the assassin was not found!"

"That's so, monsieur; that's so. That's how the matter stands."

Rouletabille said no more, but plunged into thought. A quarter of an hour thus passed.

Coming back to himself again, he said, addressing the magistrate:

"How did Mlle. Stangerson wear her hair on that evening?"

"I don't know," replied M. de Marquet.

"That's a very important point," said Rouletabille. "Her hair was done up in bands, wasn't it? I feel sure that on that evening, the evening of the crime, she had her hair arranged in bands."

"Then you are mistaken, M. Rouletabille," replied the magistrate. "Mlle. Stangerson that evening had her hair drawn up in a knot on the top of her head, her usual way of arranging it, her forehead completely uncovered. I can assure you, for we have carefully examined the wound. There was no blood on the hair, and the arrangement of it has not been disturbed since the crime was committed."

"You are sure? You are sure that on the night of the crime she had not her hair in bands?"

"Quite sure," the magistrate continued, smiling, "because I remember the doctor saying to me while he was examining the wound, 'It is a great pity Mlle. Stangerson was in the habit of drawing her hair back from her forehead. If she had worn it in bands the blow she received on the temple would have been weakened.' It seems strange to me that you should attach so much importance to this point."

"Oh, if she had not her hair in bands I give it up," said Rouletabille, with a despairing gesture.

"And was the wound on her temple a bad one?" he asked presently.

"Terrible."

"With what weapon was it made?"

"That is a secret of the investigation."

"Have you found the weapon—whatever it was?"

The magistrate did not answer.

"And the wound in the throat?"

Here the examining magistrate readily confirmed the decision of the doctor that, if the murderer had pressed her throat a few seconds longer, Mlle. Stangerson would have died of strangulation.

"The affair as reported in the Matin," said Rouletabille eagerly, "seems to me more and more inexplicable. Can you tell me, monsieur, how many openings there are in the pavilion? I mean doors and windows."

"There are five," replied Monsieur de Marquet, after having coughed once or twice, but no longer resisting the desire he felt to talk of the whole of the incredible mystery of the affair he was investigating. "There are five, of which the door of the vestibule is the only entrance to the pavilion—a door always automatically closed, which cannot be opened either from the outside or inside, except with the two special keys which are never out of the possession of either Daddy Jacques or M. Stangerson. Mlle. Stangerson had no need for one, since Daddy Jacques lodged in the pavilion and because, during the daytime, she never left her father. When they, all four, rushed into the yellow room, after breaking open the door of the laboratory, the door in the vestibule remained closed as usual and of the two keys for opening it Daddy Jacques had one in his pocket and M. Stangerson the other. As to the windows of the pavilion, there are four, the one window of the yellow room and those of the laboratory looking out on to the country, the window in the vestibule looking into the park."

"It is by that window that he escaped from the pavilion!" cried Rouletabille.

"How do you know that?"

"How? Oh, the thing is simple enough! As soon as he found he could not escape by the door of the pavilion his only way out was by the window [illegible] unless he could pass through a grated window. The window of the yellow room is secured by iron bars, because it looks out upon the open country; the two windows of the laboratory have to be protected in like manner for the same reason. As the murderer got away I conceive that he found a window that was not barred [illegible] which opens on to the park, that is to say, into the interior of the estate. There's not much magic in all that."

"Yes," said M. de Marquet, "but what you have not guessed is that this single window in the vestibule, though it has no iron bars, has solid iron blinds. Now, these iron blinds have remained fastened by their iron latch, and yet we have proof that the murderer made his escape from the pavilion by that window! Traces of blood on the inside wall and on the blinds as well as on the floor, and footmarks, of which I have taken the measurements, attest the fact that the murderer made his [illegible] way. But, then, how did he do it, seeing that the blinds remained fastened on the inside? He passed through [illegible] like a shadow. But what is more bewildering than all is that it is impossible to form any idea as to how the murderer got out of the yellow room or how he got across the laboratory to reach the vestibule!"

"Could that window have been closed and refastened after the flight [illegible]bille.

"That is what occurred to me for a moment, but it would imply an accomplice or accomplices, and I don't see"—

After a short silence he added:

"Ah, if Mlle. Stangerson were only well enough today to allow of her being questioned!"

Rouletabille, following up his thought, asked:

"And the attic? There must be some opening to that?"

"Yes; there is a window or, rather, skylight in it, which, as it looks out toward the country, M. Stangerson has had barred, like the rest of the windows. These bars, as in the other windows, have remained intact, and the blinds, which naturally open inward, have not been unfastened. For the rest, we have not discovered anything to lead us to suspect that the murderer had passed through the attic."

"It seems clear to you, then, monsieur, that the murderer escaped—nobody knows how—by the window in the vestibule?"

"Everything goes to prove it."

"I think so too," confessed Rouletabille gravely.

After a brief silence he continued:

"If you have not found any traces of the murderer in the attic, such as the dirty footmarks similar to those on the floor of the yellow room, you [illegible] who not be who stole Daddy Jacques' revolver."

"There are no footmarks in the attic other than those of Daddy Jacques himself," said the magistrate with a significant turn of his head. Then, after an apparent decision, he added, "Daddy Jacques was with M. Stangerson in the laboratory, and it was lucky for him he was."

"Then what part did his revolver play in the tragedy? It seems very clear that this weapon did less harm to Mlle. Stangerson than it did to the murderer."

The magistrate made no reply to this question, which doubtless embarrassed him. "M. Stangerson," he said, "tells us that the two bullets have been found in the yellow room, one [illegible] the impression of a red hand—a man's large hand—and the other in the ceiling."

"Oh, oh, in the ceiling!" muttered Rouletabille. "In the ceiling! That's very curious! In the ceiling!"

He puffed awhile in silence at his pipe, enveloping himself in the smoke. When we reached Epinay-sur-Orge I had to tap him on the shoulder to arouse him from his dream and come out on to the platform of the station.

There the magistrate and his registrar bowed to us and, by rapidly getting into a cab that was awaiting them, made us understand that they had seen enough of us.

"How long will it take to walk to the Chateau du Glandier?" Rouletabille asked one of the railway porters.

"An hour and a half or an hour and three-quarters—easy walking," the man replied.

Rouletabille looked up at the sky and, no doubt finding its appearance satisfactory, took my arm and said:

"[illegible] on! I was a wise. It was a bit of luck our falling in with that examining magistrate and his registrar, eh? What did I tell you about that revolver?"

His head was bent down, he had his hands in his pockets, and he was whistling. After awhile I heard him murmur:

"Poor woman!"

"Is it Mlle. Stangerson you are pitying?"

"Yes. She's a noble woman and worthy of being pitied—a woman of a great, a very great, character, I imagine—I imagine."

"You know her, then?"

"Not at all. I have never seen her but once."

"Why, then, do you say that she is a woman of great character?"

"Because she bravely faced the murderer, because she courageously defended herself, and, above all, because of the bullet in the ceiling."

CHAPTER IV.

"In the Bosom of Wild Nature."

THE Chateau du Glandier is one of the oldest chateaux in the Ile de France, where so many building remains of the feudal period are still standing. Built originally in the heart of the forest in the reign of Philip le Bel, it now could be seen a few hundred yards from the road leading from the village of Sainte-Genevieve to Montlhery. A mass of inharmonious structures, it is dominated by a donjon.

It was in this place, seemingly belonging entirely to the past, that Professor Stangerson and his daughter installed themselves to lay the foundations for the science of the future.

When M. Stangerson bought the estate, fifteen years before the tragedy with which we are engaged occurred, the Chateau du Glandier [illegible] long time been unoccupied. Another [illegible] in the fourteenth century by Jean de Belmont, was also abandoned, so that that part of the country was very [illegible] an inn, called the Auberge du Donjon, which offered passing hospitality to wagoners—these were about all to represent civilization in this out of the way part of the country, but a few leagues from the capital.

But this deserted condition of the place had been the determining reason for the choice made by M. Stangerson and his daughter. M. Stangerson was already celebrated. He had returned from America, where his works had made a great stir. The book which he had published at Philadelphia, on the "Dissociation of Matter by Electric Action," had aroused opposition throughout the whole scientific world. M. Stangerson was a Frenchman, but of American origin. Important matters relating to a legacy had kept him for several years in the United States, where he had continued the work begun by him in France, whither he had returned in possession of a large fortune.

Mlle. Stangerson was at the time [illegible] bought the Glandier estate [illegible] years of age. She was exceedingly pretty, having at once the Parisian grace of her mother, who had died in giving her birth, and all the [illegible], all the riches of the young American blood of her paternal grandfather, William Stangerson. A citizen of Philadelphia, William Stangerson had been obliged to become naturalized in obedience to family exigencies at the time of his marriage with a French lady.

Twenty years of age, a charming blond, with blue eyes, milk white complexion and radiant with divine health, Mathilde Stangerson was one of the most beautiful marriageable girls in either the old or the new world. It was her father's duty, in spite of the inevitable pain which a separation from her would cause him, to think of her marriage, and he was fully prepared for it. Nevertheless he buried himself and his child at the Glandier at the moment when his friends were expecting him to bring her out into society.

Questioned by her friends, the young girl replied calmly, "Where could we work better than in this solitude?" For Mlle. Stangerson had already begun to collaborate with her father in his work. It could not at the time be imagined that her passion for science would lead her so far as to refuse all the suitors who presented themselves to her for over fifteen years. The young girl's extreme reserve did not at first discourage suitors, but at the end of a few years they tired of their [illegible].

One alone persisted with tender tenacity and deserved the name of "eternal fiance," a name he accepted with melancholy resignation; that was M. Robert Darzac. Mlle. Stangerson was now no longer young, and it seemed that, having found no reason for marrying at five and thirty, she would never find one.

Suddenly some weeks before the events with which we are occupied a report—to which nobody attached any importance, so incredible did it sound—was spread about Paris that Mlle. Stangerson had at last consented to "crown" the inextinguishable flame of M. Robert Darzac. It needed that M. Robert Darzac himself should not deny this matrimonial rumor to give it an appearance of truth, so unlikely did it seem to be well founded. One day, however, M. Stangerson, as he was leaving the Academy of Science, announced that the marriage of his daughter and M. Robert Darzac would be celebrated in the privacy of the Chateau du Glandier as soon as he and his daughter had put the finishing touches to their report summing up their labors on the "Dissociation of Matter." The new household would [illegible] in-law would lend his assistance in the work to which the father and daughter had dedicated their lives.

The scientific world had barely had time to recover from the effect of this news when it learned of the attempted assassination of mademoiselle.

A LESSON THAT FAILED.

Don't Go Too Far When Asking a Father For His Girl.

"I don't suppose," the timid young man said as he tremblingly approached her father, "that you will be inclined to grant the request I have to make, Mr. Goodiman, but"—

"Stop!" the millionaire commanded. "I know what you're here for. My daughter told me this morning that you would call on me today. She made a strong plea for you, and I promised her that I'd listen to you patiently, but you have just about convinced me that you're not the kind of chap I want for a son-in-law."

"Wh-why, what have I done—what have I said to c-cause you to fe-feel that way?"

"I'll tell you. You came in [illegible] ing you didn't expect me to consent to let you have my daughter. That's no way to begin. If you expect to get along in the world you'll have to get over that way of approaching people. You should have come to me with a feeling of confidence in your breast and with words on your lips that would have indicated that you didn't doubt for a moment that you'd carry your point. Why, when I asked my wife's father for her I went up to him with all the confidence in the world, slapped him on the back and let him understand that I hadn't a doubt of my ability to win his consent."

"All right, old man. Seeing that there's no reason why Genevieve and I shouldn't get married, you'll of course give your consent, and remember that I expect you to do something handsome in the way of handing out a check as a wedding present. [illegible] you understand—no $10,000 check that is to be torn up after the guests leave or"—

Five minutes later the young man woke up on the sidewalk and began wondering how one was to be able to tell how to go far enough without going too far.—Chicago Record-Herald.

And a Bargain at That.

A little boy had got into the habit of saying "darn," of which his mother naturally did not approve.

"Dear," she said to the little boy, "here is 10 cents. It is yours if you will promise me not to say 'darn' again."

"All right, mother," he said as he took the money; "I promise."

As he lovingly fingered the money a hopeful look came into his eyes and he said, "Say, mother, I know a word that's worth 50 cents."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Was Suspicious.

A Scotchman at the dentist's was told that he must take gas. While the dentist was getting it ready the Scot began to count his money.

The dentist said somewhat testily, "You need not pay until the tooth is out."

"I ken that," said the Scotchman, "but as ye're about to make me sleep I just want to see how I stand."—[illegible]

Very Real.

"What I like about you, dear," said George in a smothered tone of voice, "is that you're just yourself."

George was right, except for about a peck of some one else's hair, a wire jimmy, a small pharmacy of paint and powder and seven bushels of nature's only rivals.—Minneapolis Minnehaha.

A Leader.

"Didn't you tell me Pete Joe was one of the leading citizens of Crimson Gulch?"

"Well," answered Broncho Bob, "he was. When he left town he led the vigilance committee by a quarter of a mile clean to the next county."—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Hard to Portray.

"I don't think the book will dramatize well."

"Why not?"

"The hero has a good many mental struggles, but that kind of combats don't go well on the stage."—Houston Chronicle.

Rude Audience.

Usher—Ladies, the audience wishes you to keep still during this performance.

Ladies—Heavens! Is it possible that the audience hasn't heard this old opera before?—Cleveland Leader.

As Usual.

He played the "kitty" to the end, And then the jack pots came, So now his wife does laundry work, She's paying for his game.

NEW YORK'S LATIN QUARTER.

Old Stables Occupied as Studios by Eminent Artists.

Turning north from Washington square, up Macdougal street, you come upon a little alley leading back behind the houses that face on the north side of the square. A sign says this is Macdougal alley. Really it is "the alley." It is the closest approach, perhaps, to a Latin quarter in New York. It is in external aspect and in its spirit unique. It is devoted entirely to horses, black cats and the fine arts. The alley once upon a time was entirely lined with little stables, where the Washington square aristocrats kept their horses. It still appears to be lined with stables, but if you look closer you observe that most of them have studio lights and shades at the upper windows. If you look still closer at the plates on the tiny entrance doors you will read the names of artists known over the entire country.

The first studio in the alley is inhabited by James Fraser, who was at one time a pupil of Saint-Gaudens. The next stable is the home of Edwin W. Deming, who can talk with any Indian in his own dialect and who paints Indian scenes and legends with the grace and charm of Greek mythology. A little farther on Daniel Chester French, one of the leading sculptors of the country, has a studio. The next stable is the home of Blendon Campbell, painter and illustrator. Next door live A. P. Proctor, the animal painter and sculptor, and Victor Salvatore, a young Italian, who learned to model while helping Mr. Fraser in his studio and who now has plenty of work of his own. Still another sculptor is Chester Beach.

At the end of the alley, in a stable differentiated from the rest only by two bits of Italian marbles standing before the entrance, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney works every day, though, of course, she does not live there. Mrs. Whitney, who was Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, is no mere amateur. She works as hard as the rest and on the same terms of competition. She executes professional commissions and has been accepted into the fraternal life of the alley as one of the artistic band.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Why Iron Rusts.

British investigators estimate that the rails of a single railroad system in England lose eighteen tons of weight every day and that the larger part of this loss is due to the efforts of rust. The problem of rust is of great economical importance not only because of such losses as that just mentioned, but also because of the great expense involved in repainting iron and steel structures in order to preserve them. Thus $10,000 a year is spent in painting the great Scotch bridge over the Forth. Recent experiments indicate that pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust. It appears to be necessary for the production of rust that some acid, notably carbonic acid, shall be present. When iron is subjected to the action of water containing traces of acid and in the presence of atmospheric oxygen it always rusts. The rapid rusting of iron in railroad stations is ascribed to the presence of sulphuric acid derived from the smoke of locomotives.—Harper's Weekly.

Tax Dodging In Japan.

Lately I have been far afield in a small Japanese-English dictionary, from which I have culled a choice collection of words peculiar to the country, such as An—A small house inhabited by a Buddhist priest.

Araigome—Washed rice offered to idols.

Onden—Rice fields about which a [illegible]

Now idols are all very well, for even in this country we have idols (of sorts) to which we devote more precious gifts than much washed rice, also no idol nourished merely on rice will be able to [illegible] withstand the assaults of the higher criticism. But it is rather melancholy to find that tax dodging is not unknown to that most patriotic though by no means lightly taxed nation.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Beautiful Alloy.

Dr. Roberts-Austen of England has succeeded in making out of gold and aluminium a compound metal or alloy which is said to be the most brilliant known. Its general hue is a splendid purple, but as it is turned in the light it reflects bright tints of ruby color. A little more than three-quarters—more accurately 78 per cent—of the alloy is gold, the remainder being aluminium. Certain of the expectations with respect to the possibility of substituting aluminium for steel and iron are not likely to be realized, but that metal is proving of great use in combination with others, and the discovery of Dr. Roberts-Austen is expected to lead to the production of very beautiful effects in jewelry.—Harper's Weekly.

Hold Your Breath and Ascend.

Scientists of Europe have lately been conducting experiments in the art of breathing and as a result have discovered some interesting conclusions. The theory is advanced that by abnormal control of the breathing powers, the breath being held for an unusually long time, a person may "ascend into the astral realm" and commune with things higher up. One of the scientists claims to have demonstrated that rapid breathing of pure air acts as an anaesthetic and renders a person immune to pain as long as it is maintained. Of course after the rapid inhalations cease the pain will be felt. By a little training a person may induce sound sleep by deep and rapid breathing for a few minutes.

BERNICE ALLEN.

Chorus Girl With Wonderful Hair.

MISS BERNICE ALLEN.

The illustration shows the picture of Bernice Allen, the "littlest girl" in the chorus of "The Skylark," a musical production which is likely to [illegible]

This small lady is only four feet eleven inches high, but the most wonderful thing about Miss Allen is her hair, which measures several inches longer than her petite self.

When asked what hair tonics, lotions and revitalizers, preparations most women have recourse to, she used Bernice Allen airily remarked, "Why, like Topsy, it jes' growed."

The following are Miss Allen's rules for care of the hair:

First.—Brush your hair every night and morning with a long bristle brush with ample space between.

Second.—Wash your hair not oftener than once every four weeks, using the best soap. Dry the hair thoroughly in the old fashioned way, avoiding electric fans and heated air, both of which tend to dry up the oil ducts at the roots.

Third.—Give your hair plenty of sunshine.

Fourth.—Avoid doing your hair up tightly and never use sharply pointed hairpins.

Fifth.—When retiring arrange your hair in two loose braids.

Sixth.—Massage the scalp with the finger tips very gently for ten minutes before doing the hair up for the night.

Net Frocks Are Smart This Year.

The new silk net called "reslile" is making many of the most attractive afternoon or "teat" gowns of the summer. This material is as durable as grenadine, which it closely resembles. The gown in the illustration is of this net in a lovely shade of amethyst and is trimmed with satin ribbon to match.

[illegible]

How Noah Used His Time.

The scene was a Scotch schoolroom. A class was being examined in Scripture knowledge by his majesty's inspector.

"Can any boy or girl tell me how Noah would be likely to use his time while in the ark?" he asked.

There was silence for some time, but at length one boy timidly showed his hand, and on being asked what he thought replied:

"Please, sir, he wad fish."

"Well, yes, he might," admitted the inspector.

Presently another little fellow was seen to wave his hand excitedly, and on being asked to speak said:

"Please, he couldna fish verra lang."

"What makes you think so, my little man?" asked the inspector.

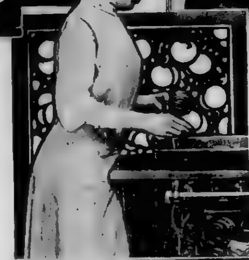
"Because there were only two worms in the ark," was the reply.

Canning at Home

Cans Should be Standing in Hot Water

Keep Tomatoes at a Slow Steady Boil

Wrap Each Can of Fruit in a Thick Paper



Rubbers and Tops are Sterilized

IN A satirical sketch by Grace Greenwood, published fifty years ago, a silly woman, married to an intellectual man, is made to say:

"If I were the queen I would have Christmas come in warm weather, so that the children could take their new toys out of doors. They make so much noise in the house."

My fellow-housewives recollect, with me, how often and how fervently we have wished that canning time would come in cold weather instead of in the "muggy" heat of the heated term.

Mem.: Lest the fastidious reader should take exception to that word as slangy or provincial, let me say here that Byron applied it to certain close, warm days of an Italian winter, and the Century Dictionary defines it as "damp and close, warm and humid; containing moisture in suspension." If the learned lexicographers add that "the word is probably confounded with 'mucky,'" we take no note of the qualification.

Nineteen times out of twenty the muggy days are in full possession of the earth just when fruit is fully ripe and tomatoes are in their market prime. As a consequence when fruits and vegetables are cheapest and canning, like the tide in the affairs of men, must be taken at the flood if one would be prosperous in the work [illegible]

"Would you mind going in here with me? I want to make some small purchases," he said.

She accompanied him.

He went up to the counter and said: "I want 'Macaulay's History of England.'"

The assistant said: "We do not sell books, sir, this is an ironmonger's shop."

"Well, I'm not particular," said Sothern, pretending to be deaf. "I don't care whether it is bound in calf or Russia."

"But this is not a bookseller's," shouted the assistant.

"All right," said Sothern. "Wrap it up neatly. Want to have it sent down to the hotel. It's a present I wish to make to a relative. Put it up nicely."

"I want to buy a file," returned Sothern quietly—"a plain file about four or five inches in length."

"Certainly," said the principal, [illegible]

Don't let the colts and young horses run down on short pastures, it don't pay.

Colts should always be kept growing.

Good grooming improves the appearance of a horse and also helps to keep him healthy.

Style in draft and road horses means money every time.

Attend meetings of horsemen, if you can, particularly if good horses are to be on exhibition. Learn all you can about horses and the kind most needed in your part of the country, and then try to do something to supply that need.

Give the horses some carrots or potatoes two or three times a week. Some people call this fussing, but it pays.

Don't let the breeding mare get down to skin and bone. It is bad for her and bad for the colt. Give her extra feed and care.

CARE AND FEED IN WINTERING HOGS

UNDOUBTEDLY there are better methods of caring for and wintering hogs than some of us are practicing now, but if we all give our views and methods to the public, we can all derive some benefit from one another; for the practical hog breeder and feeder will always be on the lookout for pointers; he will sift out those good methods that best conform to existing conditions, [illegible] sleep in one place, but make the pens small, and the extra expense of making more pens will repay itself in one winter.

I would like to hear of some of the methods followed by other breeders, as we can all help one another by getting closer together and exchanging ideas. We all make mistakes now and then, but should try and profit by some of them, and those made by others.

A man only progresses as he learns from the experience of himself and others following the same line of business. This is true of hog business as well as many other lines of business.

WEDDED TO WOOD

IN the midst of the Bay of Bengal is a little-known group of islands called the Nicobars. It is inhabited by a half savage people who have an extraordinary taste for image making. They make images of everything imaginable, carving them out of wood, and utilizing them as fetiches to keep off bad luck and evil spirits. For this purpose they hang them up in their houses, and sometimes the rafters are fairly crowded with the wooden images.

Missionaries have made these people at least nominal converts to Christianity. They did their best for quite a while to discourage the business of manufacturing "idols"—regarding the images as corresponding to that description more or less. But the natives refuse to be broken of the habit, and, without intending any irreverence, they have not hesitated to picture carven representations of angels, and of the missionaries themselves, the latter being appropriately adorned with stove pipe hats.

Catching a Tiger Shark on the South Carolina Coast

HE was called Spotted Jack, from the numerous splotches of dark color that adorned his huge body from head to tail. His size, too, had increased from the moderate length of sixteen feet to that of forty, as yarn after yarn would be spun by the excited fishermen concerning the depredations committed by his lordship among the fishing tackle on the reef and also among the set lines put for his capture.

I saw him once, while fishing for red bass on the shallows. It was only a glimpse of two huge fins protruding some two feet out of the water and the propeller-like motion of the big tail as it worked—forcing the long, dark body swiftly across the treacherous shoals into the deep and safer waters of the channels.

There was no denying it. He was a nuisance and a menace to the fishing interests of the season, and, unless some means were adopted to rid the beach of his presence, our favorite pastime would be at an end, for this summer at least. Several attempts had been made to catch him—big set lines being used, baited with full-grown mullets. But the fishermen never seemed to consider his great size and strength, or the rigs put out may have been old and rotten. Some reason was always advanced by way of explanation by those whose repeated attempts had always resulted in complete failure, and still he lived and spread havoc along the fishing grounds. He invariably came off victorious—each time leaving three or four expensive rigs smashed at the end of the fight. It was useless to attempt to land him with the ordinary line. Something stronger must be used—a strong quarter-inch line and two hundred feet in length. Steel hooks, too, with chain leaders to match. This would be my outfit. And I lost no time in getting it up. Big lines they were and beauties, but I needed just such a rig. Fourteen or perhaps fifteen feet in length, he would prove an ugly customer, even with the aid of steel and hemp, backed by three strong men and a big stake or log conveniently near at hand, to take a turn around when the strain proved too great.

Thus I figured out the cost of battle, as we went into camp that night. It was late—too late on the tide to put out the big lines then. So we contented ourselves, my man and I, with discussing our plans for the following day, while we carefully examined our fishing gear.

The streaks of early dawn found us up and on the move. Assigning to Dave the task of putting out and staking the big lines, I pushed on to the slough that separated the fishing grounds from the main beach, and, crossing waist deep, found myself on the big reef known as Southeast Breaker—a long, low sand bar that reached far out to sea and which was covered only by the highest tides. Gazing at the endless white fringe of pounding breakers, I selected the calmest spot, and, whirling my heavy sinker three or four times around my head, I hurled it far out into the creamy white waters of the shoal—there to stay until lifted by some of the scaly inhabitants of the reef.

Dave, having now finished his task of putting out the slack lines, arrived upon the scene. He was very much concerned at having seen the big spotted fish, he said, some distance down the beach and heading our way. He was sure of trouble, for his right ear had been ringing all the morning, "and dat shore am an unfailing sign." Accordingly, as is the custom of the superstitious blacks, he made a cross upon the sands, spat upon his line, and hove it far out—intent upon getting the first bite and landing the first bass.

I now searched every inch of the white sweeping waste before me for the big fins and mottled back of Spotted Jack, but, as it was still dark, I saw nothing to alarm me; so hopefully our mind that he had taken some other route—leaving us to enjoy our fishing without interruption.

The flood tide flowed in sluggishly, taking a long time to cover the tail of the reef and fill the slight depression thereon, in which we expected to have the best sport and catch the most fish. Consequently we had a long time to wait patiently standing in the chilly water at four o'clock in the morning, with a raw breeze blowing from the south-east which penetrated the innermost recesses of the body and caused one to sigh for the sheltered seclusion of the ever warm myrtle thicket and protected sand dunes of the Point. This was a job for which we had no liking and Dave showed signs of weariness as he coiled up his line and yawned, while walking to his fishing box for the purpose of replacing the bait stolen by the annoying crabs and small fish. Another hour passed, and still our lines rode straight out in front of us. This was discouraging. As for me, my legs gave out and I was tired and disgusted with the monotonous routine of throwing out and winding up again, without a single bite to encourage me. Where the fish had gone to I knew not.

However, the water on the bar was not yet deep enough for bass, and, after all, we had the whole day ahead of us and the best of the tide to fish out. So, with these cheering reflections, I retreated to higher ground, and, being somewhat exhausted, sat on my box and dozed—lulled by the soothing sound of rippling water that unceasingly swept in and as unceasingly retreated, carrying with it the annoying little minnows that viciously nibbled at my white toes as they lay half submerged in the soft sand and shallow water of the reef. Fifty yards away, like a statue cut out of ebony, stood Dave, my faithful friend and servant, with drooping head and closed eyelids—himself a victim to the seductive influence of the hour and the narcotic effects of the salt sea air.

Away out, somewhere in the mysterious depths of that great heaving mass of waters, lay our lines. Armed with six big steel hooks, each baited with a mullet and anchored with great sinkers of some two pounds each and so constructed as to withstand the undertow and thus keep the rig in position. Fearing that I might lose my line by having it jerked out of my hand during one of my cat naps, I made a noose through which I inserted my hand; then, tightening it somewhat around my wrist, I once more gave way to the drowsiness that for the last two hours had taken complete possession of me. Turning up the collar of my coat to protect my neck and throat, I endeavored to keep awake awhile—heartily wishing myself ensconced amongst the blankets of my tent, nestling snugly amid the distant sand dunes of the Point. The crash and roar of the breakers grew fainter and more remote. My senses grew confused, and soon I was dozing soundly—only to be ruthlessly awakened by a jerk that almost dislocated my arm. The next moment I found myself pulled from my seat into the shallow water and being rapidly towed to sea at a rate that almost took away my breath. At first I attempted to make a stand—digging my toes into the sand and bracing for dear life. But I might just as well have pitted my puny strength against that of a tugboat as to attempt to turn the big fish at the end of my line.

It did not take me a second to realize what had happened. I had hooked many a shark, clam-cracker and other heavy and hard pulling fish frequenting this coast line, but nothing whose strength could approach that of this rampant monster that was surely and swiftly taking me out beyond my depth. Shark or devil fish—judging from his towing powers—one was as bad as the other. It all happened in a second. Yelling for Dave, and vigorously contesting every inch of my seaward journey took up all my spare time. My fish was fighting to gain deep water while I strained every nerve in my body to turn his head and coax him shoreward. The line cut into my wrist fearfully, and I made several fruitless attempts to loosen up the slip-knot, but never succeeding in accomplishing anything, gave it up and exerted all my strength in trying to part it. In this I likewise failed. Things were now taking a serious turn. Unless I could detach myself from the line, I would surely be carried beyond my depth and drowned. Even now, I was half strangled by the ducking I got every few minutes; for the short roll [illegible]

[illegible] my entire body from head to foot. Then I would pop up on the other side, only to see a straight bar of white line cutting deeply through the next wave—a line, too, made of our famous long stapled Sea Island cotton, strong and tough as a bar of steel wire. I groaned in spirit for I well knew that it would cut through my wrist even to the bone, before there would part one fibre of the tough and closely spun cotton cord. No—there was no earthly chance of its parting. This I knew and my heart [illegible] as I thought of what the very next few minutes might bring about. Dead! Heavens! I could not die with just a small line, a mere cord, between me and freedom. Break it I would, even if the blood [illegible] and the flesh tore apart. Thoroughly excited I continued to call at the top of my voice for Dave, hoping he would come to my rescue. Deeper and deeper grew the water, as the great fish slowly [illegible]

ly fought and tugged, while the [illegible] seas of the bank buffeted us about [illegible] bottom. Giddy from the whirl [illegible] swish of the onrushing breakers, [illegible] heads swam and we felt weak and faint from the strain of the heavy pull, and down the big reef we raced, to the surf line; then in again we w[illegible] ed panting. Now almost drowned [illegible] an avalanche of spray from some [illegible] perceived wave; anon gasping [illegible] breath, as the salt spray would [illegible] ed into our heaving lungs. All [illegible] while losing ground, foot by foot we [illegible] vanced further into the great str[illegible] of moving, swaying green water of [illegible] channel, with never the ghost [illegible] chance to check his outward run [illegible] make a stand for even a moment [illegible] for the knife in the darkie's hand [illegible] had not time to reach for it and he [illegible] to let it go and hand it to me. [illegible] left hand was always employed in [illegible] ing the strain on my right wrist; [illegible] wise the line would have soon cut [illegible] through to the bone.

Now a jerk throws us forward on [illegible] faces, far beneath the surface of [illegible] tide. Dave is the first to regain [illegible] feet and I see him fumbling for [illegible] weapon I am so anxious to possess [illegible] muster up enough breath to shout [illegible] "Quick! The knife!" Then [illegible] again we go together. A moment [illegible] fearful ear-ringing and again we [illegible] up, frantically coughing the water [illegible] throat and lungs. I feel that this [illegible] not last long. "Try for turn [illegible] Boss! Try fer turn um! We g[illegible] ter drown!" comes in gasps from [illegible] dusky companion, and I know that [illegible] too, is failing. Even now I am on [illegible] point of giving up and quietly dr[illegible] ing, not as a puppy or kitten would [illegible] repeatedly pushed beneath the sur[illegible] by the hand. I feel weak and d[illegible] But, even as I give up, my fish [illegible] to weaken for the first time since [illegible] The great strain of a moment [illegible] suddenly relaxes and the white st[illegible] of line falls and disappears in the [illegible] and sweep of white water that [illegible] across the great bank; my fish, [illegible] appearances, has escaped; but, [illegible] once! as I am, I know the con[illegible] No such good luck! He is merely [illegible] ming in with the line and in no[illegible] [illegible] jolly [illegible] prehending being torn to pieces by [illegible] sharp teeth, we beat a hasty re[illegible] shoreward — straining waist [illegible] against the undertow and making [illegible] fearful outcry, to intimidate him [illegible] possible. Our progress, of course [illegible] slow and tedious, while his would [illegible] as swift as a swallow's.

Now, too, was my chance for cut[illegible] my wrist clear. Calling for the [illegible] which was handed me before [illegible] words were out of my lips, I q[illegible] slashed the stout cord and was [illegible] more free. I had had enough fishing [illegible] day; so I fought my way [illegible] through the surf for the beach, [illegible] seventy-five yards away and glist[illegible] in the noonday sun.

Being now free, I direct my atten[illegible] to lengthening our lines, thereby [illegible] ing a hundred and fifty feet to my [illegible] [illegible] and press into place. In case of a pulley, draw the leather around tightly as possible, lay and clamp.

SMALL, SWIFT, SURE

THE power pulley is an electrically operated winch recently designed to enable quick coaling of war ships. Apart from its original destination it may, however, be used for a multitude of other purposes both on land and on board ship.

This pulley is designed for a load of sixty pounds at a lifting speed of six feet per second. Four seconds are thus required for lifting the whole basket to a height of twenty-three feet, taking into account the acceleration in starting and the slackening in stopping. The motor is sufficiently strong to stand temporary overloads up to one hundred pounds.

Apart from its simplicity in operation and high working speed, the power pulley is especially valuable because of its ease of transport, the more so as on the modern ships of the Dreadnaught type the deck should be cleared as far as possible for military operations.

The motor is started by a simple switch without a starting box. A simple device allows the hook when empty to be lowered as far as desired, so that packages at any depth may be reached.

THE RAVENOUS RAT

A RECENT flood in the Ohio River drove the big grey river rats from its shores and retaining walls through sewers to the stores and residences of Middleport, Ohio.

The morning after the flood had reached its highest point, a stream of water broke through the ceiling of a meat shop in that town from a pool drawn above. A hurried investigation showed that a rat had gnawed away more than half of a two-inch [illegible] pipe leading to a sink above. The [illegible] were left on the ceiling where [illegible] rat had firm footing and a good place to work. Evidently [illegible] was after the grease lining the inside of the pipe. To reach that it was but necessary to cut a small hole in the pipe. Why did the rat go on and cut the pipe more than half in two and for several inches [illegible]

A careful examination of the section of damaged pipe shows conclusively that the rat went at the job in a workmanlike way. After cutting a hole through to the cavity [illegible] [illegible] the sharp teeth leaving just set marks.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. Then it is polished, much as marble and granite are, by means of a rapidly revolving disk of cast iron called a rubbing bed, which is kept covered with a sprinkling of fine sand continually saturated with water. The slate is bored by means of diamond pointed drills.

Slate land was once so little valued that the tract upon which the famous Chapman quarry is situated was sold for a pint of liquor. Its subsequent owners have taken millions of dollars from it.

[illegible] is chiefly associated with mathematical computations and with roofs, but it is now used for many things besides school slates and roof coverings. Out of it are made sidewalks, the walls of dwelling houses, floors, stairways, door and window sills, chimney tops, fence posts, bathtubs, mangers, mantel pieces, blackboards, and many other things.

It can be sawed and worked so accurately that bathtubs and cisterns are made perfectly watertight, simply by joining the edges of the slate blocks.

So useful a material is naturally a source of wealth where it is found. There exist deposits of slate in Great Britain, Italy, France and other European countries, as well as in several of the United States. The most productive American slate beds are in the central and eastern parts of Pennsylvania.

[illegible]

There is always, however, a very delicate point for a judge to decide, and that is the difference between a driver who lays up a heat in order to win a race and the one who deliberately pulls to lose a race. There are well known drivers of known honesty who would not sell a race, but who will lay up a heat if by doing so they can eventually win, and as long as the heat system of racing continues they will continue the practice. There would be little harm in this but for the practice of betting on heats. A horse wins one or two hard heats, the driver decides to go an easy heat. The outsiders on the strength of the previous winning, back the horse for the next heat and get no show for their money. They have lost it as soon as it went into the bookmaker's hands. Bookmaking on heats should be absolutely prohibited. We believe a man has a right to back his opinion, but it is the duty of the associations, so long as they permit it, to see that he gets a square game. The big bettors who go to the pool box know exactly what they [illegible]

LIQUID CURES ECZEMA WHERE SALVES FAIL

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this.

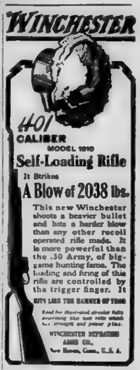
Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about alone by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A trial bottle will start the cure, and give you instant relief. Write for it to-day to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. [illegible], Toronto.

For sale by all druggists.



Unless you treat your ailments in the right way, you can't expect to cure them. We'll buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen) from your druggist and give it to you free to show you how effective is the right way.

It's not so long ago that the doctors bled a man to make him strong.

"Stuff a cold and starve a fever" is miles behind our to-day's knowledge of curative science, yet our fathers had it preached to them time and again.

They're responsible for the hundreds of thousands that Psychine has cured since that time.

It's because of these herbs that we have received hundreds of thousands of testimonials attesting to wonderful cures that Psychine has made.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

Fighting the Fierce Malays

From the Narrative of Private T. Smith, Late of the Buffs

I BELONG to the good old school of British soldiers, and my parchment, as you see, shows that I served more than twenty-three years with the colors. I entered the Army as a private, and left it with the same rank, so I know what the real feeling of the rank and file man is about fighting. I can tell you that there is nothing he prays for more keenly than to go on active service, especially when he is stationed at a hot place like Calcutta.

All the same, some of us were a bit excited when we knew that we were going out into the jungle to settle matters up with the Malays. They had the reputation in those days of being little better than wild beasts, and they looked on murder, mutilation, and piracy as fine sport.

There was a pretender to the crown of Perak named Ismail, and he headed a robber band who ripped the British flag down from the Residency and murdered the Resident, Mr. Birch. A few British troops in Perak made a gallant effort to smash the murderers, but the leader, Captain Innes, was killed, and reinforcements were sent out at once from India and China.

My battalion, about 600 strong, embarked in a troopship for the Straits Settlements. I had been anxious to get out of Calcutta, but, bad as the Indian climate was, I should have been very thankful to get back, after learning what campaigning in Perak meant. I had gone from bad to worse.

The Malays were jubilant because of their little triumph, and they squatted each a heap in a stockade, and invited the British to come on—which the British did as soon as the naval and military forces were strong enough to set to work to root out the little yellow fellows.

You could not dream of a worse country for fighting in than Perak. There [illegible] into the jungle from boats on the Perak River to clear a way so that the troops could drive the Malays out of a stockade which they were defending stubbornly.

For a while the yellow men held their own; but the hissing rockets and bursting shells were more than they could endure, and they had no special fancy to face the gleaming British bayonets on the roll, carved "[illegible]."

They collapsed and scuttled, dragging away their dead and wounded, but leaving half-a-dozen guns, as well as some rifles and muskets and ammunition. These things were not of much use to us, but their loss weakened the enemy's power a good deal.

Week after week we struggled through the swamps and slimy, green walls of vegetation, scattering the Malays wherever they were found, and striving to get hold of the men who had been responsible for the murder and the war.

They snipped us repeatedly, and no wonder in a country like that, with hiding places at every turn. The man hunting became monotonous, and we reckoned that we were lucky when, at the end of the day's work, we could discuss a fight of some sort.

Christmas time was coming, and still the dreary game dragged on. There was not an Englishman either on the swiftly flowing river or in the steamy sweltering jungle who would not gladly have given most of his possessions to sniff the sharp frost of an English December morning and sit down to a Christmas meal.

Some of the men who drew fine pictures of a joyful British Christmas and what they would do when they got home again never lived to escape from the East, and there were others who ran a big peril of losing their miserable Christmas dinner in the jungle, amongst them being a gallant officer named [illegible]

Mr. T. M. Marsh of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, has had this wonderful experience of Zam-Buk. Mr. Marsh has lived in Montreal for over 30 years, many of them at his present address. He is well known and is willing to satisfy any enquirer as to the genuineness of his cure. He suffered 25 years from eczema in the hands and had to wear gloves day and night, the itching was so terrible when the air got to the sores. Doctors said there was no cure. Three years ago Zam-Buk cured him. Interviewed a few weeks ago he said:—

"From the day I was cured by Zam-Buk to the present moment I have had no trace of the eczema and feel sure it will never return. When I think of the marvellous cure Zam-Buk worked in my case I am more and more impressed by the value of this great household balm. I have had letters of enquiry from all over Canada, and am glad to personally corroborate the published facts of my cure."

Killed At Vegreville

Vegreville, Jan. 13.—A very sad accident occurred about three miles north of here, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon, resulting in the death of S. T. Green, a farmer [illegible] at this place. It seems Mr. Green was moving grain from one building to another with a team and sleigh and when passing with his load over a rough sloping place in the road the load was overturned pinning him beneath it. He was found some time later by his wife, but when a physician arrived life was extinct.

A MYSTERY STORY

(By WILLIAM JOHNSTON and PAUL WEST)

The Disappearance of the Professor

IF the simplest of occurrences the simplest of events has not been forthcoming Gwen of our Argus members sought a place where the fishing was better and the vegetation of rarer hue than in the vicinity of Argus. On account of the most remarkable mystery that has been solved

Jacob Hopkins, professor of chemistry at Argus College has not been seen at his private[illegible] left a check on the 3rd of May last, 1910, and on the same day his house for his laboratory was empty.

It has now been learned the small quantity of his hardware that he took with him just as he had carried it to the laboratory on the previous day.

The total quantity to be taken where he removed his trunk and bedding to there is not known, nor is it of importance. Nothing unusual in the demeanor of the professor during the day in question was noticed by any of the students in the college. A check for a small sum was drawn and cashed by the professor before leaving the college.

It is now almost to the day one a month since the professor disappeared.

School Work

Dear Sir,—

With your permission, Editor, I give below some of my work in Vermilion School, with comments on some phrases of their daily work.

Assuming a new position, the teacher's first care is to get acquainted with the discipline which he has inherited. His predecessor's success in this line depends largely on the amount of tact and skill he has displayed in the management of his school. If he has been successful in securing the confidence and respect of his pupils, the new teacher will find his task an easy one. If, on the other hand, he has been unsuccessful in this respect, the new teacher will find his task a difficult one. The first few days are the most important in the history of the school. The new teacher should be very careful not to make any changes in the discipline of the school, but should endeavor to gain the confidence and respect of the pupils by his kindness and tact.

The Innocent Murderers

A MYSTERY STORY

(By WILLIAM JOHNSTON and PAUL WEST)

Shadows on the Blind

"STAND back!" cried Hopkins, as Rice took a step toward him. "Stand back, or I will kill you!"

"Something must be done," said Rice to Fischer. "We must overpower him."

Hopkins overheard a [illegible] from a madman [illegible]

"That being the case," went on Rice, [illegible] "and we saw her or her shadow, with Hopkins in the laboratory [illegible]" to our homes ven ve heard der sound of a fall. Investigating, we decided dat it came from der laboratory. We found der door of dot room open, and inside on der floor lay der body. Dat is all."

"Whereupon," said Rice, falling into Fischer's manner of phraseology, "we sound the alarm, and our story is accepted."

"Dat is it," said Fischer. Turning [illegible]

in der morning already. Our presence in der building to-night is already known at least to der women. There is no way we could demand silence on her part without arousing suspicion. Dere fore we must act as follows:

"Dis is our story as we will tell it. [illegible] to discuss matters connected with der curriculum. Our business transacted, we were about to go [illegible]

And, as their eyes became more accustomed to looking at the figure, they discerned the face. It stared at them with wide-open fiery eyes, and through the parted lips seemed to come a steady glow of flame.

It was Fischer who first broke the silence. He said:

"Mein Gott! It would never do for der widow to look on her husband in such condition!"

CHAPTER VI

The Puzzle of the Diamond

"Has anybody seen Ernesta Frost to-night?"

Detective Sullivan, standing within earshot of a group of [illegible] students, strove to [illegible] in this question from [illegible]

[illegible]

"I guess Happy says her for her [illegible]

[illegible]

Professor Gordon very carefully he might learn of a quarrel between him and Ernesta. Perhaps the fact of her disappearance with Hopkins was the result of sudden pique.

"If the old fool was careless enough to leave that note where his wife could find it," he commented, "who knows but maybe he has left something around his laboratory that will give me the tip as to where they [illegible] If the college isn't carefully guarded I can find his laboratory in the dark. I may be able to turn a little trick to-night."

MOTORING NOTES

IT might be a very good thing for every driver of a motor car to seek an opportunity now and then of riding in the front seat of another car beside some other driver. It would perhaps make him a trifle more thoughtful of the uneasiness caused his own passengers when driving his own car. At any rate he would not be a passenger [illegible] the brakes [illegible] the driver to operate them; and it is quite possible that if they did not seem to respond as readily as they should he would be trying to push the foot board out of the car in an effort to assist in bringing the car to a stop.

Knowing the importance of always keeping the brakes of a car in the most [illegible] working order, the expert driver would no more think of driving his [illegible]

[illegible] out the country priding themselves upon their ability of keeping a car in first class condition whose brakes really are most criminally neglected. There are many drivers who do not know how to adjust the brakes, and there are others who know how the adjustments should be obtained but when putting their knowledge to the test find that their efforts are not greeted with success.

Starting a motor after it has been standing out in the cold for a few hours [illegible] effect. From the above statements it may be seen that when an oil has been used for too long a time it will have lost in one of its most essential requirements, its viscosity, and taken on an excessive amount of what is referred to as a pernicious constituent, granular carbon. The viscosity of an oil is its disposition to be creamy; it is a name applied to the internal friction between the globules which restricts its fluidity, and when it is stated that an oil has lost its viscosity one is to infer that it has lost its original creamy composition and become more like skim milk. The fat or grease globules in an oil are the elements that keep the lubricated surfaces sufficiently apart to prevent rubbing, and when these oily elements are burnt in the cylinders of a motor a fine carbon deposit is formed. Thus, when all or most of the oily contents of a lubricant are carbonized, it ceases to be an effective lubricant and becomes more of an abrasive.

In order that a motor may be properly lubricated the entire crankcase supply should be drained out and replaced with fresh oil about once a month, or more frequently, if the car is doing continuous and heavy duty, as when running under very muddy conditions, or on the lower gears on rough or hilly roads for any length of time. It is also advisable after the oil has been left in the crankcase for an unusually long time, to flush the crankcase out with kerosene to remove the sediment.

More and more attention continues to be given to the motor truck by writers on motorcars, as well as by manufacturers of them. Its use is not only spreading along lines in which it already has been found to be of great value, but along new ones, including the hearse. All this is true, not only of our country but of European lands, and notably so of France. In Paris no vacation is too [illegible] for commercial purposes; hence it is impossible to know exactly how many such cars are now in use in that city and its environs. Statistics, however, have been compiled by the Automobile Club of France, which in the main may be accepted as authentic. It appears from [illegible]

[illegible]

There is a prevailing [illegible]

built up race of 1907 was over a course of 233 miles. The course for this race has since remained about the same, with variations of a few miles only.

TONS OF DIAMONDS

AS with all precious metals and stones, the unit of weight usually employed in regard to diamonds is the carat, of which one hundred and fifty-one and one-half go to make up a single ounce, Troy. To think of tons of diamonds by the ton staggers the imagination; indeed, the output of one of the greatest diamond mines in Kimberley, South Africa, from which centre practically all diamonds come, is not more than half a ton annually. Recent statistics giving the output of the Kimberley mines and river diggings for the past three years place it at 8,200,000 carats, nearly a ton and three quarters. The monetary value of these diamonds was about $[illegible].

Since the first diamond was discovered by the banks of the Vaal in 1867, up to the present, it is estimated that the total weight of diamonds extracted from the South African mines is over fifteen tons, of a total value of fully $[illegible]. If statistics of this sort can be depended on, only about twenty-two tons of diamonds have been mined all over the world until within the past year or two.

THE HOBBIES OF ROYALTY

Flounces and fur are two most fashionable trimmings this winter and are used separately and together. The flounces are most effective in coloring and of the finest workmanship. The silk and velvet flounces are especially noticeable and the colors most unusual. The rather flat, low crowned hat of velvet and of beaver and velvet combined is a very smart with the wreath of flowers around the crown, and the lack [illegible] often lack. The point about these hats which makes them beloved by those to whom they are becoming is that they are not becoming to many faces and never are dangerously popular in consequence. LONG ago the imagination of Edgar Allan Poe discovered the South Pole [illegible] the remarkable adventures of Pym. Erecting Large Warehouse

A large distributing warehouse is in course of erection on First St. North west of the church of Christ, by the well known and energetic implement firm of West Brothers, town.

The new building, which is 40x60—is in addition to the firms present large quarters which are not ample enough to enable them to handle their goods—and will be stocked with International Harvester Co., tractors and implements for transhipment to outside points.

There are at the present time 3 cars of machinery in the Vermilion yards and another car now at Battleford for Messrs. West Brothers and work on the new large warehouse is being pushed by the contractors, Farrell & Walker, with all expedition.

Ethelwyn News

A. R. Goldsmith was re-appointed councillor for the Local Improvement Dis't.

At the U. F. A. meeting held at Cris Anderson's A. R. Goldsmith was elected president, I. an Richards, V. Pres. and H. A. L. McDonald, Secy-Treas. Considerable interest was manifested in the meetings, as the farmers are beginning to realise that Union is Strength. Let us see the name of every farmer entered as a member who is situated in the Ethelwyn L. I. A. Dis't.

The rate-payers of the Rye school district were called together on Jan. 11th to elect a new member on the school-board and to vote on a school site. All that was accomplished was the electing of John Lawrenson on the school. The question is, School or no school for the next year?

The King and His Court

WHEN their Majesties were at Balmoral, they had under consideration a number of alterations in the existing regulations of the Court, some of which have come already into effect though others will not come into operation until the Court is in residence at Buckingham Palace. One of the most important of the new regulations is one by which the four chief officers of the Household, namely, the Lord Chamberlain, the Master of the Household, the Master of the Horse and the Lord Steward, will meet at regular periods to confer on the working of their respective departments and to settle questions which are constantly arising between them.

[illegible]

The registered lists of the Royal Warrant holders will now be carefully investigated and will be personally examined by the King. There is no question but there are many bogus Royal Warrant holders, and it is a matter of much importance, both to the public and to the genuine warrant holders, that the matter should be carefully investigated.

In the matter, by the way, of the bestowal of orders King George will not be by any means so liberal as was his father.

The Royal Victorian Order and the Imperial Service Order were so freely distributed in the late reign that they ceased to be very highly valued and in more than one case the Victorian Order was refused.

A CHANGE OF MIND

(By Rev. J. G. Henshaw, in Outing Magazine)

THERE are certain freshwater officers who gain their titles solely by a close association with the water front. You can see them any day, scattered like organic mile posts along the river bank smoking, fishing, telling eternally of incidents that have never occurred. None of them have been to sea, few of them own even so much as a rowboat, yet they are captains every one.

All of them are old, all of them are idle. Each of them has his own particular spot overlooking the water, for, even in the easy acquirement of their titles, a certain amount of propriety must be observed. Of these Captain Wilkins was a type.

Watch for big posters for full list and particulars.

Commissioner Coombs and Colonel Lamb of the Salvation Army, have been touring the West and making arrangements for the placing of immigrants who will come to Canada under the auspices of the Salvation Army this spring. These will consist of farm laborers and domestic servants. A number of Canadian officers of the army are now in the old country for the purpose of selecting immigrants. The people who come to this country through the army are of a very desirable class, being carefully selected by experienced agents who are familiar with the needs of western Canadian farming communities. Any one in need of farm or domestic help, married or single, experienced or inexperienced, for this season's work, should at once get in touch with the Army. Write for application forms to the Salvation Army Immigration Department, 221 Rupert Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

A missionary meeting in connection with the Sunday School Association, will be held in the Church of Christ next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock to be addressed by Mr. W. Rich and others.

Though the absence of two rinks of curlers at the Edmonton bonspiel has kept some games back in the local curling competition for the "Blater Cup", there has been much evidence of enthusiasm on the ice. Three games were played off in the event during the week. C. Pilkie [illegible] lost to W. Pilkie and [illegible] succeeded in notching up two wins, defeating W. Pilkie 8-6 and [illegible] 11-8. Johnson, [illegible] evangelist for the Northern part of the Alberta Conference. It is earnestly desired that this movement should enlist the co-operation of all christian workers of the town, regardless of denomination.

As a preparation for these services the town has been divided into four sections with a chairman, secretary and committee of workers taken from the churches for each. Two local union prayer meetings are held each week on Tuesday evening in different parts of the town and also a general union prayer meeting in the Methodist church on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

All are cordially welcome to all of these meetings.

A Happy Event

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the residence of W. N. Trimble, First St. North, Vermilion, on Wednesday Jan. 18th at 2 o'clock, when William Ulrich Axley and Jennie Marie Swan, both of Islay, were united in matrimony.

The bride was daintily attired in white cashmere trimmed with lace, and was accompanied by Miss Grace Trimble, while the groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Benjamin Axley. The wedding guests included Mrs. J. Smith of Vermilion.

The happy couple will make their home at Spring Creek Ranch, Islay. Rev. E. J. Hodgins, B. A., Methodist minister, officiated.

G. H. W. Ryan, physician of Vermilion, has been appointed on the Board of Governors of University of Alberta. The board consists of nine members.

A rink of curlers skipped by Chas. Pilkie left Wednesday night to take in the Saskatoon bonspiel. The other members of the rink are Dr. [illegible] Brown, Dave Barry and Bob. McClinton.

The two Vermilion rinks are still showing up strong at Edmonton, though out of the Grand Challenge. Tweedy, Burns, and [illegible] [illegible] go into the [illegible] of the Brewery and Telford in the 8ths of the Visitors. Telford reached the 6ths in the Grand Challenge falling to Sheppard 10-1

Agreement with Vermilion Electric Supply Company Cancelled

Certain By-Laws Authorized

The town council met Monday night. His worship Mayor Dunsmore in the chair, and Councillors Roxborough, Rutherford, Cooper, McKane, Pilkie and Mackenzie, present. Minutes of previous meetings were read and approved.

The mayor read written opinion of the legal firm of Boyle, Parlee & Co. of Edmonton relative to town's right to rescind the Vermilion Electric Light Co's. franchise.

Mackenzie-Cooper—That the agreement of the town of Vermilion with the Vermilion Electric Supply Co., or R. L. Fife (made in pursuance of the resolution passed on the 30th day of Nov. 1910, guaranteeing to said Company or R. L. Fife, the engineers wages and supplying sufficient supply of hard coal to run the electric plant) be cancelled, and that the Secy-Treas. be instructed to notify in writing said Company and said R. L. Fife, of said cancellation of said agreement. Carried.

R. L. Fife, manager of the Electric plant being present on request was informed by the mayor of cancellation of recent agreement and asked as to what effect, if any, it would have on the further operation of the plant.

Mr. Fife stated that the plant was now in ship shape and on the arrival of the pump (Tuesday) would be put in and operated, conditions were such now that the plant was in a fair way to be operated on a paying basis at least, owing to the increasing of the number of incandescent lights in the town from 125 to 700, the plant was capable of operating 2000 lights. The Innocent Murderers

(By WILLIAM JOHNSTON and PAUL WEST)

(copyright, 1910, by Bobbs-Merrill Company)

As the detectives entered in front of the college building he heard Crowder approaching from the opposite direction. Then Crowder's voice, pitched in a high key, seemed for whole minutes to ring in a confused, blurring sound. Nothing was clear, he stepped behind a tree to avoid being observed and to avoid observing. The footsteps came near and passed. Then he heard Crowder say to Professor Hopkins: "I'll be back in a few minutes. Don't let Mr. Hopkins leave the room." Then the footsteps of the detectives ascended the steps and entered the building.

"Laboratory, I guess," said Sullivan to himself. "Now's my chance. Where's that key?" He felt in his pockets, but could not find it. "Must have dropped it," he muttered. "Nothing for it, I guess, but to break a window. The laboratory windows could be reached from the ground, and I could get in that way. Then I'll have a look at Crowder's desk. Maybe I'll find the key there. Anyhow, I'll have to be quick about it, for I don't know how long they'll be busy with Hopkins."

He was about to raise the sash when he saw a window open a little farther down. He walked over to it, and, looking in, saw that it opened into a room that was evidently a laboratory. He climbed through and dropped to the floor. He was in a room filled with all sorts of chemical apparatus. Sullivan looked around him for a moment, then walked over to the door and opened it. He found himself in a corridor with doors on each side. He tried the first door on the right and found it locked. He tried the next door and found it open. He entered and found himself in a room filled with books and papers. He looked around him for a moment, then went over to the table and began examining the papers. He found nothing of importance, however, and was about to leave the room when he noticed a bunch of keys lying on the table. He picked them up and examined them. They were evidently the detective's own keys.

"Laboratory, I guess," said Sullivan to himself. "Now's my chance. Where's that key?" He felt in his pockets, but could not find it. "Must have dropped it," he muttered. "Nothing for it, I guess, but to break a window. The laboratory windows could be reached from the ground, and I could get in that way. Then I'll have a look at Crowder's desk. He found nothing of importance, however, and was about to leave the room when he noticed a bunch of keys lying on the table. He picked them up and examined them. They were evidently the detective's own keys.

"That's the ticket," exclaimed the detective aloud. Then, quickly, he put back over the papers a copy for some other to find. Then he left the room, and entered on the Friday previous Crowder's room. The room was unoccupied. Sullivan ventured his search. He found nothing of importance, although he thought they were key for all the doors in the building.

"I'll be more successful, I think," he said to himself, "if I go ahead." He then closed the door of Crowder's room and locked it. He then went to the door of the building and found that several keys would open it. He then closed the door

THE STANDARD

VERMILION, ALTA., FEB. [illegible] 1911

Alberta is the first of the western provinces [illegible] gurate a system of demonstration farms. That they [illegible] their purpose [illegible] assist [illegible] final results [illegible] such farms [illegible].

The first report [illegible] attention [illegible] State Board [illegible] just been [illegible] Campbell [illegible]. In discussing [illegible]

"The demonstration [illegible] no sense of the word experimental farms. The managers of these farms are not expected, desired or permitted to conduct experiments. Their business [illegible] repeated experiments and years of thorough tests have proven to be successful. The making of new experiments and testing and verifying the reliability of results so secured is a slow and tedious work, for which very few farmers are either fitted or equipped. As slow and tedious as is the discovery and verification of new and successful methods of agriculture, their general acceptance and application are a great deal slower, the application strange to say, being far in the rear of the acceptance.

"The intention of the county demonstration farm is to hold out before the farmers of each county an object lesson year after year that will help to wean them away from unsuccessful methods and to encourage the adoption of successful ones".

The report sets forth these two results, which the department hopes to accomplish through these farms:

1. - To demonstrate that better net results can be obtained by more thorough cultivation and by the planting of pure seed of varieties adapted to the location in which they are planted.

2. - To demonstrate that by a proper crop rotation the fertility of the soil can be fully maintained and the annual production steadily increased.

In a short but stirring address before the Canadian Club at Toronto, Premier A. L. Sifton, stated that the three prairie provinces should be put on an equality with the remainder of the Dominion respecting lands and natural resources. He instanced the large expenditures each year by Alberta to prevent accidents in coal mines and fires in forests while the revenue from these sources goes to the Federal Government.

The new trade agreement made between the Canadian and American ministers admits wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, vegetables, cattle, horses, sheep, poultry, fruit, fish, coke and lumber free into each country. Canada reduces coal 8 cents per ton; agricultural implements two and a half per cent; and flour 10 cents per bag. On the face of it Western Canada should reap great benefit under the agreement in the line of cattle and wheat particularly.

ELK POINT

Chas. Hood has been appointed Sec-Treas. and trustee of the Elk Point School District.

The Literary Society is in a flourishing condition and the attendance is large despite the cold last meeting was entirely in charge of the bachelors and the program was worth going miles to see, for musical and literary talent Elk Point is hard to beat.

There are fifty-three tax payers in the Elk Point school district and ninety-five patrons of the E. P. Post office and still they come and is room for more.

Everything points to a bumper crop and a large acreage this year as there is plenty of snow for moisture.

Mr. and Mrs. Keitges of Hopkins visited with Mr. and Mrs. C. Hood on Sunday, they will soon be residents of the Elk Point district. Mr. Keitges having purchased a section and a half in this vicinity. He is another man who knows a good thing when he's seen it.

Mr. Robert Chanler and Mr. Hatchard of Tyrol were buying oats here last week.

Secy. of Agricultural Society Fears Money Will be Wasted Should Town Hold 2 Day Bonspiel During Short Course

Dear Sir,

When in town to-day I heard that the curling club were arranging a bonspiel at Vermilion to be held at the same time as the government short course schools in agriculture. Now I have no objection to our curlers having a bonspiel here and wish them every success but I do most strongly object to its clashing with the schools and I feel sure that when the curlers know the damage it will do to the schools they will alter their dates. If the two events take place at the same time it is only natural to expect that the students who have come to town to attend the agricultural classes will want to see the bonspiel and will go to it and neglect the schools and the whole object of the government in bringing these schools here will be defeated and the enormous expense the government have been put to will be wasted. I am writing this on my own responsibility but I feel sure the directors of the agricultural society will endorse my opinion when the matter is brought to their notice.

Yours truly
H. A. Taylor.

[No date for the holding of the Vermilion bonspiel has yet been set, but in the event of it being held during the time of the Short Course School, its results on the success of the school, are to our mind greatly exaggerated by Mr. Taylor. In the first place, it is rather a poor compliment to the intelligence and earnestness of purpose of those who leave the farms in various parts of the large district covered, to say they are to be turned from their object in coming here, by a bonspiel. Secondly, it is safe to say not more than one in twenty of those attending the school, know or care anything about curling. And curling is a game which must be known before it has any attractions of so strong a nature as to make men forsake specific objects to watch. Thirdly, the length of the bonspiel is two days and will not exceed three at most. Without dealing with the above communication further, it cannot but be palpable to all reasonable and fair-minded men that in so far as the local bonspiel is concerned, the success of the agricultural classes will not suffer. To our mind it is absurd to imagine such a thing on such shallow grounds. No one is more anxious that the School should be stamped with success, in capital letters, than the editor of this paper and that it will be we entertain not the slightest doubts, but for Mr. Taylor to assume and take such strong grounds as to assert that the bonspiel of two or three days at most, would cause the school to be a complete failure, and be responsible for the wasting of enormous sums of money granted by the government for such laudable objects is letting his zeal for the cause run away with his better judgment. - Editor.]

ACUTE DYSPEPSIA

Restoration of Stomach Power Comes Quickly With the Right Medicine

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemons, of Newbridge P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend, who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvellous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were relieved of excessive work. Health soon glowed within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."

Be advised—Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

3. Dilute the rennet with about ten times its bulk of water, in order to get it evenly mixed and more easily distributed. Add it to the milk and stir gently to bottom of the pail for three minutes.

4. Cover the pail with a clean cloth in order to retain heat. Four folds of butter muslin will do nicely. If the temperature of the room is low it is advisable to set the vessel containing the milk in another containing water two degrees higher in temperature than the milk. Shiloh's Cure

Count Tolstoi

THE pathos of Count Tolstoi's death disarms criticism and creates compassion where it does not intensify admiration. This lonely old man, who might have lived in affluence but who chose a peasant's fare, who was fanatically devoted to liberty but lived under the despotism of a corrupt bureaucracy, who loved his fellow-men and yet was condemned by his own class and not accepted by the other, who wished for solitude and was pestered by sightseers and camera tormentors, who lived in a world of impracticable ideals of his own creation and simultaneously in a world of intolerable realities imposed upon him by others, who longed to be a reformer and knew not how to take the first practical step toward a real reform, finds the contradictions of his life too great any longer to be borne, and, like a wounded stag, goes away to die in solitude. It is a pitiful ending of a tragical career.

It is exceedingly difficult, perhaps impossible, for an American to comprehend Count Tolstoi—difficult for an Anglo-Saxon to understand the Slav; difficult for one accustomed to measure philosophy by the question, Does it work well? to understand the idealist who never even considers whether his ideal could be made to work at all; difficult for one born a democrat and living in a land of free activity to understand one born an aristocrat and living handicapped by despotic law and social convention; difficult to understand a man of different epochs, who in his later life condemned with severity as great as that of his severest critics what he had written at earlier period; a man of different moods, who was now a social photographer and now a romancer, now a philosopher and now a novelist, now a moral reformer and now a painter depicting with brutal frankness facts in life which the common taste if not the common conscience of man had [illegible] a veil; a man who combined a extraordinary genius [illegible] with an extraordinary lack of common sense, a man who [illegible] as a new discovery and [illegible] sometimes by no blunt [illegible] has portrayed vice with shocking plainness; but he has not revelled in it. He has been always a moral reformer even in those writings which, judged by Anglo-Saxon standards, are immoral. He has sometimes familiarized his readers with an experience better left unportrayed, but he has not attracted them to it. If his writings were sometimes immoral, it is because they are sometimes morbid; but, in the main, the message of his pen is a call to liberty and justice, peace and humanity. We are not sure that it may not prove all the more effective because it is the message of a doctrinaire. If his theories of life had been as practical as his descriptions of life are realistic, the bureaucracy would probably have silenced him. Nor is it at all impossible that his somewhat theatrical assumption of the garb and habit of a peasant, which in America could not have been taken seriously, may have added to the effectiveness of his message.

A prophet must speak to his people in their own dialect and according to their own fashion. Count Tolstoi is a Russian speaking to Russians. To forget that is to forget the elemental fact in his picturesque career. If he is judged by American standards, it is impossible for us to join in the chorus of indiscriminating praise which his followers demand. But it is not impossible that the future, judging him as a Russian speaking to Russians, will find that his work has been made more effective by the defects which it shares with the people and the age to which it was addressed.

LOCAL NEWS.

Jas. Dee returned last week from Duluth and Minneapolis.

Red Deer is holding a bonspiel Feb. 21-23.

To stop advertising to save money is like stopping the clock to save time.

Thanks to the foresight of local coal dealers, the town experienced no shortage of the commodity during the extra heavy demand. Report says "there's a place where you don't shovel coal", but its not at Vermilion.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, has made the statement that no announcement in connection with the establishment of the demonstration farms for the province will be made until spring. That's good enough for us, long as we get one.

The officers of the Vermilion Agricultural society, members of the board of trade and others, met last Thursday in the council chamber of the town hall and prepared for the mails some 2300 circulars in connection with the Short Course School at Vermilion Feb. 20th to March 4th.

P. O. Pilkie, president of the agricultural society left on the local Monday morning for Calgary where he will attend a convention. Mr. Pilkie is placing large bills relative to the agricultural school here, all along this line to Edmonton and returning will go down the Grand Trunk.

With a continuance of the present weather there is every prospect of the trails soon getting into good teaming condition. The continued snowfalls and winds of the past fortnight kept the roads drifted in and made traffic throughout the country a real hardship and in some cases a most trying experience, especially to those coming in 20 to 35 miles for supplies.

He will achieve success who lives well, laughs often and advertises much.

Mrs. A. Barnes is visiting at Edmonton for a week.

The date of Silas Wannamaker's unreserved auction sale on Wednesday, Feb. 15th at his farm Sec. 10-54-4, is again brought before readers of the Standard. Lunch at 12, sale starts at 1 sharp.

The Federation committee of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches will meet on Tuesday the 8th inst in the presbyterian church to arrange their mission work for the coming year.

The Presbytry of Vermilion will meet in the Presbyterian church on Wednesday the 9th inst. A public meeting will be held in the evening at which address will be given by Rev. W. D. Reid, Supt. of Missions and Rev. Andrew Russell of Wainwright.

J. Kellar, of Northern Valley who has been in the southern part of the province for the past three weeks, returned home Monday. Before leaving for the north he had his name added to the Standard subscription list.

The spell of cold weather has apparently terminated for a time at least Sunday morning was only 14 degrees of frost and Monday was a balmy calm day with the thermometer registering only 8 degrees of frost in the morning.

For the benefit of any who may require farm labourers or domestic help, the Standard has on hand a number of application forms from the immigration department and farmers' employment bureau of the Salvation Army. These forms may be filled in at this office and will be forwarded to headquarters. If you require help don't delay in making application.

The two Vermilion curling rinks returned from the Edmonton bonspiel last week and report a splendid time generally. Though failing to reach the jewelry class in any of the events both rinks were successful in entering the eighths in two competitions and all through the sport played very close and exciting games against the best in the West.

The annual assessment and tax notice forms for the town municipality of Vermilion for 1911, have been printed and turned in to the secretary-treasurer, who will shortly send out the assessment notices to all property holders. The rates for this year are the same as those of last year namely, 15 mills for school and 10 for town rate. A discount will be allowed on all taxes paid before July 1st next.

On Friday evening the 27th inst, the teachers, officers and pupils of the Methodist Sunday school presented Mr and Mrs N. E. Morrison with a kitchen shower. The guests began to gather about half past eight and from then till an hour later kept coming bringing with them everything imaginable that could be used in and around the most important department of the house. The number and quality of the gifts demonstrated very plainly the widespread esteem in which Mr. Morrison is held by his Vermilion acquaintances. Games were indulged in till about ten o'clock when refreshments, which had been brought in baskets were served. Mr. Barnes made a short speech expressive of the good wishes of the assembly and Mr. Morrison responded in a few well chosen words signifying his surprise over the way he and Mrs. Morrison had been welcomed back to Vermilion, and hoping that his friends would always consider themselves welcome in his home.

BORN

At the farm, north of Vermilion, on Feb. 1st, to Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Brown, a son.

SHORT COURSE Schools in AGRICULTURE

Under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture four Short Course Schools in Agriculture will be held as follows:

Earache, Toothache!

To Cure the Pain in Ten Seconds and Get Instant Relief Nothing Equals

NERVILINE

Fifty years ago Nerviline was used from coast to coast and in thousands of houses this trusty liniment served the entire family, cured all their minor ills and kept the doctor's bill small. To-day Nerviline still holds first rank in Canada among pain relieving remedies—scarcely a home you can find that doesn't use it.

TESTIMONIAL No. 4338

From Port Hope, Ont., Mr. W. T. Greenaway, of the Guide newspaper staff, writes: "For twenty years we have used Nerviline in our home, and not for the world would we be without it. As a remedy for all pain, earache, toothache cramps, headache and disordered stomach, I know of no preparation so useful and quick to relieve as Nerviline."

Let every mother give Nerviline a trial; it's good for children, good for old folks—you can rub it on as a liniment or take it internally.

Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse anything but Nerviline. In two sizes, 50c and 25c, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

while Guingamp, a small town in Brittany, is totally unknown to the large number of people who used the material named after it—gingham.

Fresh Air in Winter

In winter, it is hard to get fresh air in certain rooms. Some rooms in a house are usually colder than others and if you open the windows it is hard again to heat the room properly.

If you keep the windows closed you don't get fresh air; if you keep them open you cannot quickly reheat the room. The solves the difficulty. You can leave the windows in a room open ... in winter, and when you close them apply a match to a Perfection Oil Heater and heat the room to any temperature you desire in a few ...

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel. It burns nine hours. It has a cool handle and a damper top. It has an automatic locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned ... enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be quickly cleaned. An indicator always shows amount of oil in the font.

The Perfection Oil Heater is strong, durable, well made, built for service, yet light and ornamental.

SPINNING TOPS

FOR Old Crutcher perseverance was neither a virtue nor euphemism; it was a mania, barren of praise and productive of scoffing. In the beginning he had minded the jibes; by the time he was sixty-five he had been long inured, even feeling grateful for them in a way. For he was an inventor, and can one who fashions things quite new escape obloquy? Is not slander, indeed, the tribute of the vulgarians to ability? The admission of genius? The truest, albeit unconsciously rendered, honor to be expected?

"Some day——" he would mutter to himself, philosophically if vaguely, when he had gained his little room after running the gauntlet of gamins. "Some day."

He had been comforting himself with these words, pregnant with future recompense, for a score of years now. The children who had followed him in the first days of his labor, babbling ridicule after the fashion of babes in the street, had begot another generation, that chided him now with more vehemence for the instinct that was their heritage. Only to children is such a game ever fresh.

For two decades harried by doubters, his own faith in himself had thrived and flourished the lustier because of his lack of someone with whom to share it. Carefully he had nourished it from the moment he first became engrossed in the problem with all the force of his will had he preserved that faith through disappointment, till finally there was no longer need for him to guard it, so powerful had it grown that it overmastered the man, forcing him on in spite of defeat, gripping and swaying him as can only a passion. There was no tonent for Crutcher now.

His mania was perpetual motion.

"An' how's the machine to-day?" asked the Irishwoman on the second floor as Crutcher passed her open door, the uneven boards creaking beneath his steps. It was always the machine and not the man, that people asked of. Crutcher himself had forgotten the man ...

... bolt of nickel. The poles fitted two cups of steel, attached like the bowls of opium pipes to a pair of upright rods. Accurately adjusted, the invention, once started, would run forever—some day. Crutcher had only to overcome the troublesome friction.

"Here is the germ!" said the old man, his voice low but quivering with the ardor of exultation. "Only a little more!" He put into place the upright rods. Then he wound the spring, arranged his invention, and started the propeller. "Ah! That's it! Go it!" he cried excitedly, as it whirled rapidly, giving forth a shrill hum, the bright studs forming lines almost as solid as the bolt about the circumference. He knew that, alone, the spring would run itself out in twelve minutes. The inventor took out his watch. He tried to suppress his enthusiasm. Now and then he leaned forward, his face aglow, as if he were the spectator of a race. "Go it! Go it!" he cried softly again and again.

Nine minutes passed, ten, twelve—and still the machine whirled. By and by it slowed, lurched around spasmodically for a bit, and then stopped, seemingly with reluctance.

"Twenty-two minutes and a half!" Crutcher whispered in suppressed delight. "More by a full half minute than ever before."

Thus he was found by his nephew an hour later. Crutcher's dinner was still in his bag, where he had thrown it at one side of the work table. The soup was cold, and on its surface lay a ring of thick, yellowish fat.

"Hello!" said the youth as he entered the room.

The old man was surprised, the nephew had not knocked.

"Hello, Danny! The machine's just run twenty-two minutes and a half! What do you think of that? I've almost got it, I know. It won't be long now, and then you'll see! Just a few more changes; but I know what has to be fixed. It won't be long now."

"What of?" was the answer. Danny was indifferent. "Fine, ain't it!"

Boyd - Smith

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday, Jan. 31st at 12 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Smith, of Hopkins, when their [illegible] daughter Miss Mary Alice became the wife of Mr. Edw. H. Boyd [illegible] of Elk Point [illegible]. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. Hodgins [illegible] Church [illegible]

[illegible]

Mrs. Boyd was the first young lady to settle in this locality, coming here with her parents from [illegible] years ago. Mr. Smith having previously homesteaded at Overton, Neb. Mr. Boyd came from [illegible], Neb., and has contemplated taking this step for three years, during his sojourn at Vermilion and his homestead.

This happy event however came as a surprise to many of their friends and neighbors the affair having culminated quite unaware to many.

ELK POINT

Small [illegible] at Elk Point on Friday. Roads and trails pretty nearly obliterated.

C. J. Fish went to Vermilion Wednesday to bring back a load of goods for Mr. Arnott.

Elk Point Literary Society is in a flourishing condition. There is talk of a concert in the near future.

Frank Lambright left last week to go to work in one of the camps.

Noble Bros. have transferred their cattle to Stoney Creek where they have purchased hay.

Mary and Cleve Dulal and Mr. Russell from across the river were at the reception given to Mr. and Mrs. Boyd.

Frost found its way into a good many cellars lately, and by the looks of things potatoes will be at a premium in the spring.

Sunday School is being at the Elk Point school house every Sunday at two o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend.

On Tuesday, Feb. 14th the Church of England's Ladies Auxiliary will hold a sale of work at Morrison school Pleasant Valley at 2:30, in the evening there will be a Box Social and Concert, admission 25c, lunch 25c. Ladies are asked to come and bring boxes. The sale comprises numerous useful and pretty garments, fancy goods etc., as well as second-hand clothing, men's suits and ladies coats and skirts. Time 2.30 to 10 o'clock. All are welcome.

Councillor Vacates Seat

Files Disclaimer - W. C. Craig Entitled to Seat

On Friday the 3rd instant the application to unseat Councillor R. A. Pilkie came up before the Chief Justice at Edmonton, where Mr. Pilkie's counsel filed a disclaimer on behalf of his client, who thereby vacated his seat on the council, and who was ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings.

W. C. Craig, who stood next to Mr. Pilkie in the election, is therefore entitled to the seat so vacated.

Plain Styles Prevail

The day for "rah-rah!" clothes is done. Young fellows for the past two years demanded fancy cuffs and flaps and all the "flub-dubs" and "doo-kydinks" that the tailor put on their clothes. The reaction has set in as we all knew it would. To-day plain styles prevail—no frills and no millinery effects of any kind on them.

But don't forget that correct styles for young men are still very different from those for elderly men. If your tailor doesn't know the difference come to us and we'll be glad to show you how the 20th Century Brand tailors distinguish between smart clothes for young men and genteel styles for older men.

300,000 IMMIGRANTS FOR THIS YEAR

Minister of Interior Outlines the Dominion's Land Policy, Citizenship and Settlement

Hon. Frank Oliver, minister of interior, in an interview with A. J. Thorold, of the staff of the Canadian Mail, the editor of the London Mail published for circulation in the Overseas Dominions, gives an estimate of the volume of immigration for 1911. Mr. Thorold writes of the interview as follows—

In answer to questions of mine at an interview in Ottawa, the Hon. Frank Oliver, M. P., minister of the interior Dominion of Canada, stated that during 1910 the total number of immigrants who had come to Canada was a little over 250,000 and that reports from the Dominion's emigration agents in Great Britain, the United States and elsewhere indicated that during 1911 the total number would be a little over 300,000 and in answer to futher questions the minister said,

"Canada is the only country in the world today giving away good lands with good conditions. And it is given away free, gratis, but not for nothing. This is with us a matter of principal and national policy. Not only is Canada giving this land away, but she won't sell it.

"Does that mean, Mr. Oliver", I asked, "that the Dominion government won't sell any land to anyone?"

A Well Known Westerner Tells of Suffering, Misery and Pain That He Cured With "Nerviline"

"A few weeks ago I ate some green vegetables and some fruit that was not quite ripe. It first brought on a fit of indigestion, but unfortunately it developed into biliousness, accompanied by nausea and cramps. I was dreadfully ill for two days; my head ached and throbbed; I belched gas continually, and I was unable to sleep at night. A neighbor happened in to see me and urged me to try Nerviline. Well, I wouldn't have believed that any preparation could help so quickly. I took half a teaspoonful of Nerviline in hot sweetened water, and my stomach felt better at once. I used Nerviline several times, and was completely restored."

NERVILINE STRENGTHENS WEAK STOMACHS

The above is from a letter written by G. F. Braun, a well known stock man and farmer near Lethbridge, Alta. Mr. Braun's favorable opinion of the high merit of Nerviline is shared by thousands of Canadians who have proved Nerviline is simply a marvel for cramps, diarrhoea, flatulence, nausea and stomach disorders. Safe to use, guaranteed to cure—you can make no mistake in keeping Nerviline for your family remedy. In two sizes, 50c and 25c. Sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Patagonian Holiday

By Sam Davis

THE idea of the expedition originated with Bobby Richards, and he took no small pride in the fact.

The word had been passed down the line of fashionable society that a society circus was to be pulled off in the winter in New York which would eclipse all previous efforts in that direction.

Bobby Richards and his coterie of friends having made rather a poor showing at the last society circus, determined to introduce some startling novelty that would cause their successful rivals of the previous year to sit up and become interested, to say the least.

The novelty they fixed upon was nothing less than half a dozen live giants, to be captured in Patagonia and brought bodily to New York, where they were to be exhibited in cages for the edification of admiring New York society.

It was also decided to bring nothing back from the lower end of the continent which measured less than eight feet from head to heel. Any giant who could not qualify to eight feet in his bare soles would not be considered eligible.

The general idea of the giants of Patagonia had been gathered from tales of actual travellers. Some of the parties arranging to make the expedition had frequently conferred with sea captains on the subject, and Mr. Richards was quite positive that he would be able to bring back a native Patagonian who would measure nine feet or better.

Dick Wood, George Ungar, Charlie Gilhouse, and Madison Squares had been approached on the subject, and all had agreed that such a trip should be made with all haste and with a steam yacht.

Of course the trip and its objects was to be kept a profound secret, and the departure from New York must be made in the most mysterious manner possible.

This was easily accomplished. They gave it out that they were going to Nova Scotia to invest in a gold mine, and the [illegible] slipped away in the chartered yacht, and the Great White Way knew them no more for some time.

[illegible]

and there was a large crowd of suburbanites in [illegible] bent on seeing the sights and enjoying themselves.

It now appeared an easy thing to get all the giants they wanted, for it seemed as if the streets of the city in which they found themselves were choked with them.

One man in particular attracted their attention. He was nearly eight feet high, and splendidly proportioned. He could not speak English, and they approached him through an interpreter.

This functionary made it plain to him that he was wanted in New York to live in a cage for a week and pose as a curiosity from his native country and astonish the people of Manhattan Island. For this he was to receive a salary, and all he had to do was to name it.

The giant seemed a little puzzled at first, but finally appeared to be quite impressed, and, after a lot of talk, he [illegible] agreed to consider the matter that evening if they would call with the interpreter at his home to discuss it more at length.

Everything was getting on swimmingly, and the New Yorkers were impatient to go and close the bargain.

At eight o'clock in the evening, with the interpreter, they entered a large, queerly built house, where they were soon talking business with the giant.

He listened to the proposition of the New Yorkers, the price, and the things giants had to do in New York. They talked the matter over about ten minutes, when there was a sudden interruption.

The giant they were about to engage gave a long, peculiar whistle, and in came a lot more giants, who, with little or no ceremony grabbed the travelling representatives of the Gotham Society Circus, and in a few minutes had them all bound and trussed and were lugging them out into the darkness.

WHAT ABOUT VERMILION?

The following is an extract from Hansard of the 3rd February

$20000.00 Building for Vegreville

Mr. Pugsley:— "Perhaps the Hon. member for the district will tell us what he knows about Vegreville."

Mr. White (Victoria Alberta) "As everybody who knows anything about the west knows, the town of Vegreville is the largest town between Battleford and Edmonton, and is the centre of the best agricultural country in northern Alberta. It has a population at the present time of about 1,200. Four years ago there were only two or three settlers there. The reason I ask for this public building is not to provide work for the people there, because there is no doubt that in order to start the building we shall have to import the labour. The post-office is now in a small store, and the post master has not the accommodation he should have. There is a large amount of parcel post business in that country. I have seen no less than three double teams going out with the mail."

The preliminary work in the undertaking of making the Saskatchewan river navigable from Edmonton to Lake Winnipeg, will be again pushed forward in the summer. The estimates contain an item of $25,000 for this work, which is carried on under the direction of L. R. Voligny. Last summer Mr. Voligny and his party completed preliminary surveys of the river, from Fort Pitt to the Pas Mission, which includes the most difficult portion of the river, and during the next summer it is expected that he will be able to complete preliminary work to such a stage where it will be possible to proceed with actual construction and improvement.

The recent amendments to the Children's Protection Act of 1909 made it the most up-to-date piece of child legislation extant and enable the Province of Alberta to cope with the neglected and dependent child problem in such a manner as to add valuable citizens and retard the development of criminals in the state.

Among these amendments are the following changes. The age of "a child" under the Act, is extended to seventeen years, instead of sixteen as formerly. The term "neglected child" is made to include the child who is incorrigible or cannot be controlled by its parents or who is employed between the hours of 10 o'clock p. m. of one day and six a. m. of the following day. Improper home training which is liable to imperil the child's life, health or morality warrants its apprehension and removal into proper conditions.

No neglected child shall be refused admittance to the Children's Aid Shelter when accompanied by the order of the President of the local Children's Aid Society or the Superintendent. It is now incumbent upon the municipality of every town or city of 10,000 population to appoint and pay one or more agents to enforce the Act, the same having the powers of a peace officer with authority to enter factories, workshops, stores, homes and all other places where children may be or congregated and shall perform such services as may be necessary for the enforcement of this Act. Said agent is required to report monthly to the local Children's Aid Society and to the Superintendent.

A Truant Officer appointed under the Truancy Act has power under the Amended Act to apprehend without warrant and [illegible] neglected child. These [illegible] prohibit any parent from giving the permanent [illegible] possession of any child into the home of any person or persons without the written authority of the Superintendent. This entirely prohibits the handing of children over to others to enable their natural guardians to get rid of them, no consideration being made of the present interests and future well being of the child.

The Act in respect to contributing to child neglect has been re-inforced to deal with persons procuring or causing a child to be employed in public or offering anything for sale between 10 p. m. of one day and 6 a. m. of the following day unless in case of any public entertainment or series of entertainment where it is shown that proper provision has been made to secure the health and kind treatment of the child proposed to be employed thereat, where upon the mayor of any city or town or chairman of any village council may grant a license for such time and during such hours of the day before 10 p. m. of the one day and 6 a. m. of the following day such employment not to exceed seven hours in any day of twenty-four hours.

A juvenile offender who breaks the laws of Canada or ordinances of the Province or of any municipality shall not be confined in a lock-up or police cell used for persons charged with crime nor save as mentioned in the Act, be tried or have its case disposed of in the police court room ordinarily used.

Where a Children's Aid Society possesses premises affording necessary facilities and accomodation, the judge seized of the case may hold the examination as to the case of such juvenile offender on the premises of the Society. The judge also has power to order the removal of such child to any place within the Province.

When the state becomes the guardian of a child's life, it is responsible for that child's morality, and every grip of the amendment has been found by actual working experience necessary to the safeguarding of the neglected and dependent children of the Province.

Church Federation in Vermilion District

The committee appointed by a recent conference of representatives of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches to prevent overlapping and to arrange for co-operation in missionary work for the Vermilion district met in the Presbyterian Church Vermilion, Tuesday Feb'y 7th.

Rev. W. Simons, Vermilion was elected permanent chairman of the Committee and Dr. Archer of Lamont, was chosen as secretary.

The principle of a division of territory which obtains in foreign work was adopted and an effort was made to carry this principle into operation as far as possible.

The following arrangements were made to take effect at the close of the ecclesiastical years of the two churches. The Methodist church withdraws from Ralston appointment on the Kitscoty mission. The Presbyterian church withdraws from Blackfoot and Marwayne appointments.

The territory lying south of the C. N. R. from the 4th Meridian to west boundary of Range 7, is assigned to the Presbyterian Church while the Methodist Church is assigned the territory lying between the 4th Meridian and the Western boundary of Range 7, north of the C. N. R. south of the Saskatchewan River.

The territory lying between Range 7 south of Saskatchewan River to southern boundary of the district as far west as Range 19 is common as at present in the mixed districts except that the Presbyterians agree to withdraw from Innisfree and the Methodists from Ranfurly and in the case of the Warwick Missions the Presbyterian church withdraws from Hairy Hill, Pass Grove, and Brookside, and the Methodist church from Mundare and Hairy Hill.

North of the Saskatchewan River the Methodist church occupies the portion lying between Range 10 and the western boundary of Range 9 and the Presbyterian church that portion lying Eastward of Range 9 to the Provincial Boundary a committee composed of Rev. G. D. Armstrong, Rev. G. R. Lang, J. C. Butchart and Dr. A. H. Goodwin was appointed to arrange for the amalgamation of the two churches in Lamont and Chipman.

The committee with a view to making the present scheme as effective as possible have arranged for a committee to visit fields effected by their action and where personal visitation is not possible a letter explaining the aims and methods of cooperation is to be prepared by the Superintendents of Missions and circulated amongst the various churches.

A committee was appointed also to secure information with respect to the territory left as at present with a view to a complete re-adjustment of the forces at work.

The deliberations of the Committee were marked throughout by an earnest desire to co-operate in this movement and perfect harmony prevailed in all its sessions.

It is expected that this re-adjustment will add greatly to the convenience of working the various fields and that it will be possible to give much more satisfactory service to the people on the various fields.

A resolution was passed urging the Boards in charge of American Evangelization to adopt such measures as will effectively prevent overlapping in that work.

The Vermilion District includes all fields within the territory north of Wainwright and east of Edmonton district.

The District Committee is composed of the following:—

Rev. W. Simons, Vermilion; J. C. Butchart, Vegreville; Rev. G. R. Lang, Vegreville; Dr. A. H. Goodwin, and Rev. G. D. Armstrong, Vegreville; Rev. E. J. Hodgins, and J. A. Hunt Vermilion; Dr. Archer, Lamont.

An open missionary meeting was held on the evening of the 1st inst. in the Church of Christ under the auspices of the central committee of the Vermilion branch of the Alberta Sunday School Association. The meeting was ably addressed by Mr. Rich of Mannville, secretary for this district for missions and by Rev. Wm. Simons. In spite of the unfavorable weather conditions a good number attended and the meeting was a decided success.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church held their regular meeting on the 1st at the home of Mrs. J. Craig. Some thirteen members were present and a very encouraging meeting resulted. The society is still following the sewing circle plan and find it a very satisfactory arrangement. A collection of $1.20 was added to the funds of the society at the Wednesday night meeting. Just before the close a most appetizing lunch was served by the hostess.

Faces Serious Charge

Collingwood, Ont., Feb. 11. Pearl Smith, 18 years of age, was arrested last night by Chief Wilde, charged with taking the life of the infant found frozen to death in the west end of the town, on Saturday, Feb. 4th.

Pearl, who is an attractive looking girl, appeared in the police court this morning and was formally charged with murdering the infant child. She was not asked to plead, but was remanded until after the finding of the coroner's jury.

[illegible] British Columbia. But when Western Canada prospers, Eastern Canada prospers. The prosperity of the West and the East is coexistent. Some portion of every dollar that is taken into the West or taken out of it out of the soil finds its way to the East, and through the various channels of trade and commerce, eventually enriches Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces.

"As to land tenure, we want farmer proprietors. They make the best and strongest citizens and it's such citizens we're after. Hence, after a man has fulfilled the three years' conditions of use and occupation of the land the Dominion gives him, the land is his in fee simple, absolutely and forever. He can keep it or sell it, or do as he likes with it.

"The man who overcomes the great difficulties of those three years of settlement and they are great has earned his land, has established himself, has become a good citizen. By that time he has a stake in the country and its future.

"Canada is establishing a landed aristocracy, in the truest meaning of the word a landed proprietorship extending over fertile plains 800 miles long and 300 miles wide. This in due time will make 240,000 square miles of farms and homes with incomes, with many busy towns and cities.

"Agriculture being the backbone of every country, the vast number of prosperous agriculturists, together with the many manufactures and other industries necessary to so great a territory will constitute a population of land owners and good citizens that will be large enough and powerful enough to weigh something in Canada, in the British Empire and in the world.

LOCAL NEWS.

Mrs. W.H. McClinton has returned home to Pilot Butte.

A chance for stockmen is offered at the auction sale to be held on Wed. March 1 at Dewberry, where R. T. Hankombe will sell for Andy Brett, Sec. 1 53 4, thirty six head of cattle. 20 are year olds. See large bills.

Messrs R. L. Craig, D. Winters, J. Young and H C Stiles, all prominent Orangemen of this town, attended County Lodge at Mannville Tuesday night and report an interesting meeting.

Our popular auctioneer, R. L. Craig, has just returned from a trip of two weeks duration spent in the southern portion of the province and reports that Vermilion looks better to him than ever.

Games for the Wherle Cup are definitely announced for Feb 23. Four rinks from the Fort, four from Vegreville and a like number from the town may be expected to make some keen vying for the trophy, which has been won two successive years by the Vermilion rinks.

The [illegible] in the Slater Cup competition is finished and three rinks tied in the [illegible], viz Slater, W. Pukie and [illegible], each with 5 wins and 1 loss. The draw has been made between these rinks, Pukie getting the bye. Slater plays Cooper the winner going against Pukie in the final.

We are pleased to announce the arrival of Miss Minnie Woods, sister to the C.N.R. freight agent of this town. In her our musical friends hope to find a valuable asset in social affairs and we hope the young people of the town will think seriously of [illegible] that they have in their midst, such an able talent as Miss Woods.

A fine bunch of classy general purpose work horses, all thoroughly broken, are to be put up for sale at Trimble's Sale Stables, town, Sat. Feb. 25. A great opportunity to secure good horses for spring work. W. N. Trimble is the owner of the 45 head to be sold, and they are claimed to be the finest bunch this well known horseman has ever offered at Vermilion. The posters give full particulars.

A committee of the agril. soc'y will meet students arriving by train and furnish them with all information respecting hotel accommodation, and conduct those who bring their own bedding to suitable quarters. Students should make themselves known to the committee at the station. Householders who would like to board and lodge any of the students during their visit to town, please communicate at once with the secy, stating how many students can be taken and the terms.

The grand fancy dress carnival at the rink Tuesday night, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Ladies Aid, was the biggest success of its kind ever held here. The costumes varied from the sublime to the ridiculous [illegible] for competition was keen [illegible] Over [illegible] [illegible] kept busy serving lunch [illegible] some $70, with $56 [illegible] We expect a [illegible] of the winners for next issue.

A school of evangelism was held last week in the Methodist church. Ministers were in attendance from the Vermilion District, covering the territory from Vegreville to Lloydminster and rural fields adjacent to the railway line. Interesting addresses were given on the subject of evangelism emphasizing the place and need and the opportunity afforded for it, in laying the foundation of the life of this new country.

To hear certain individuals tell how to conduct a newspaper, reminds us of that remark of Job's "No doubt you are the people, and with you all wisdom will die".

Hill & Sons, of Lloydminster, captured the $1,500 prize for the best peck of oats at the National Corn show in progress at Columbus, O. Reserve sweepstakes for the best peck of wheat was won by Norman Cherry, of Davis, near Prince Albert, Sask.

A septette, picked up in a hurry and captained by A. F. Turner, drove to Islay on Thursday and suffered a nominal defeat at the hands of the hockey team of that place by a score of 5-4. For the first forty minutes the game was all Vermilion's with a score of 4-2 in their favor. The game continued for some time in the dark and Islay scored 3 goals in that period the last being placed after goal keeper Robertson had quit for the night on account of darkness. For Vermilion, Wheeler played a star game, and for Islay, J. Holland in goal saved the situation repeatedly by quick and accurate work.

Special union evangelistic services were held last week in the Methodist church led by Rev. F. J. Jennison, B.S., B.D., and are being continued this week and next. The attendance at these meetings has been gratifying. Everything is being done to make these services general, and of such a nature as to reach the whole town through the medium of the churches. Through the columns of our press, we wish to emphasize this. Meetings for workers are held at [illegible] on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Besides the regular services next Sunday, a men's mass meeting will be held at 4 p.m. Special music will be rendered. The evangelist will take [illegible] subject next Sunday evening [illegible] Unpardonable Sin. [illegible] if you wish to obtain a seat.

The C. N. R. will build 140 miles of the main line this year.

Over 300 former students are in attendance at the short course in agriculture at Strathcona. This speaks wonders for the rapid development in the interest taken in scientific farming in the province.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Neil who have been living in the neighborhood of Sault St. Marie, Ont, for the past two years returned on the 6th to their former home south of Vermilion on sec. 28-52-7.

Miss Ella Greensides entertained some twenty or thirty of her friends at her mother's home on First St. North with a conundrum party, on Friday evening. All present spent a delightful time and enjoyed fully the conundrum lunch served at the close.

Strayed

Six head of horses. 1 Roan mare with bay horse colt. 1 white mare with buckskin mare colt. 1 Bay 2 year old gelding. 1 brown yearling. All branded with mule shoe [illegible] on left hip. Anyone giving information leading to their recovery will be suitably rewarded. Anthony Dunn,

The Last of the Bourbons

(By J. Morton Lewis)

THE wind whistled down the slopes of Mont Pipet, bearing with it a fine, drizzling rain.

Simon Vauvert stood at the door of his inn and shook his head solemnly at the weather; then, as the rain beat upon his face, he retired inside and warmed his hands before the fire burning in the comptoir. For a few seconds he studied the fancy forms cast by the blaze, then rose and shivered. Simon nodded, wondering at the drift of his visitor's conversation, and wondering moreover, to what it tended.

"You have? Then you could not have ... if you saw him."

"Perhaps if you told me ..." suggested Simon.

For a moment the soldier ...

Theodore Roosevelt? The Kaiser?—Mere men!

This is woman's day. We must turn to the weaker, more ingenious, more alluring, more audacious, more bewildering, subtler, and more mysterious sex. And we must go to the home of artifice, the stage, and to the temple of art, the drama, for our premiere press agent.

The answer is Sarah Bernhardt.

You have heard her latest? On the ... American tour she assembles ... French journalists—those dear friends, the "boys," who are always with her ... [illegible] ... trousseau and petticoated.

She is sixty-seven years old, a great grandmother; she is five years past the legal age of retirement in any service but that of art, from which there is no retirement even in death, a long life of ... industry, of superhuman achievement, of interminable ... she have won for her a ripe immunity from the fortunes of the theatrical "road" which may lead her into tents and town halls.

Naive, but true? Sarah could do it, and probably would. One who, at twenty, with an assured life position and easy hours at the foremost theatre in the world, the Comedie Francaise, could ... [illegible] ... her properly, she will never go to them.

Whether Sarah ... refuse the decoration of the Legion of Honor is a fruitless question. J. P. Killam has been hauling wheat to the local elevator for the past week.

J. V. Good has purchased the fine quarter section farm of W. Cambridge on Sec. 23-53-6, sixteen miles north.

The snow is vanishing rapidly, if the present weather holds spring will not be far away.

Mr and Mrs. Fraser and child have taken up residence in Vermilion. Mrs. Fraser is a sister of Mrs. A. Fox.

Craig Brothers have now their new elevator installed in their storehouse completing their equipment as a right up-to-date store.

R. G. DUNSMORE, gives reasons why you should buy the COCKSHUTT DRILL.

Because short axles do not bite.

Because they have self oiling and dust proof bearings, and only require oil once in a season.

Because they have a chain drive.

Because they have wheels fitted with steel scrapers.

Because they are the Strongest and Lightest running drill on the market today.

March 1st. A short time and the seeders will be at work.

S. T. Buford of Campbell Lake, is hauling out 6000 ft of lumber he had sawn this winter on the Saskatchewan. This will be used in erecting farm buildings.

Attention is directed to the auction sale list in this issue of J. W. Johnstone. The list speaks for itself as to the quality and breeding of the fine bunch of stock shown for sale.

On March 22nd E. T. Brokenshar conducts an auction sale on the farm of A. B. Tarpey, 7 miles north of Kitscoty. Large posters were printed Monday for the sale at this office.

A Real Tonic

Clothing, particularly new clothing, is a powerful mental and moral tonic. Shabby and ill-fitting clothes are a source of constant worry, which tends to take the keener edge off the wits of the average man. The mere fact of being smartly dressed is a strong mental stimulant, and the man who is shabby and knows it, is often less capable than a well-dressed mental inferior. Those who wear 20th Century Brand Garments know the comfort of mind and body they give.

Slater Cup Won By Skip G. E. Slater

The old competition for the Slater Cup was played off this week between the three tied rinks.

Death of Albert P. J. Monkman

An interesting and historic figure in the West, passed to the great beyond in the person of Albert P. J. Monkman of Peguis district on Friday, Feb. 24th, at the Edmonton hospital. The remains were embalmed and brought to Vermilion, where the funeral takes place to the town cemetery Thursday, March 9th.

Deceased was born in Manitoba in 18.. and was one of the real old timers of the West, having travelled over all the vast western country both north and south long before the days of the railway, his father conducted Governor Schultz during the Red River rebellion of 1869-70. In the ... trouble the late Mr. Monkman was Lieutenant and ... Red and following ... crossed the boundary and settled at Roseau, Minn., where he stayed for 14 years, then going to Winnipeg. About ... years ago he took up land north of Vermilion on the Peguis ... a post office opened ... appointed postmaster ... of the district. ... years ago he suffered ... and bronchitis which terminated in consumption, death being due to that disease.

Five sons and two daughters survive, namely, Alfred J. and George, residing here, ... nurse at St. Boniface hospital, Winnipeg; Ella, at school in Roseau, Minn., and Lawrence, Louis and Thomas ... all of Roseau.

When her child is in danger a woman will risk her life to protect it. No great act of heroism or risk of life is necessary to protect a child from croup. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and all danger is avoided. For sale by Fred C. Long, Druggist, Vermilion.

Landonville

Intended for last week.

Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Whitson spent last week in Vermilion, Mr. Whitson being interested in the short course in agriculture.

There are a number of the people in this district ailing with la grippe.

There was a very successful dance held at Angus Dufours last Friday night. Everyone enjoyed themselves immensely. Music was furnished by Messrs. Dustin and Jas. Johnson.

Mrs. Fred Keyes has been on the sick list for some time but is improving.

Ed. Ivy and Jas. Johnson made a flying trip to Vermilion the first of the week.

Chas. Stewart hauled a load of willow posts to Vermilion Monday.

August Bensmiller has been having wood sawed this week.

Orin Caskey is in this district with a wood saw and chopper, and we notice there are several bucksaws being thrown away back in the corner.

Messrs. J. Johnson and Percy Landon attended James Armstrong's birthday dance at Allendale Friday night.

A. Bensmiller and Ed. Ivy hauled posts to Vermilion Monday.

Russell Holder is carrying the mail this month and is always on time.

These sunny days reminds one of spring, which would be welcomed by all as hay is now quite scarce.

P.C. Reed and family have moved on O. Whitson's place, where Mr. Reed will work the coming summer.

E.S. Ivy and family spent Sunday with the P. H. McNamaras'.

Pat McNamara and Richard McClam made a flying trip to Vermilion, Monday, returning Tuesday.

LOCAL NEWS.

Rev. F. C. Rowlinson of Innisfree, preacher in the Ch. of Christ on Sunday evening.

The assessment notices of the town are being sent out from the secretary's office.

Mrs. W. E. Mackenzie returned to Vermilion this week, after an extended visit in the East.

Tenders are called for the digging of a well for the Pelican Lake school.

W. M. Steel is advertising Huron seed wheat for sale. This is an early bearded variety and a heavy yielder.

Some long projected building has recently been finished in the north part of 52-6.

A new schoolhouse is to be erected for the Union S. D. No. 2264, tenders for the building are called for in this issue.

D. L. Richardson brought Mrs. C. E. Keyes of Lambsville, in from that point on Tuesday. Mrs. Keyes was on her way to the Edmonton hospital to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Dr. T. L. Head-Patrick has transferred his office from above W. E. Sutton's store, to Dr. H. L. Burns' old stand, on Main Street. This valuable property was recently bought by the doctor from Dr. Burns.

The fifth annual "At Home" of the Vermilion Fire Brigade is to be held in the Assembly Hall of the school, on the 17th of Ireland. The committee have sent out 200 invitations for the affair which will undoubtedly be a grand success.

T. Burt disposed of his place on 28-52-6, on Monday to Jas. Dee, at what is reported to have been a very low figure. The place is a very desirable one and several of the neighbors are said to have been very anxious to secure it. As soon as it was known to be on the market, there was an exciting race to see who would get there first. Mr. Dee seems to have been the speediest contestant and won out.

A regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church was held this evening at the home of the president, Mrs. Dr. Ryan. The meeting resolved itself into a discussion of business. It was decided to hold a skating party on the evening of the 14th and have an assembly in the ... for games and lunch when the skating is over. All the young people of the town are to be invited and it is expected that a decidedly good time will result. After discussing a most attractive lunch provided by the hostess of the evening, the meeting dispersed, to assemble again in two weeks time at the home of Mrs. ... when the entertainment of the members' husbands ... contemplated.

A. T. Newberry's big sale Wednesday next.

C. V. Casner disposed of 900 bu. of oats this week to the Hayward Livery. These were grown on his homestead up the valley.

Bills are being printed at this office for an auction sale on the farm of Albert Hollington, S E 14-52-4, to be held Tuesday, March 28th. E. T. Brokenshar is the auctioneer.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Kennedy, who have been rusticating in the East for the past three months, returned to Vermilion this week. Mr. Kennedy is more firmly convinced than ever that the West is the real thing.

The town has rented pound premises at Darling & Armstrong's stables where all stock henceforth running at large within the town precincts will be delivered into custody. All stray dogs will be duly confiscated and in the event of no claimants for same appearing, will be sent to the crematory.

H. F. Kenny, secy of the A. F. S. association, will be in Vermilion on the 11th to attend a meeting of the central committee of the Vermilion district to be held on that date. He expects to remain over Sunday and preach for the Ch. of Christ in the evening.

The committee composed of Councillors McKone, Mackenzie and Coop-er appointed to go over the assessment roll of the town for 1911, met the first part of last week and spent several hours on the work. His worship, Mayor Dunsmore was also present. A considerable amount of re-adjusting was done and a good proportion of new premises and stocks added to the assessment roll.

A Real Tonic

Clothing, particularly new clothing, is a powerful mental and moral tonic. Shabby and ill-fitting clothes are a source of constant worry, which tends to take the keener edge off the wits of the average man. The mere fact of being smartly dressed is a strong mental stimulant, and the man who is shabby and knows it, is often less capable than a well-dressed mental inferior. The new lines of 20th Century Brand Garments know the comfort of mind and body they give.

Another Bridge For Vermilion River

Much Needed Public Work Now In Sight Means A Great Deal To Settlers

The Standard is informed by E. Covey that there is every prospect of the government bridging the Vermilion river a few miles west of here this spring. That this work will be carried out is now practically a certainty and the large settlement north of river at the projected point where the river will be spanned, are at last within a reasonable distance of obtaining the much desired and needed relief in reaching market.

The site for the new bridge is a point north of Barnslaib on Sec. 21-51-5, near the Pleasant Valley church and the grades at this location are said to be natural and easy. Inspector John Tremble of the public works department of the provincial government, has both inspected the site and recommended the work.

Four cars of gasoline traction engines were received by the implement firm of West Brothers, this last week. This shipment is, we believe, the largest individual consignment received at this point to date, and speaks for itself of the rapid advancement and flourishing condition of the Vermilion district.

There are eight engines in the consignment, 6 of 25 h.p. each and the other 2 of 20 h.p.

The Escape of Ernesto

[illegible]

...when suddenly he remembered something, and blushed to think that he had not recalled it before. The incident of the strange statue of his dead [illegible] at night in the woods back of the college! What a fool he was not to have understood what caused it. He remembered to have read, on more than one occasion, of the effect of radium [illegible] in his mind that the refulgence of his gem had been occasioned by the presence, somewhere, of some radio-active substance.

"With radium at $[illegible] an ounce though," commented Sullivan, "it does not seem likely that there would [illegible] amount of it lying around loose out there in the woods. I wonder if there was none in the laboratory [illegible] would have shone when I was there? And the light disappeared the moment I got away from that one spot in the woods. Maybe there's a radium mine there."

This flippant dismissal of the question [illegible] the matter from [illegible] Hopkins. The fact that Hopkins, [illegible] by these papers of his, was intensely interested in matters connected with radium may have had something to do with the way the detective looked at it. He was convinced, however, that there was something more than mere coincidence in it [illegible]

[illegible]

"Very well," said Ernesto, after a pause, "if you won't tell me I can't help you. Whenever it is, if you [illegible] ...—when we are married?"

"I promise," said he. He added, as though to change the subject, "By the way, where have you decided to stay to-night?"

Ernesto named a hotel well-known to New England folk from rural districts [illegible]

DOWN THE FRASER RIVER IN AN INDIAN DUG-OUT

THE wonderful upper valley of the Fraser River in British Columbia is graphically described by [illegible] in the World's Work. We quote sections of this vivid story:

AS GOOD AS HAVING A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

That is what thousands of mothers say of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets promptly and surely cure all the minor ills of babyhood and childhood, and what is more they are absolutely safe—they have never been known to harm the youngest baby—they never will harm anyone—they are good for babies of all ages. Concerning them Mrs. Wm. Higgins, Kars, Ont., writes:—"I shall never be without Baby's Own Tablets in the house as long as my children are small. They are a wonderful medicine and are as good as having a doctor in the house. I gave them to my little boy for colic, and they quickly cured him. I am always glad to recommend them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

THE gowns worn at this moment in several new plays present a richness of detail, a wealth of ideas that makes the study of them intensely interesting and valuable at this time of year, when women are preparing new costumes for late winter and early spring.

All the work of Paquin are the four new costumes that the wonderful Polaire wears during the four acts of her new play, Montmartre. Each gown expresses different qualities; each one is a lesson in the science of beauty, the value of correct lines, and all are elegant; not with the elegance of Montmartre but the elegance of the rue de la Paix, and, while expressly adapted to the strange personality of Polaire, the supple slenderness of her figure, these gowns are the latest of the present fashions, with hints of those to follow. How simple the first gown of royal blue voile, hung over blue liberty silk, with touches of red on the corsage, and for trimming only a collarette of fine Maline lace and a belt of black patent leather. The skirt shapes a tunic, cut square at one side. Marked with French taste and smartness is the gown of the second act of exquisite wood colored velvet. The upper part of its short tunic skirt points in the back. As [illegible] on the other, it is more elaborate in effect, with a yoke-shaped collar of splendid Venice lace framing the throat in a little square partly filled with a tiny collarless guimpe of flesh colored, unlined, mousseline de soie.

Black Velvet Hat

[illegible]

...hollow in the throat it reaches in a straight line to the top of the shoulder; the lengthened line of the guimpe on the shoulder thus achieved is particularly becoming.

There is at present a curious period of indecision—of tentative attempts in one direction and another, interesting to those who follow the fashions. In coats, hats, and gowns this hesitating note is seen.

While coats of all lengths are worn, women are turning more and more to the very long coat for afternoon wear over long-tailed daytime calling gowns. Long and close, in either sack shape or cut on more circular lines, these coats are preferred, at this season, built of the lovely satin faced cloth, that hang so beautifully, with the thinness of linings. When the sleeve is cut in one with the shoulder it is left three-quarters long; if set into an armhole it is generally in plain long coat sleeve form, and finished with a wide cuff of the velvet, that faces the revers.

Of great elegance is a long, satin faced cloth coat, trimmed with an immense velvet collar that at one side of the back [illegible] into a long point, dragged longer by a heavy silk [illegible]

The most conspicuous difference between the American school girl and her English cousin of the same age is in the method of arranging the hair. Long after the American girl has donned trailing skirts and wears her hair high on her head her sister across the seas is still wearing her skirt a little below her knees and her hair loose down her back.

This difference is typical of the whole race of English and American girls between the ages of fifteen and eighteen years. The former is looked upon and feels herself to be a child until the schoolroom door has closed upon her for all time.

The American girl on the other hand all her life is treated as a being of importance and at the age of sixteen [illegible]

NEW JOURNALISM IN CHINA BRIDGES THE GULF BETWEEN EAST AND WEST

IN the chronicles of the Tang dynasty, which flourished in China from 618 to 905 A.D., reference is found to a daring innovation introduced by certain hangers-on of the imperial court, writes Francis Chisagar in the World's Work. Taking advantage of their opportunity of securing first hand [illegible] these mountebanks had made a practice of parading the streets of the capital [illegible] placards whereon they had inscribed the august doings of the Son of Heaven and the latest news of his court. Incidentally they did not fail to gather an ample revenue from the crowds that were allowed to read the placards, and whose curiosity they thus satisfied.

Though severely condemning the practice as wholly lacking in propriety, the imperial Government never suppressed it, and these pioneers of "the fourth estate" were permitted to ply their nefarious trade unmolested. Finally it occurred to some journalistic genius that instead of exhibiting placards indiscriminately to the crowds and depending upon their uncertain gratuities, the same result could be better attained by printing the news and selling copies. This scheme had at least the advantage of avoiding the scrutiny of imperial danger to the educated, and the government had no objection to granting a franchise for the purpose.

Such is the origin of the Ti Chau, or as it is better known, the Peking Gazette [illegible]

[illegible]

...the officials have, during the past, expressed unfavorable comment, most of these publications are issued under the protecting name of some foreigner who enjoys extra-territorial rights.

Most of the newspaper equipment comes from Japan. The presses used are cheap cylinders manufactured after European and American patents. As human power is the cheapest, they are equipped with treadmills. These are operated by men who are paid at the rate of two dollars a month in our money. The type constitutes a proportionately larger part of the initial outlay than is necessary with us. The Chinese have no alphabet, and every idea is represented by a separate ideograph. The system is not, however, as complicated as suggested by Mark Twain's statement that it required forty years to sort a "pi" of Chinese type.

The paper is usually the poorest quality of tissue that will hold [illegible]

Try Zam-Buk For Piles

Read How This Sufferer Benefited!

Don't you believe that experience is better than hearsay? If you suffer from piles, just try Zam-Buk. You can do so at our expense. So confident are we of the result that we will send you a free trial box if you send to our Toronto offices full name and address and a one cent stamp to pay return postage.

Scores of people daily acquaint us with the benefit they have derived from the use of Zam-Buk. [illegible] 3 St. Paul St., [illegible] Ont., says: "For five years I suffered untold agony with protruding piles. The pain was so great [illegible] I would almost scream.

"I lost weight and had no appetite. I tried everything I ever heard of for piles as I was willing to take anything to get relief. It was useless, however, and I almost gave up in despair.

"One day a friend gave me a [illegible] of Zam-Buk, and told me of a [illegible] of his who had been cured [illegible] to try Zam-Buk, and the relief I got was encouraging. I used three boxes, and at the end of that time I was completely cured. I wish I could have got Zam-Buk years ago; it would have saved me a great deal of misery."

The secy was instructed to taxes out of work done by ratepayers.

Geo. Robinson of Div. 2 interviewed council re work done by him in 1909 which he claimed J. Gilmour, foreman, did not allow him. The former, who was also present, said he let Robinson a job for which he would be allowed $12.00. Robinson seemingly did not understand it that way, but thought he was working by the day. He did not get as much work done as Gilmour's contract called for. It was the opinion of the council that he should not be allowed any more than what Gilmour gave him.

Council voting their usual fees, adjourned to meet May 27th at J. H. Tovell's, N.W. 4-52-7.

G.M. Cundal, Secy.

INNISFREE ELECTS FIRST COUNCIL

A Notable Occasion Close and Exciting Contest

Special to The Standard

Innisfree, March 14 Last night was the climax of one of the most exciting events ever held in Innisfree, when our town threw off its swaddling clothes and elected its first Council. The competition between five of the most prominent business men was keen and during the past week was the principal topic of discussion around the town.

The following are elected—

A. A. LOFTUS
J. J. NORRIS
J. J. MONTGOMERY

Mr. Montgomery tied with S. Grais, the returning officer D. J. Dixon, in a short speech regretting the duty placed upon him in deciding between two men whom he held in the highest esteem, gave his decision to Mr. Montgomery.

Your correspondent might add that the town of Innisfree has taken a step in the right direction, as a place enjoying such natural advantages, such a beautiful town site and being located on the shores of beautiful Birch Lake, and surrounded by a good agricultural district, should and will, make one of the most prosperous and flourishing towns in northern Alberta.

WM. BALLAS, A RUSSIAN, RESIDING IN THE LANDONVILLE DISTRICT, ARRESTED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE

He is Evidently not Much Worried by the Position He is Placed in —Is Being Held in Custody Pending Trial for Offence Against His Mother-in-Law

Constable McPhail's police net was thrown out last Wednesday, March 8th, and gathered in one William Ballas, a Russian residing in the Landonville district. The officer received word from a settler in the same district that the accused had criminally assaulted his mother-in-law in a brutal manner, and he took quick action in apprehending his man as he always does.

The charge against Ballas is, that he did unlawfully and criminally commit the indictable offence of aggravated assault upon the person of Mrs. Jennie Duczeshka, who is his mother-in-law, on the 6th of March.

The warrant was issued at the instance of Constable McPhail, R. NW.M.P. who has been conducting the investigation into the case, and he lost no time in executing the warrant.

Mrs. Duczeshka, upon whom the brutal attack was made, is a grandmotherly old lady, whom it is difficult to believe anyone would wish to harm. She is now lying at the home of one of her neighbors, John Faryno, in a precarious condition ...

... believing her story to be a true one, dealt the complainant a heavy blow on the head with a club, but not with sufficient force to render her unconscious, though it knocked her down. When she got up her assailant at once ejected her from the house and gave her a horrible beating about the body, causing grievously bodily harm. After the attack she managed to crawl on her hands and knees through the snow to her nearest neighbor, John Faryno a Galician, three-quarters of a mile away. Her daughter and his two sons were eye witnesses to the assault. When the officer asked the accused's sons, whose ages are 20 and 16 respectively, why they allowed their father to beat her, they replied that they were scared to interfere.

The accused was arraigned before Justice Barber last Friday afternoon. He pleaded "not guilty" to the grave charge preferred against him. Ballas did not appear to be at all worried by the position in which he finds himself placed. He listened with keen interest ...

THE DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH

OF the many Anglo-American peeresses, quite one of the most distinguished is the Duchess of Marlborough. She has been making some outspoken remarks on the question of marriage and education. Ever since she came to England as a bride, she has thrown herself body and soul into social work of every description.

But long before that even her Grace was already a social force in New York, where she put many of her organizing talents to practical purposes. She was instrumental, for instance, in founding the first club for workroom girls in the States, a club which has since prospered and which now numbers some hundreds of members.

Upon Blenheim Castle, the Duchess has brought to bear much of her artistic personality. Among the many innovations she has introduced is an American bower, which, perhaps, would be better described as a floral tunnel. It is very long and narrow, and arched over with honeysuckle, clematis, and clustering rambler rose.

At intervals, the bower is widened to form alcoves for seats, and one can imagine nothing more delightful than to sit among the honeysuckle and watch, between the cluster of roses, the river which winds its way through the green sward below.

The duchess also introduced a small menagerie of wild animals, and has special cages and heated kennels built for them. Gazelles, vultures, snakes, chimpanzees, and pelicans were introduced, and after her Grace's tour to the Nile district some years ago, a number of other rare animals were added to the collection, making it now one of the best private zoos in England.

LORD BRASSEY AS A YACHTSMAN

THERE are few men who carry their years lighter than Lord Brassey, who, at the age of seventy-four, is shortly to start upon another trip to the country in his yacht, the Sunbeam. The Sunbeam has already, if she never sailed another knot, a record career in ocean annals, having covered considerably more knots. Many of her voyages have been made famous by the pen of Lord Brassey's first wife, the gifted writer who died at sea under poignant circumstances some years ago.

[illegible]

The Horseman

THAT whirlwind from the western part of Ontario, G. A. Brown, known in Canada as the "Speed Merchant," and in Michigan as the "Canadian Wonder," arrived in Toronto recently with a car-load of twenty harness horses, trotters and pacers, of known and unknown quantity, and made the Repository his headquarters.

G. A., or Art Brown, as he is better known, occupies a unique position in the realm of harness horsemen. He claims, and I think he is justified in making the claim, that he buys and sells each year more trotters and pacers than any individual in the world—and this surely entitles him to distinction. During the past two or three years Brown has disposed of a large number of horses in Toronto, some of which remained there and others were sold for shipment to outside points; and while, as he says, it is impossible to pick "all peaches" without getting an occasional "lemon" in the horse garden, many of the horses he sold to parties in Toronto more than made good for their new owners. The pair of Roadmaster mares, Pansy and Violet, that he sold to a Toronto horseman, proved even better than they were represented. The former won two heats in the big 2.25 class pacing stake at Ottawa the winter before last, and although the heat that fell to her lot was second money, she demonstrated in that race her ability to win with more favorable treatment.

Violet is known to be better than a 2.13 pacer on a half mile track, as she was only last week beaten by a small margin in 2.10½, over the ice, and there are many seconds difference between a "dirt" track and one that is made of ice.

Another mare that came from the same source that proved a real prize is Nettie Ethan, now away on a winter campaign. The mare was raced extensively during the past summer season and has already been to the races this winter and all with a large amount of credit to herself.

Paymaster, a gelding by Roadmaster [illegible] made the deals after very little ceremony. He had his mind made up that he would own the two fastest pacing mares in Canada, and he went through with it, and when they became his property it gave him the distinction of being the only man in the world to own two mares with records as fast as those two had. And his judgment was good in buying two such fast record pacers, for, like the owner of John McEwen, he took Lady May to Ottawa the week after he bought her and to the hands of Dan McEwen, the veteran reinsman of The Eel (2.02¼) fame, this mare won the free-for-all of that year on the Ottawa River, and incidentally beat John McEwen. Upon the result of this race Brown won the mare out, and [illegible] two weeks sold her for $1,800.

Gallagher, the famous pacer that he is from [illegible] township, is another of the headliners that went through Brown's hands, but not until after the days of usefulness of the [illegible] ice was the new famous free-for-all race at Ottawa a few weeks later Brown would have been justified in giving the additional five hundred as the horse was offered to him for $1,500.

It is just three years ago this winter since the lucky horseman calmly wrote out two checks which aggregated close to $8,000 for the two pacing mares [illegible]

RHEUMATISM
13 MONTHS' SUFFERING CURED

Dear Sir:

"I wish you to put my letter on record for the sake of suffering humanity. I have suffered 13 months with Muscular Rheumatism in my back. I have spent at least $50.00 on pills and liniments during that time, but nothing would ease me of the pain—in fact, it was a chronic pain. For those long 13 months it stayed right with me, sometimes convulsive and cramp-like, causing me to groan and cry aloud. Every moment was torture. I could not turn in bed without yelling out. Now I will always bless the day when I first started to rub in, and to take internally 'Nerviline.' After using four bottles, my pains have left me. I shall always take off my hat to 'Nerviline' and can honestly say it's the poor man's best friend, because it will always drive away from you the Demon—Pain.

The Pirate with a Conscience

By John Lang

IN the early days of the eighteenth century, few parts of the world formed a happier hunting ground for pirates than the Guinea Coast in West Africa. Its creeks, bays, and rivers formed secure harbors of refuge where pirate ships might careen in security, along the coast was no lack of ships bearing rich cargoes of all things desired by pirates—wine, rum, and gold dust—to be picked up almost for the seeking, with small fear of interruption from ships of war, and the few inhabitants who dwelt permanently in those latitudes ("private traders" they called themselves) were themselves for the most part either retired pirates or were, from fear, or possibly from diplomatic reasons, friendly to the pirates.

Old charts of the coast, with their [illegible] directions, read for all the world as if they had been taken direct from the pages of some boy's romance. "Pyrate's Bay," the "Cape is known by a single tree much larger than the rest, and high land on the back of it," "Plenty of Oysters on ye Mangrove Trees along this River," are entries that are made in these charts.

Near Pyrate's Bay, in Sierra Leone River, dwelt alone one [illegible], a name similar to [illegible] of "Treasure Island"; and not far distant lived a hoary villain, John Leadstone ("Old Cracker" he was called), who devoted the last of his evil days to rum and to the bringing up of a battery of brass guns [illegible] away from the miserable hole where he and his men were starved on bad rations. If he could only get home again!

"Nothing easier," suggested Lowther. "There's the ship. The crew will stick to me to a man. Why not seize her and go home?"

Why not, in sooth? The need for a favorable end, put out [illegible], and spring to quite [illegible].

The plot made rapid headway. Massey sounded his men, whom he found eager to follow his lead in any direction he pleased. Lowther let the [illegible] into the secret, and the crew, by [illegible] [illegible]

"It is high time," wrote Lowther. "Now or never!"

At once Massey hastened to the barracks.

"You men that have a mind to go to England, now's your time," cried he.

They were all of a mind to go to England. How could it well be otherwise? So a message was sent back to Lowther that all was well, and he, taking time by the forelock, [illegible] and secured the ship. Meantime Massey and his men broke open the [illegible] guilt in helping to take the "Gambia Castle," but saying "twas to save as many of His Majesty's Subjects from perishing; and that his Design was to return to England, till Lowther, conspiring with the greater Part of the Company, went a pyrating with the ship."

The Governor, a wide-minded man, had no difficulty in understanding how Massey had been duped. The latter's guilt in the business did not seem to him to be very black, and he gave the poor man his liberty, even permitting him to cruise off Hispaniola with captain [illegible] the armed sloop [illegible]

No Longer Has Cold or Catarrh

Dear Sirs,—I have been in the drug business for over six years, and as an up-to-date druggist have a deep-seated antipathy to certain kinds of medicines. However, being a sufferer from Catarrh and noticing the enormous sale of Catarrhozone, actuated by motives of curiosity I opened and tried a small 25 cent package of Catarrhozone. By the time I had finished it and one of the $1 size outfits of Catarrhozone, I was completely cured. That was eight months ago, and I have never since even had a cold. I consider Catarrhozone an indispensable remedy ... every household.

New Christian Scriptures?

THERE has been put forth recently from the Cambridge University Press a work in two volumes which may embody one of the most remarkable corroborations of Biblical history that has ever been made. The author is Dr. Schechter, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York City, and he discovered the document which has now been made public in the Genizah, or manuscript storeroom of the synagogue at Cairo; and if the opinion of one authority may be accepted we have in this fragment ... the selection of the [illegible] which antedates the Gospels.

[illegible]

prince King David is also included, who is held in slight estimation by the Sect."

These differences of opinion, says Dr. Schechter, led to a complete separation of the sect from the bulk of the Jewish nation. They left the land of Judah and settled in Damascus under the leadership of the Star, and there established the New Covenant. [illegible] toward the Baptist and Jesus were none other than the Boethusians (perhaps identical with the great company of believing priests of Acts vi. 7), who not unnaturally liked to dwell on the identity of meaning between their name and that of the 'Teacher.' Unless, indeed, a better explanation of the phrase is forthcoming, it is not too much to say that we have here come upon the true key to every part of the riddle and the entire situation.

"But who is the 'man of scoffing' who is 'sent' throughout Israel to pervert the nation and turn them away from the Law? It is clear that if the two preceding identifications are correct this third personage must be none other than Paul the Apostle, who would, from the Judaizing point of view, be regarded as one of the worst enemies of the faith.

"Such are the identifications here proposed ... they would constitute a striking ... to the sect's Christian origin by the virtually contemporary Jewish writer.

"Another apparently inevitable conclusion of the whole matter [illegible]

Last year the council voted the sum of 60.00 to be spent in strychnine in solution but only 36.00 was spent as the farmers, perhaps, did not know it could be had free by calling at Long's Drug Store, but it did not give very good results by those who tried it. This year the council is willing to give to each farmer in the district a one pound packet of Boldnan's poisoned grain, FREE, which is guaranteed to exterminate the gopher if the instructions are properly carried out. ...

A MYSTERY STORY

(By WILLIAM JOHNSTON and PAUL WEST)

CHAPTER

Escape of Ernesta

THEY had paid their check, so that there was no delay. Sullivan had not counted on how they would go out from the cafe, and when they ... the post it was too late for him to get out of the way. Gordon did not ... but Ernesta did, and though ...

... "What the dickens has he just read?" thought Sullivan. "Let's see—what paper was that?" He could read the heading as Gordon still held the paper clutched in one hand. Sullivan hurried out to the news stand on the sidewalk through the cafe door and bought a paper like Gordon's. Then, standing where he could see the man ... the dating page. Near the bottom of a column he saw the ... "Albert Ramsgood Arrives."

"Impossible," cried the girl. "Oh ... You can't believe what you're saying about me. You're wrong."

"Tell me then isn't he in New York—didn't you come here to meet him?"

"Yes, but——"

"Oh, so you confess it all! Oh, Ernesta, how could you! How could you!"

... her hand on his sleeve and looked up into his eyes. Her steady glance quieted him ... had him to a chair and they sat down. Sullivan could hear no more, for he saw that Ernesta was opening ...

winter. At Cape Isabella, thirty-five miles to the south, there was a cache consisting of one hundred and forty-four pounds of good beef. And it is the story of the attempts to get the meat, with its record of splendid heroism, death, and suffering that Frank Barclay Copley tells in "The American Magazine." A young man of twenty-five, George W. Rice, begged to be allowed to lead a party to get the needed food. Greely himself hesitated.

But Sergeant Rice kept protesting that the meat could be gotten without loss of ... and day after day he begged the commander to let him go for it at the head of a little force.

At length Greely, yielding to Rice's importunities, decided to send him for the meat. Many volunteered for the honor of accompanying Rice. Those finally selected were Sergeants Julius R. Frederick, David Linn and Joseph Elison. Frederick was a little chap commonly called "Shorty," every inch of whom was pure gold. Linn was a ... a hard-working man and a faithful friend. Elison was another good man.

The ... of Rice's party ...

When Rice was gone, Frederick smote the frozen meat with his axe, and gave Linn and Elison each a small piece. Then, taking a bit for himself, he joined them in the bag, and pulled the flap down over their heads.

The wind continued violent as hour after hour passed. The bag froze so solidly that none of the men could turn ... Frederick and Linn lay shivering with cold. Only for a few moments at a time did Elison cease groaning and screaming.

After six hours of floundering through the snow, stumbling over the ice hummocks and staggering under the hurricane blasts, Rice entered the hut at Cape Sabine, and fell exhausted, gasping, "Elison's dying at Baird Inlet."

A rescue party was formed, the men were brought back, and thus ended the first attempt to get the meat. Elison's hands and feet were frozen off, and Linn had lost his reason.

December, January, February, and March passed. The party lived on their ... rations, augmented by some animals ... shot. Three of the party died during the winter, ...

knelt and muttered some kind of a prayer.

"If this were fiction," says the writer, who gathered his story largely from personal talks and private journals of the survivors, "he might well be accused of straining credulity to the breaking point by relating what Frederick now did, half starved, and exhausted with the labor of the journey and the grave digging. But the simple fact stands that this man turned about and hauled his own and Rice's outfit back to the hut, more than twenty miles away.

How it was accomplished need not be told in detail. Suffice to say that Frederick's staggering and stumbling lasted for four days; that he was able to sleep only by deadening his senses with fuel alcohol diluted with water; that he was able to cook only when he had warmed himself up by hours of travel, and that he resolutely clung to all of his outfit, even though this made it necessary for him, when he crossed ridges, to drag first the ... over and then the sledge. Frederick did all that he had determined to do. He reported Rice's death to the commander, ...

... daily ration of a pound. It was early in November when they set out ... Arctic day of many months was practically dead. ...

Two of the party in the hut had died shortly after the departure of Rice and Frederick, but the spirits of the ... had revived a bit when Sergeant Long had succeeded in killing a bear ...

THROUGH the United States February is ordinarily the month when the earliest nesters among the wild birds lay their eggs. ... egg is deposited at one sitting, and that, as a rule, few eggs in a brood mean relatively large ones.

The period of incubation is apparently closely dependent upon the size of the egg. It varies from ten days with the humming-bird to more than forty with the ostrich, and, it is said, about fifty with the emu.

EMPEROR MENELIK EMPLOYS PRESS AGENTS

HERMANN MATTI. ... has in press a volume of letters by the late Count Frederick ... from Abyssinia, which cast a new light upon Emperor Menelik and his wife, the dark-skinned and imperious Empress Taitu. The count's notes say:

"Taitu was eight times married before she was twenty-five years old. And one of her several husbands outside Menelik is still living in the province of Tigre. Menelik was No. 9, and she has been married to him about twenty-six years.

"Her chief crimes are: forestalling the power to fund, American fashions, and removing people she doesn't like by poison. It is largely due to her ... life that Adis Abeba is the most ... capital the world over.

"Emperor Menelik" (continues the writer) "has been wise enough to engage brilliant press agents in all parts of the world who sing his praise, but is far from being the noble black man he is painted. During my long residence in his country, I never learned of a single act of his that does not ... extreme egotism. It's Menelik first, Menelik again, and Menelik the third time. If there is a possible conflict between the Emperor and his people or country, the latter invariably takes the back seat. While men doing him service he rewards by grants that do not cost him anything, and which he cannot utilize himself.

"Abyssinia is swarming with cold brick manufacturers and dealers who bribe Menelik direct, or through the Empress, to grant them concessions for mines, forests, transportation, etc. When his majesty has affixed his great seal to the piece of parchment, off they go to Europe to either sell stock or the concession itself. These concessions, however, are hardly worth the paper they are written on, for Menelik does not recognize any promise given to a white man. He takes their money, too, and gives orders, but on his own part never parts with a copper. Thus he ...

Cured in Beamsville, Ont.

"After a long experience with different pain remedies, I am convinced that none are equal to Nerviline. I was taken with a cold in my chest, which later developed into a sort of chronic bronchitis. Every time I coughed it seemed to rack and tear my whole chest. I was also subject to a great stiffness in my joints, especially about the knees and shoulders, and experienced much pain in my muscles. To cure my chest troubles I first rubbed on 'Nerviline' copiously for two days, and then put a Nerviline Porous Plaster over the sore region. I got quick relief. Rubbing the sore muscles and aching parts with Nerviline did more than all other treatments combined. By the aid of Nerviline and these wonderful Nerviline Porous Plasters almost any ache, and certainly any kind of inflammatory cold can be cured.

Shiloh's Cure

As the Lightning Speaks

(By Zeno W. Putnam, in the Trail Magazine)

"TWO points to starboard!"

The Cyclone shook her stout sides like a dripping dog, then shoved her nose spitefully into the sea ... before she lifted.

"Heavens! This is a night!" Templeton, wireless operator, crowded his face against the glass and tried to peer through the spray into the blackness beyond. "What is the old man made of anyway? That young fellow is true steel and straight as a ship's mast. Before I'd drive a girl of mine into the teeth of a storm like this I'd let her marry whom she pleased. She will, anyway, that is, if the steamer's ribs are as stout as her commander's nerve. But they need to be tonight, for she has a ... or some hard pounding along this coast. Look at that!"

That ... was only a mountain among ... ant hills, a giant of the storm. It made the Cyclone stagger, though, when it struck her midships, and heeled her half upon her side before the man at the wheel brought her back to her job again, then the laboring screws raced like a pair of frightened schoolboys as she presently slid over the crest and turned them heavenward.

"Prosser! Answer, Prosser! Proctor! Are you there?"

Templeton looked at his captain with a feeling of sudden horror, and then hammered out calls until his fingers ached; but the night gave back no answer.

"Let me know at once if you pick him up again," ordered the captain gruffly. Then he rushed to the bridge and poured a volley of orders into the ... where the engines labored, but caused the good ship to tremble more from the strain of her flying ... than from the hammering she was getting by the waves.

"Cyclone! Cyclone!" Templeton caught on the story out of the night again, quivering with human interest, and prepared to transcribe it ... "... Cyclone! we're breaking up. For God's sake, save us if you can; the girl is here!"

"The girl! What do you mean?"

"The captain's daughter. Understand? I ordered them to take her in the boat by force and then came up here to warn the Cyclone. I suppose they tried a little. She must have fought like a demon, and they left her. She did not let me see her until a ...

... him strike those rocks. I'm so glad we stayed and found him. Tell daddy —there goes our mast! Good—"

The spray piled high in blinding drifts upon the Cyclone's decks as she wallowed along from trough to trough. Templeton tried repeatedly to communicate with the sinking ship again, but received no answer. Again and again he hollowed into space, but the ... was silent, the only symbol of life ahead being the glow of a distant beacon down near the water's edge.

Captain Richards had left the bridge. With legs apart and hand on the rail he stood in the extreme prow of the boat, an unbending figurehead silhouetted in the glare of the Cyclone's searchlight, but alert to every detail of his surroundings. With flapping coat and head thrust forward, peering out to that beacon across the water he glanced down occasionally with triumphant concern at the spray dashing past on the storm ridden waves. He knew that the fury of the sea was dashing itself out in helpless rage against those gracefully curved sides, that the spray which sprang at him fell short of its mark; that, instead of being ... along by the storm he was outstripping it and lessening the number of billows, one by one, which lay between him and the wreck—the one fear that would break against the helpless Prosser before he reached her. And he gloried in his knowledge.

Every instant was bringing the Cyclone nearer to the most desperate experience of her career. There was some ...

... ed them for an instant, as though deciding where to strike.

"Cast your lines!" thundered the captain, and three writhing serpents shot across the Prosser's broken deck as the wave crest swept her from the anchoring rocks and crushed her into driftwood.

The lines went true, for they were flung by sailors' hands to comrades in peril, and as they were caught in by the same unfaltering hands, the great wave caught the Cyclone's keel and ... the rocks ...

"Full speed ahead!" roared the captain, as the Cyclone lifted to the very crest of the wave.

For one instant the ... ed ..., driven by its own power and the force of the sea, seemed determined to ram a passage through the solid rock. Then the mountain of sea swept majestically across the obstacle and carrying the ship high in air upon its bosom till it ... over the reef, the stout keel barely scraping the barrier in passing.

The Voters' Local ... Gibb

[illegible]

This is ... the respondent ... Councillor ... District No. ...

The respondents ... and one Macdonald were candidates at the election, which was held on the 10th January 1911 ... ballots were cast ... were cast for the respondent, and the same number for Macdonald. The returning officer gave his casting vote in favor of the respondent and declared him elected.

It was contended on behalf of the applicant that the evidence adduced shows that of those who voted at the election fifteen voted for the applicant.

The evidence upon this point consists of the affidavit of the applicant whom he alleges that he himself voted for Macdonald, that thirteen other voters informed him that they so voted and that another voter had stated in his presence that he had so voted. In addition to this affidavit there was filed on the return ... the affidavits of twelve of the voters alleging that they had voted for Macdonald.

In my opinion it would be unreasonable to accept as sufficient evidence of how a voter had voted this bare statement as to the fact. It is unnecessary for me to consider the effect which should be given to his sworn testimony as to that fact as a majority of the voters have not so sworn.

Another ground of the application is that the respondent's wife who voted at the election was not qualified to vote (1st) because the lands in respect of which she voted had been assessed to another upon the last revised assessment roll, having been subsequently transferred to her, and (2nd) that, by reason of being a married woman, she was disqualified.

Sect. 12 of chap. 5 of 1903, amending the "The Local Improvement Act" provides that any person over the age of 21 years ... whose name the last revised assessment has been prepared, has become the owner of land in respect ... some other person ... [illegible]

... entitled.

... As between the qualification of the ... [illegible] ... Harold R. ... [illegible]

... merged in that of her husband, that she was incapable of exercising almost all public functions and that the married woman's property Act under which her right to hold property was recognized and established had not the effect of giving her political or municipal rights.

I see no reason why the principle laid down in that case, should not be followed here, and I therefore hold that the respondent's wife was not entitled to vote.

Objection was also taken by the applicant to the vote of one Brake. He appears to come within the provision already referred to except as to the payment of arrears of taxes. It is shown that there were arrears unpaid on nomination day, but it is not shown that they were unpaid on the day of the election. It is therefore not shown that he was not entitled to vote.

The only other grounds relied upon by the applicant are those disclosed in the following paragraph of his affidavit viz: "That ... saw the votes as they were counted that the returning officer was partisan to the said Hodgins, and canvassed for him after nomination."

The act as amended provides that at the close of the polls, the ballots shall be counted in the presence of all persons present in the room at the time. I think that it is clear that the candidates were entitled to be present or represented at the counting of the ballots. I cannot assume that, because the defeated candidate did not see fit to be present or represented, that there was any irregularity in the counting. The bare allegation of partisanship on the part of the returning officer is not in my opinion a sufficient ground for voiding the election.

The evidence does not show which candidate the respondent's wife voted for. Counsel for the applicant contended that I must assume that she voted for her husband. This may be considered under ordinary circumstances a reasonable assumption, but I entertain considerable doubt, as to whether I should treat it as a legal presumption and owing to this doubt, I cannot hold that her ballot was cast for the respondent.

For the reasons I have stated, I am not satisfied that the respondent did not receive a majority of the legal votes cast at the election, and I therefore dismiss the application with costs.

FAMOUS STALLION PURCHASED BY GEO. MAGGS

The Well Known Mooney Horse Comes to This District

A deal was consummated last week which brings into Vermilion the famous Clydesdale stallion "Gartmore Pride" (5174) one of the best known horses in Alberta. This horse was a provincial prize winner and winner of the red ribbons at local fairs. As a stock getter he has an enviable reputation and his get has brought the high water mark in horse prices.

The enterprise of Mr. Maggs in bringing this horse in will be appreciated by all breeders, and already the service booked for the incoming season by the new proprietor is a promising one. With stock from this "Mooney" horse Mr. Maggs carried off the prizes last year in the yearling class and disposed of a colt for $250 also refusing an offer of $500.00 from ... of Kitscoty for a young mare colt.

Mr. S. Hollingworth, the local barber, has opened up again in the office of the Alberta Northern Lumber Co. He has bought the property on Main Street; opposite the Merchants Bank, and expects to have a new shop built at once.

Mark Williams has sold his quarter section to H. McLandress. The place changed hands at a very reasonable figure.

The St. Patrick's dance under the auspices of the Islay Athletic association last Friday night was a decided success.

The Athletic association held their annual meeting next Thursday night. It is expected that both football and baseball will be played here during the coming summer. Islay has been noted in the past in athletic circles as having one of the best football teams in the province. It is expected that the football team this year will be better than ever as considerable new material has come into the district since last season.

CHINA FAMINE RELIEF

Cooperation is asked in sending help to the famine-stricken provinces of Anhui and Kiangsu in China, where nearly three million people are destitute and famishing.

The conditions there are appalling. The harvest was all destroyed by the terrible flood, so no food can be had from the soil until June or later. Many villages were entirely swept away and the people left homeless and in dire distress. Multitudes gather together in great camps; those who are strong enough wander over the hills, pulling up roots and weeds for fuel in cooking the pittance of rice they may receive from the relief agencies. The suffering is terrible. Thousands of tottering babies, boys and girls clad in rags if clad at all, are about everywhere old men and women hobble about leaning on sticks for support, or lie by the wayside, their eyes staring up in mute appeal. Many thousands have perished, and it is estimated that over a million will die unless help is immediately sent.

The Chinese Consul-General at Ottawa writes that the distress is indescribable. The Honorary Secretary of the Distributing Committee in Shanghai, cables that famine area is larger than at first believed. Bishop White, of Honan, cables an urgent appeal for help.

The one hundred thousand dollars asked from Canada to help meet this awful situation should be easily and immediately secured. One dollar and fifty cents will save a human life. How many lives will our readers save?

His Excellency Earl Grey, His Honor, the Lieut.-Governor, J. M. Gibson, and the Hon. Sir James Whitney are giving this movement their hearty support. Contributions may be sent direct to the Treasurer of the Central Committee, Mr. S. J. Moore, 445 King Street West, Toronto, or to The Standard in the latter case acknowledgment of such contributions will be made through our columns, and remitted weekly to the Treasurer, Mr. Moore.

KEEP BABY'S SKIN CLEAR

Few parents realise how many estimable lives have been embittered and social and business success prevented by serious skin affections which so often result from the neglect of minor eruptions in infancy and childhood. With but a little care and the use of proper emollients, baby's skin and hair may be preserved, purified and beautified, minor eruptions prevented from becoming chronic and torturing disfiguring rashes, itchings, irritations and chafings dispelled.

To this end nothing is so pure, so sweet, so speedily effective as the use of Cuticura Soap, assisted, when necessary by Cuticura Ointment. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, U.S.A., sole proprietors, for their free 32-page Cuticura Book, telling you all about the care and treatment of the skin.

In one of the tallest office buildings in New York a man and his wife kept house. "When they came to me and asked to rent a suite of offices for housekeeping purposes," said the agent of the building, "I told them it couldn't be done. I had heard of janitors keeping house in office buildings, but I hadn't heard of anybody else trying it. So I told them no.

"But the young man reasoned with me. We've got to be as high as we can go," he told me.

"Want to dodge mosquitoes?" said I.

"Not quite that," said he. "My wife has an aunt who won't ride in elevators. She was trailed us up twelve flights of stairs, but I think she'd balk at thirty-five."—New York Sun.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if prompt remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. HARLIN FULTON Pleasant Bay, C. B.

A Famous English Lawyer.

The statement that Mr. Rufus Isaacs, K.C., the great English lawyer, is said to be anxious not to receive the usual honor of knighthood, which is conferred upon the occasion of appointment to the office of Solicitor-General, may have more truth in it than many of the stories of a similar character which reach Canada. Mr. Isaacs, who is of Jewish descent and the son of a London merchant, has always been a man of most democratic tastes, although for many years he has been recognized as a man of great wealth. Besides many extensive and remunerative investments, Mr. Isaacs has for some years past been making an income of $100,000 per annum, and he can therefore afford the temporary loss of his practice at the Bar. He has had an extraordinary career. As a youngster he served in the mercantile marine, but he soon tired of the sea, and went into a business office where he learned many things about stocks and shares, knowledge which had stood him in good stead when he has been compelled to handle such difficult financial problems as were found in the notorious Whitaker Wright case. For the past ten years Mr. Isaacs has gone into society only on very rare or great occasions. After a trying day in the law courts he would go straight to his home, eat a very light meal and go to bed at nine o'clock. At four o'clock in the morning the devoted man servant, who has been with him for many years and who is known as "Faithful William," would prepare his master's breakfast and bring him a great bundle of briefs to read. For some time to come at any rate, Mr. Isaacs, or rather Sir Rufus, will be able to rise at less unusual hours and go to bed as late as he likes. A well-known Canadian lawyer who often goes over to England to plead before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and has been a guest of Mr. Isaac's, says he never saw such a splendidly modest home as that of the great English lawyer, nor withal, one so cosy and comfortable.

The "Biscuit Baronet."

Popularly known as the "Biscuit Baronet," one of the most enterprising and generous business men of our time has passed away in the person of Sir Walter Palmer, who died recently. The third son of one of the founders of Messrs. Huntley and Palmers, the famous biscuit-makers of Reading, Sir Walter was beloved by all who knew him. He was possessed of vast wealth, and was a physical ... of considerable repute. For many years he was chairman of the council of Reading University College and a member of the Senate of London University. Besides being a director of the famous biscuit firm, which now employs 6,000 hands, Sir Walter devoted great attention to agricultural subjects and is the author of a book on "Poultry Farming," which has been translated into several European languages.

WHY BACKS ACHE

The Kidneys Seldom to Blame—The Trouble Due to Blood Impurities

There is more nonsense talked about backache ... That is utter ... As a matter of scientific fact not one backache in twenty has anything to do with the kidneys. Most backaches come from ... weakness and kidney drugs can't possibly cure that. You need something to brace you up and give you new strength and that is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do. Other backaches are really muscular rheumatism and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the worst cases of rheumatism by driving the poisonous acid out of the blood. Other backaches are the symptoms of ordinary ailments such as influenza, indigestion, constipation and liver complaint. In women backaches often come from the troubles that follow so surely on any weakness or irregularity in the usual blood supply. The one way to cure these backaches is to strike at the root of the trouble with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood and bring strength to aching backs and weak nerves. Mr. Alex. Cockburn, Deloraine, Man., says: "About three years ago I suffered terribly from backache. I consulted a doctor and took his medicine and wore a plaster but did not get the least relief. Then I got a belt but this was no better ... Then one of my friends asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got a box. Before they were all used there was some improvement in my condition ...

Murder of Hall Breed
A murder committed near Battleford was brought to light on Alexander's Indian Reserve, Beaver Dam Butte, on Wednesday of last week, by the finding of the remains of Pat Deborme, a half-breed, by Alex. Arcand, a treaty Indian who lives on the reserve.
The Mounted Police detachment at Battleford on Butte were informed of the finding of the body, in Harry Hope, the government farm instructor on the reserve, by Indian Alexis reported his discovery on Wednesday. The police went out to the reserve on Thursday and reported that the body had been found.
Dr. Hamilton, coroner, of Edmonton was notified and went out to the scene of the tragedy on Friday, accompanied by Corporal Bailey, of the Edmonton detachment of the R.N.W.M.P. The coroner ordered an enquest, which was held at Beaver Dam Butte on Saturday, 4th, Jetaime, of St. Albert, conducted a post mortem, and gave evidence at the inquest to the effect that the deceased had died from a deep wound behind the left ear, inflicted by a knife or some other sharp instrument, and had been dead about a week. The inquest was held in the presence of Mr. Deborme, brother of the deceased, and Mr. Arcand, known

Hit By Train In Yards
Edmonton, April 4th.
While coming into this morning on the C.P.R. yards, Tenth St., about two o'clock, George McLeod, a C.N.R. brakeman slipped and was struck by the car as it passed and thrown violently to the ground. As soon as an ambulance could be summoned he was taken to the Edmonton Hospital and examined. It was found he had received a deep cut on the head, some bruises on the body and a broken leg. He was also suffering from concussion of the brain, and is still unconscious. It is thought he will recover.

Case Was Incurable
The man from Nebraska who died at one of the hospitals a few days ago from consumption, was in a very bad condition when he arrived in the city. He was suffering from the disease in its last stages, and was incurable. He had been to Edmonton for the benefit of his health, but it was too late. The man's name was Peter Lee, and he was about forty years of age. He leaves a wife and family in Nebraska.

When the land is fit for the seeder, every farmer is prepared to push ahead with seeding operations for the season of 1911. The delay caused by the sudden change in the weather has enabled them to thoroughly clean their seed grain of impurities and bluestone it, so that the crop this year should be of a high standard.

W. S. Whitelaw, representing Henderson directories Alberta, spent Monday in town. The first directory for the province of Alberta, spent Monday in town. Is being prepared by this company and promises to be a most bulky as well as useful volume of information.

The Standard is in receipt of a letter from A. Hartley, B. A. inspector of schools, Castor, Alta. and late principal of the Vermilion high school. Up to the present Mr. Hartley states that his new duties have chiefly been confined to schools on or near the railway, owing to the bad roads. The two larg towns in his inspectorate are Castor (population 1400), and Stettler (population 2000).

A big sale was inaugurated Saturday, last by Mr. Ben Bolt, representing the wholesalers, of the $7000.00 jewelry stock of G. E. Slater, which has been seized by creditors. Some $3000.00 must be released to settle claims and until the amount is obtained the high grade stock is going under the hammer. Auctions every afternoon and evening and private sales all the time. The people of the surrounding country and neighboring towns should not miss this chance of obtaining all lines of jewelry, cut glass etc., under forced sale conditions. The full page adv. in this issue of the Standard will give you particulars of this big sale and the opportunity presented to purchasers.

The Innocent Murderers

A MYSTERY STORY

(By WILLIAM JOHNSTON and PAUL WEST)

...copyright, 1910, by Duffield & company.

The Dean's Telegram

CHAPTER XVII.—(Continued)

"I think we can manage it," said Dr. Dean, stroking down his beard. "Of course, we must make sure of the gentleman's identity. Mr. Mitchell, you have seen the body. Will you be good enough to identify it?"

"I have already done so," said Mitchell, "and I have no hesitation in saying that it is the body of Mr. Wallis."

"Then," said Dr. Dean, "I think we may consider the matter settled. I will now ring up the police station and ask them to send a man round to take charge of the body. Meanwhile, I suggest that we all return to the house and have some refreshment. I am sure we all need it after the shock we have had."

The doctor stepped short, entered the house and rang the bell. In a few minutes the party were seated round the dining-room table.

Edmund Mitchell was in a state of nervous excitement. He was unable to control his feet and caught her as she fell. Then, with a wild cry, he dashed out of the room, and a few moments later the front door slammed violently.

Dr. Dean looked at his watch. "I must be off," he said. "I have to see the coroner at once, and I suppose I shall be detained some time. Mr. Mitchell, I am afraid you will have to remain here for the present. Perhaps you will be kind enough to look after Miss Wallis. I will send a man round to take your statement. Good-afternoon."

170 NEW TOWNS IN THE WEST THIS YEAR

96 For The Canadian Northern

Winnipeg, April 10.—One hundred and seventy new towns will be born in Western Canada this year. This will be an advance of practically one every two days, which is travelling some, even in these days of rapid development.

The announcement was made March [illegible] that the Canadian Pacific would put on fifty new communities this season, and this morning the other railways are ... of their program. The G. T. P. railway will put on twenty-four towns, and the Canadian Northern ninety-six. Surveys have been made for almost all of these, and a few of them at division points.

The C. P. R. and G. T. P. have ... of their new towns, but only ... of those on the C.N.R. have been given a handle, although they are located and surveyed. A decision as regard to the names for all towns will be reached within the next two months.

In ... of these places the ... are beginning to struggle, but the majority of them ... virgin prairie with only ... stakes to mark the ... of man.

ACCIDENT AT FIRE HALL

Chemical Jar Bursts Severely Burning B. O. Woods and Constable Oakley

B. O. Woods and Constable Oakley were badly burned by sulphuric acid following the recharging of the chemical engine, Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The work of charging the engine had been finished and both men were engaged in filling a bottle with the acid when the large storage jar suddenly burst, throwing the burning fumes over both men. Constable Oakley, who was carrying the jar, was badly burned on the left hand and wrist and the left foot, while Mr. Woods was literally drenched with the acid, his hands, wrists and legs from below the thigh being terribly burned.

C.N.R. TO START NEW LINE THIS YEAR

Fifty miles of a new Canadian Northern line ... of North Battleford along the north bank of the Saskatchewan river, ... line again near Edmonton, is to be completed this year.

POSSIBILITIES OF AIRSHIPS

THE GREAT-WEST LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY

TWELVE POINTS SUGGESTED BY ITS REPORT FOR 1910

POINT No. 1

A large new business means that a great many people have decided that The Great-West Life is the best Company. The Great-West Life issued insurances of over $14,000,000 in Canada in 1910, a new Canadian record.

POINT No. 2

This was not the result of a spasmodic effort. The Great-West Life has been a leader in Canadian business for four successive years:

1907	$ 9,491,672
1908
1909

POINT No. 3

A large increase in business over a season that the policyholders are pleased with its policies have been issued and are glad to renew them. The Canadian business is one of the Great-West Life increases of during 1910 by nearly $11,000,000 in another record.

POINT No. 4

The most important factor in considering profits is the interest rate. An increase of two points in this respect will enable any Company to double its profits. The Great-West Life's interest rate is higher than that of any other Company in the world. It is 7% net.

POINT No. 5

Five investments of the Great-West Life are the safest possible. They are generally called conservative. Loans on mortgages on real estate yielding 7% to 8% and on city property worth more than double the amounts advanced.

POINT No. 6

Next in importance is economy. Canadian Company has lower expenses than The Great-West.

POINT No. 7

It requires less effort and consequently less cost to sell Great-West Life policies. Therefore the premium rates are the lowest and the profits are the highest.

Nothing succeeds like success.

POINT No. 8

The following is an ILLUSTRATION of the unsurpassed profits being paid on Policy No. 20 Payment Life Plan, age at entry 35.

Reason, Cash Value	Paid-up Insurance	Extended Insurance
Policy issued in 1906	$ 87	$58.25	8 & 15 days
Policy issued in 1907	35	20.35	8 & 15 days
Policy issued in 1908	100	52.60	11.20

POINT No. 9

The policies of The Great-West Life are clear, businesslike documents containing all possible privileges. A liberal Disability Clause insuring against disability from accident or disease is contained in all 1911 well-priced contracts.

POINT No. 10

The following table shows some items of the Company's business:

Insurance in Force	$8,258,462	4,800,343
New Business issued	1906	1 year
Assets	$14,674,504	4,779,740
Surplus for Protection of Policyholders

POINT No. 11

The Directors of The Great-West Life are all experienced business men, actively engaged in managing a successful business. They are:

A. Macdonald	J. H. Brock
Hon. R. Dobell	R. C. McIntyre
R. T. Riley	Geo. R. Crowe
H. M. Taylor	A. E. Hodgins
Wm. Wilton	A. C. Flumerfelt
F. Nelson

POINT No. 12

Published figures establishing the above statements are contained in the Government Blue Book or in reports of the company. Write to the Company for the 1911 Annual Report and if you want data of work, succinct information showing men and money the will be sent.

Council Sits Till Midnight

Vermilion, April 18.—The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held to-night His Worship, Mayor Dunsmore in the chair and all the councill present.

Several parties were in attendance to appeal against assessment. J.W.G. Morrison, barrister appeared for Mrs. Waugh re increased assessment on the Brunswick Hotel. On motion this property was reduced to the same as last year The appeal of P.G. Pilkie was not allowed. The assessment of the National manufacturing Co. was reduced from $3000.00 to $1000. and E.H. Naylor assessed $500.00 on goods. K.D. McLay appealed against being assessed $1800.00 by the school district of Vermilion on his homestead, which together with the $650.00 assessment by the local improvement district brought his farm assessment up to the handsome figure of $2650.00 not bad for a homestead. The roll however showed that the school district assessment was $1600.00 on this land. Mr. McLay was satisfied with this figure. The balance of the appeals not represented were referred back to the assessment committee.

R.C. Pinkney, real estate dealer asked permission of the board to place a large sign next the fence just south of the park facing the C.N.R. depot. As a town by-law prohibited the same Mr. Pinkney's request could not be granted.

Dr. G.H.W. Ryan addressed the Council on behalf of the Board of Trade, stating that it was the intention of that body to prosecute an aggressive advertising campaign in behalf of the town and district and asked that the grant of ... year be repeated. Previous efforts put fourth by the Board were bringing good results as was apparent. Arrangements had been made to join the Alberta Publicity League. The grant of $250.00 ... [illegible]

Auditor Armstrong's report for the first three months of the year was laid on the table and on being read by the Mayor was carried by motion.

Several communications were read and disposed of.

A petition re Vermilion Electric Supply Co., dated Feb. 21st, was tabled by the secy. It bore some 40 signatures, and requested that no steps be taken to cancel franchise of said company, but to try and devise some way of overcoming the present difficulty and obtaining a supply of electric light for the town, without unnecessarily burdening the municipality.

NERVILINE

Swift Cure For Croup

"Last year two of my children were taken with croup. They coughed something dreadfully, and were too sick to eat anything. I applied Nerviline to the throat and chest and gave it internally also. I also got the children to inhale 'Catarrhozone.' No remedy could have worked more satisfactorily. I recommend mothers to use Nerviline, it's a fine liniment."

... would not be enough. However, an allowance should be made, and four seconds seems to be about the fair thing. The innovation would be a benefit to the horsemen, and would increase the number of entries at half mile track meetings without working an injury to the mile tracks.

It may be argued that if it is right that horses with mile track records should receive an allowance at half mile track meetings, horses with half mile track records should be penalized in the same manner when they go to the big tracks, and if it is a poor rule that won't work both ways, then such a contention would seem to be just.

The sport of harness horse racing has grown enormously during the past five years, so much so, that the system of years ago does not work out satisfactorily to-day. Few changes have been made in the style of racing from the days of our grandfathers, and this in a measure accounts for the fact that the attendance at harness horse meetings in general has not increased like other sports. The old fashioned two or three races at four miles would not attract the number of spectators that are seen at present-day running meetings.

NOTSET

There are occasions when I really do hypnotize a man. That man is, unknown to the audience, of course, in my employ. I think he must hypnotize himself to a certain extent, for I never have any trouble with him—a few passes, and he is "off."

But one swallow does not make a summer and one subject does not make a hypnotist's "show." I have other men in my company, but they do not travel with me, and are never seen talking to me. They are men who have schooled themselves to bear a certain amount of pain without flinching. After I have apparently hypnotized them during my performance, they appear to be in the usual trance, during which needles are stuck into their cheeks and arms, lighted cigars are put down on their wrists, and they are made to stand in extremely uncomfortable positions.

As a matter of fact the needle or pin test is not very painful if you do the job properly.

Nose Colds Cured Quickly

Dear Sirs,—I was a chronic sufferer from continuous colds in the throat and nose, and for many years have constantly had Catarrh. I was recommended to use Catarrhozone, and find that by using the inhaler on the first touch of a cold or La Grippe I am able to stay it in a few hours. I have been able to breathe through my nose freely since using Catarrhozone; in fact I am completely cured. (Signed) Elwood B. Lee, ...

Of course, he gave out his name and local address and he would be identified by others in the hall. After I had left the town he would give out that he had found a good job elsewhere, and go off to another of my towns.

Could anything be simpler than that? ... method of working the "local man" fraud is a bit more complicated and subtle. My engagement in a town ... and I would ... I would send ... "work" ...

VERMILION, ALTA., APRIL 19, 1911

Crop Bulletin No. 8 being the final report on the grain crops and live stock of the province for 1910 has been issued by the minister of agriculture, the Hon. Duncan Marshall.

The final summing up of the yields of the various grain crops grown in the province during the year 1910 comes as an agreeable surprise, in that they are much heavier than at one time thought probable or even possible. Individual yields are reported that can be called nothing but phenomenal considering the conditions under which the crop was grown. The general impression before harvest was that there would be but little grain to harvest in some districts owing to the droughty conditions which prevailed during the growing season. This forecast was true in a measure of those places but in some of those districts which suffered from the drought it can be truthfully said that the harvest was much greater than expected. There is every reason to be proud of the excellent results obtained from the province as a whole, and particularly in those districts that experienced the severest drought known since grain growing began to assume large proportions.

The total area seeded to grain crops and reported in the May bulletin was 1,582,973 acres. The actual area reported to having threshed is 1,193,261 acres, as against 1,212,644 the previous year. The total yield of grain amounts to 22,027,184 bushels, an average of 18.46 bushels per acre, as against a total of 36,761,492 bushels for the previous year. The crop, though smaller than last year, was of high quality.

During the crop growing period of the year the weather conditions were most unfavourable, in fact the most unfavourable for many years. The latter part of the previous season was somewhat dry, the fall was particularly so, the snowfall of the winter was very light and most of what did fall was blown away, thus exposing the winter wheat and allowing the moisture in the land to escape. Spring opened rather early and conditions were favourable for seeding, although in some districts the land was rather dry. A few small showers fell but not enough to satisfy the demand for moisture. Conditions [illegible] usually fall during the last of May and the month of June failed to put in an appearance. The light showers that did fall were insufficient to meet the [illegible] growing crops. [illegible] some as a whole were favoured with somewhat more moisture, but the province as a whole did not receive the usual amount of rain during the growing season, and not until it was too late to benefit the crop did abundant rain fall.

While this side of the story is true there is another and a very important one which must be taken into consideration. Despite the light rainfall during the growing season, one fact stands out in an indisputable manner: Where the land was carefully and properly prepared, i.e., was summer tilled to conserve the rainfall of the previous year, excellent yields were obtained. Under these conditions as high as 25 bushels of wheat per acre are recorded. This clearly shows that the lack of intelligent methods of cultivation of the land had an important bearing upon the short crop of last year.

The fourth annual "At Home" of Veritas Lodge No. 29, I.O.O.F. held in the assembly hall of the [illegible] Monday night was one of the most enjoyable and successful functions of the winter season. The walls of the hall were prettily decorated with emblematical [illegible] and there was a perfect [illegible] Vermilion Orchestra at its best, consequently the dancers enjoyed themselves to the utmost. The attendance was large. An address at the opening and a short but most enjoyable programme later in the evening were rendered. Shortly after midnight a sumptuous supper was partaken which redounded in credit to the caterer for the occasion [illegible]. It was shortly after three [illegible] the assembly dispersed [illegible] of again enjoying the privilege of attending a similar function [illegible] Oddfellows next year. The same hall programmes and dances were printed at the Standard office. Visitors were present from Mannville and Vegreville.

The [illegible] on well is now below the 400 foot level and since this morning Mr. Morrison has been drilling in fire clay. He is confident of striking a big flow of water or gas between 430 and 450 feet.

The numerous horsemen in this district are preparing their routes for the approaching season and judging from the avalanche of orders for bar[illegible] at this office, must be [illegible] glad to order their printing [illegible]. Most of the [illegible] May 1st.

CUMMINGS

The petition for a government telephone service to the residents of the Cummings district is meeting with a hearty response from the settlers in the district many of whom have signed same. The petition is at the store for the convenience of the signers. The proposed line runs from Vermilion to settlers in the Cummings district and is expected to cost $15 per signer per year.

F. Wilson one of the Cummings district first settlers is in the district for a few days from Edmonton and is leaving for Vancouver B. C. to join his brother Mr. Edgard Wilson as a partner in the building and contracting business.

Several quarter sections of land have been changing hands in the Valley lately.

There is a rumour of Mr. Black the Presbyterian Student who was stationed here a year ago is visiting the district again. while Mr. Black was stationed here he won the esteem and respect of all classes. If when visiting the district he could be induced to stay and again take up the work amongst us, he would receive the entire Districts hearty welcome and support.

Coming in Tens of Thousands

Halifax, N.S., April 17.—All records for immigrants landed at Halifax and St. John have been broken during the winter season just closing, largely at the expense of United States ports, according to steamship officials. While most of the immigrants have settled in the Canadian Northwest, there is said to have been considerable immigration to lands in the western part of the United States. The shorter sea voyage is given as the reason for favoring the Canadian ports. It is estimated that more than 100,000 persons were landed here and in St. John since last November, compared with 65,000 immigrants arriving during a similar period last year.

"Canada" is On Everyone's Lips

Ottawa, April 17.—W. D. Scott superintendent of immigration, who has returned from his annual visit to the old country, states that he has never seen anything like the real enthusiasm which the mere mention of the name Canada creates in Great Britain, on any pervious visit. He expects the greatest immigration from Great Britain this year in the history of the Dominion. He says it is impossible to book either a steerage or a second class passenger on any direct steamer bound for Canada for six months to come. In addition to this many others are coming via New York and Boston.

Mr. Scott predicts that there will be at least 175,000 immigrants from Great Britain this year, as against 112,000 last year. Most important of all is that the quality of the immigration is improving. He regarded those who came out with him on the same steamer as the pick of the people.

ELK POINT

John Green, Homestead Inspector made Elk Point another visit this week.

Elk Point will have two mails a week, beginning the first of May. They cannot come too often.

A meeting was held at Clark Sheldon's cabin last Tuesday to complete the organization of a Liberal Association for this part of the country.

Elk Point school opened four weeks ago with Mrs. Chas. Hood as temporary teacher until a regular qualified teacher could be secured. Seventeen pupils are in regular attendance and are very much interested in their work.

New settlers are arriving every week. Rumor says a doctor is going to locate in Elk Point. We were very glad to hear it.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

Women refuse to give up the picturesque and artistic low neckwear, and small blame to them. For, besides being so ... comfortable, the low collar is certainly ... youthful in suggestion—and usually more becoming. Pleated effects will again be the fad this spring, for pleatings run riot on the new neckwear.

Dinner dresses are the pre-occupation of the moment. It is impossible to give any satisfactory idea of the walking frocks for spring, as even at Nice, where the fashions have a chance of being launched this month, the weather is too wintry to discard the long mantle for a costume.

In Paris dinner parties are the order of the day, and everybody seeks the novelties that are in the air. A notable dinner dress has a foundation of black satin, with a tunic in black tulle of that fine silky quality that is the base of most of the laces. The bodice is covered with little tubes of steel, leaving an opening of black tulle upon the neck and sleeves, with a band of the same embroidery attaching the small tucks just above the elbow, and at the bottom of the tunic. In front is a band of ... lace crossing and falling upon the train, sewn transparent as an insertion, and not left to give the effect of a sash at the back. The effect of the silver, the white lace, and the tulle and satin is most happy, and one of the latest models of the famous houses.

The Brussels net bandage that come in all the white mentioned run through a wide variety of design and coloring. Not only beads, silk, and tinsel are used on them, but bugles and jewels—anything at all that will give the effect sought. And they come light or dark. Some of these bandings cost as high as $... a yard. With skirt bands costing as much as this and even more, it is fortunate that skirts are narrow, and the outlook remains good for them.

Among the trimmings are also included a great ... of overdress arrangements in the way of ... jackets, scarfs, and garnishments ... and cover the waist more or less, according to ... A MYSTERY STORY

(By WILLIAM JOHNSTON and PAUL WEST)

Detective Sullivan's Shock

The sorting of Thursday's mail from the three hundred subscribers in a downtown district was the great red letter day in the week's routine. Orders came in from the country and pack upon pack of paper—samples, circulars, etc.—left the offices of the many firms that had been induced to advertise in the Sunday issue of the Star. Bundles of newspapers were made up and addressed, and the Lake Shores and Pacific Railway Company was busy getting them away.

Before Mr. Parker, however, was he now reporting to leader, was deeply engaged in a task of his own. The fact that Mr. Parker could make the way mailers had turned out for finding the addresses had caused it to be left to a junior one that he knew to be perfectly trustworthy. He was almost hoping that the task would end the performances of the reverend sage.

What he would have done had it changed Frederick Lee proves a perplexing fact to recount. He never did say had remembered something that he had left about the fact that it is still true. It may not be now, but it certainly was then. Lee, himself, thinks to reason out of all the people in the town, somebody must be going to gain sooner or later. Sunday—

Mr. Parker's murder is a mystery of whisper. They were passing Dean Dynamite Square when Packer had broken that discovery, attracted to a light in the window of the office of the Star. Mr. Thomas B. Thompson. To the left he saw open door, stood the boss, and with him, apparently on the best of terms, the mysterious stranger they had seen around the college so often on Tuesday but who had disappeared during the day. Strangers were quite a feature, especially strangers who visited the Star office and spent an hour talking there with other scholars from out of town. This man was not a student judging from appearances. There was something about him that aroused the suspicion of all three. Is Parker's warning they stopped to look at the bulletin in the front room of the office. Then they went on to the Sunday Star office, where they found Parker's head clerk busily engaged in sorting out the mail.

"I had to get there next week," the stranger

"Then I'll be glad to help you," said Packer, "for I'm a newspaper man myself. I'm on the college staff, and I'm also a correspondent for the Star. I'm sure I can get you what you want."

"Thank you," said the stranger, "but I'm afraid you can't help me. I'm looking for a man who is a subscriber to the Sunday Star, and I don't know his name or address. I only know that he lives in a house with a red roof and a white fence, and that he has a son who is a student at the college."

"Why, that's Professor Hood's house," said Packer, "and I know his son well. Come with me and I'll get you the address

DEMONSTRATION FARM

The Board of Trade are in receipt of a communication from the Honorable Minister of Agriculture with respect to the establishment of a demonstration farm at Vermilion. The communication states that every consideration will be given Vermilion when the farms are located, though the [illegible] the place where they will be established will have to be largely a matter of Geography; as there are six farms and these will have to be placed in six different locations.

SECOND EDITION

The second edition of "Land and Agriculture in Alberta" has just been issued by the direction of Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture. Location and area of the province; climate and physical features; natural vegetation; soil cultivation, cereal production, live stock and mixed farming; poultry and dairying; irrigation; water and fuel; special opportunities and official information are the headings of the eleven chapters contained in the work. These are all treated in a most reliable and authentic manner and the work redounds in credit to those interested in its publication. A happy and telling selection of illustrations have been chosen, the frontispiece being a view of the Alberta Government exhibit at Spokane, Wash., Oct. 1910, which secured first prize. "A winter wheatfield", page 25, was taken at Vermilion. Copies of this valuable work should be procured from the department by settlers to send to friends.

Enquiries having reached the Post Office Department, Canada, from time to time as to the minimum period for which a newspaper or periodical should be paid for or ordered before the person paying or ordering would be considered a regular bona fide subscriber to the publication within the meaning of the Post Office Act, a decision has been reached fixing the minimum period at one month in case of daily newspapers, three months in the case of weekly newspapers, and six months in the case of fortnightly, semi-monthly or monthly publications.

(Observer, Vegreville)

On the first of April Vermilion was created a customs outport and the usual office opened [illegible] transaction of [illegible] falls to the lot of customs outports. The post chosen of Vermilion [illegible] such an office were accorded [illegible] the Customs Department of the Dominion Government.

Away back in 1909, the Observer suggested that Vegreville should have a customs outport established here. Nothing was done at that time and although the Observer referred to the matter from time to time no definite action was taken until last fall when the Board of Trade appointed a committee to arrange recommendations for the Board to transmit to Ottawa. That committee has not reported to this day although they have had at least five months in which to do the work. So far as can be ascertained that committee never even held a formal meeting or did anything but talk about getting statistics of freight, express and postal business of Vegreville. What earthly use are statistics? What does the Government which is buried under statistics every day in the year care about the figures of the business done here except in a general way?

Now it is not too late by any means for something to be done about this matter. Because Vermilion is an outport, does not hinder Vegreville from becoming one. This committee which went to sleep last fall over its statistics should be replaced by an active committee of the present Board of Trade and the matter of a customs outport here gone after decisively and strongly. Let us have action at once on this business.

Mother Yearns for Son

No Trace Found of Mrs. Charles Whipple's Missing Boy

Newspaper notices, telegrams and letters have so far failed to locate Ruel E. Surring, the 17 year old boy wanted by his mother who lies on her death bed at 3018 Bryant avenue. For ten years she has not seen him.

Frantic efforts to locate him are being made by the husband of the boy's mother, Charles Whipple, and by other Minneapolis relatives.

Physicians, say Mrs. Wipple cannot live long. She wants to see her boy before she dies.

In 1901 she then Mrs. Millie D. Surring, was divorced from the boy's father. By a decree of court the lad then 7 years old, was turned over to his grandfather, William Surring of Volney, Allamakee county, Iowa, who had been appointed guardian. Mrs. Surring was allowed by order of the court to write the boy and to see him four times a year.

"I have had one letter from him since that time," she said yesterday.

"The one letter I received from the guardian said he could not be bothered by my correspondence to my boy. I have heard they told him his mother was dead and that now when we are trying to reach him, wherever he is, have kept from him our telegrams and letters.

Money to come to Minneapolis has been left with telegraph offices should the boy learn that his mother is searching for him. His mother believes he has been sent to Canada.

DEATH OF MRS. HAYWARD

The death of Mrs Eunice Hayward came as a shock Friday, April 21st. Mrs. Hayward was the widow of George Hayward who died in Lincoln, Sunbury County N.B. in April 1897. Some five years ago Mrs. Hayward accompanied by her daughter came to Vermilion to make her home with her two sons who had already settled here. For the past four years Mrs. Hayward has been an invalid. On Friday last she seemed in her usual health through the day and evening but at 10.30 p.m. she passed away while peacefully sleeping "Blessed are they that die in the Lord."

Mrs. Hayward is survived by one daughter, Effie and three sons Randolph, and Eldon of Vermilion and Chester of Newcastle N.B. the latter accompanied by his wife and two children were en route from Newcastle, N.B. and arrived in Vermilion, Monday morning. The funeral took place Monday afternoon April 24, Rev. J. E. Tiner officiating.

The remains were interred in the Vermilion Cemetery.

Building An Extension

Jos. McKone Adding Large Addition to His Warehouse

A large extension to his warehouse on First St. South, is being added by Jos. McKone, dealer in agricultural implements. Mr. McKone has found that his present large quarters are becoming too small for the large increase in his business and he is adding an addition 24x48.

On the 20th of April, 1911, the case of J. J. Black vs. Woods and Carmichael was tried in the Supreme Court at Edmonton, when judgment was given for the full amount of the plaintiff's claim and costs. The action was brought on a promissory note given on the purchase of a stallion, which died before the note was paid. The defendants claimed that the horse was not up to guarantee and that the plaintiff had agreed that it should pay for itself from services, and that in the event of its death the plaintiff would bear half the loss. The Court however, in the absence of anything in writing to uphold defendants claim found for the plaintiff as above. Murray & Ebbett were solicitors for the plaintiff, C. L. Fre[illegible] Edmonton, for the defendants.

Five Years Dyspepsia Cured

A WELL-KNOWN literary man was praising Lincoln at a dinner in New York.

"Lincoln," he said, "couldn't stand tedious writing in others. He once condemned for its tediousness a Greek history, whereupon a diplomat took him to task.

"The author of that history, Mr. President," he said, "is one of the profoundest scholars of the age. Indeed, it may be doubted whether any man of our generation has plunged more deeply in the sacred fount of learning."

"Yes, or come up drier," replied Lincoln.

She: "It is a woman's lot to suffer in silence."

He: "I should put it differently."

She: "How, pray?"

He: "A silent woman suffers a lot."

"I always look out for number one," said the selfish man, "don't you?"

"Well, hardly," said the person so addressed, who happened to be a widow. "You see, I am looking out for number two."

The Horseman

[illegible]

... McMahon and just saved his entrance. He was shipped to Columbus, and in his first race there once more finished third to his old rivals, The Abbe and Evelyn W.

The second week of the Columbus meeting he made his final start for the year and beat a brilliant race, although defeated. He finished 9 4 2 to Rose K, 2:01¼, Major Mallow 2:03½, and Miss Ambulator 2:04¼, in 2:03½, 2:03, 2:04½.

Branham Baughman is a son of the great Gambetta Wilkes, the leading son of George Wilkes, 2:22 and is out of a daughter of the good sire Nutwood, a son of Nutwood 2:18¾. He is royally bred, and when his usefulness as a racehorse is past, he should surely prove a successful sire, and thereby add additional fame to the great Wilkes family.

THE FIRST DOUBLE TRACKS TO THE PACIFIC

An expression of confidence in the future "almost without parallel" is the announcement that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Railroads are to be double-tracked through from the Missouri River to San Francisco at a cost of [illegible], so says The Manufacturer's Record (Baltimore) echoing the optimistic strain of the daily papers which see in this huge expenditure sure proof that the period of depression in business is now at an end. This, as the New York Commercial puts it, is "the first great departure, upon a great scale, from the policy of curtailment of improvements entered upon by the railroads following the panic of 1907."

Now that one great railroad has dropped "the policy of sulking or waiting which has prevailed since the rate cases developed under the new act of Congress," the Springfield Republican sees close at hand the breaking up of "the crust of depression and apathy which has overlaid the business world for months." Indeed, declares the Indianapolis Star, "in twenty-four hours after the announcement was made by Spokesman Lovett of the Harriman lines business had taken on a more wholesome aspect."

Other papers note that whatever conditions may have been elsewhere, the busy Pacific roads have been steadily making money, and can surely afford these improvements. The Omaha Bee and the Boston Transcript are relieved to find that the spirit of Harriman still animates the management of the system he built up. [illegible]

... five per cent. goes to Great Britain, which is the centre of distribution for the States and Germany, the latter country taking the next largest quantity after the former.

The mica raised in India is the variety known as "muscovite," and is found in large pegmatite veins traversing mica schists in various parts of the peninsula, principally the east and south. The two principal centres of production are the Nellore district in the Madras presidency and a tract of land about twelve miles broad and sixty miles long which stretches across the junction of the Gaya, Hazaribagh, and Monghyr districts in Bengal. In the latter of the two areas mentioned the mica industry is a very old-established one, and can be traced back for several centuries. In the former, however, the mining of the mineral was only started very recently, consequent on the discovery of rich deposits by prospectors employed by European capital. In this district the deposits occur in pegmatite veins in granite, in micaceous gneiss, in hornblende, and mica schists. The strata vary from a few inches to several hundred feet in thickness. These pegmatite veins (or "dikes" as they are sometimes called) consist of three essential minerals—quartz, felspar, and Mica—in varying proportions. In appearance they bear a resemblance to coarse granite, and the best mica is usually found in those veins in which the constituent minerals have crystallized in large masses. Where felspar and quartz are present in small masses, the accompanying mica is usually of little value.

The mica found adjacent to the surface is almost always soft and cracked, quite useless for commercial purposes other than manufacture into the substance known as "micanite." Clearer and better colored mica is reached lower down in the solid ground; and as the tunnel reaches greater depths, where the rock formation is harder and more uniform, the mineral extracted improves in quality. It is stated that in the United States no more than five per cent of the total yield of the mica mines is sheet mica. In India however, it is calculated that an average of ten per cent can be cut into plates, the balance being either wasted or converted, in part, into micanite. General experience shows that the mica mostly demanded from India by America is of the green and ruby colored varieties in sheets of three square inches and upward. India actually produces the mineral in green, ruby, yellow, white, and amber colors. These are divided into clear and spotted or stained varieties, the clear ruby and clear green being the most valuable, fetching, as they do, at present, prices between $7,200 and $9,720 a ton. Of the common varieties, all sized sheets are readily obtainable at prices ranging from 16 cents a pound for 2 by 3 inches to $1.71 and 12 cents a pound for the larger sheets. The presence of any metallic insertions in the mineral renders it useless for insulating electrical purposes (for which the bulk of it is required) generally. For these specific purposes the sheets must be flexible, free from cracks, capable of withstanding high pressure, and non-conducting. The Indian mines produce mica, conforming to this last specification, in large quantities.

The mica mines in Bengal are still worked in a very primitive way, in fact, in exactly the same method as they were worked centuries ago, when the principal use the mineral was put to was to fill the apertures of windows ... [illegible]

RHEUMATISM
18 MONTHS' SUFFERING CURED

"Dear Sir:

"I wish you to put my letter on record for the sake of suffering humanity. I have suffered 18 months with Muscular Rheumatism in my back. I have spent at least $20.00 on pills and liniments during that time, but nothing would ease me of the pain,—in fact it was a chronic pain. For those long 18 months it stayed right with me, sometimes convulsive and cramp-like, causing me to groan and cry aloud. Every moment was torture. I could not turn in bed without yelling out. Now I will always bless the day when I first started to rub in, and to take internally 'Nerviline.' After using four bottles, my pains have left me. I shall always take off my hat to 'Nerviline' and can honestly say it's the poor man's best friend, because it will always drive away from you the Demon—Pain.

"Yours truthfully,

Three Heroes of the Piute War

Three heroes—an Indian who gave up chieftainship to minister to his enemies, a white miner who took command of soldiers and snatched victory out of defeat, a negro servant who gave up his life for his friends, loom large among the memories of a Californian, who went west in the golden days of '49. The deeds of these men, showing that heroism knows no distinction of color, are told in one remarkable chapter of Mr R. D. Woods's recent book, "Lights and Shadows of Life on the Pacific Coast."

Joe Bowers, perfect specimen of Indian manhood at its best, was chief of the Inyo Piutes when they declared war against the whites in 1866. He voted for peace, and, when overruled, laid down his chieftainship until the war was over, a hot-headed sub-chief taking his place. He then determined to save the lives of as many whites as he could.

To lonely miners' cabins in far-off canyons he went, warning the miners to flee to the fort. He was asked by them what they should do with their possessions, and he said "Leave them as they are, I will protect them, and when the war is over, come back and you will find all as you leave them." At the door of each cabin he planted a long, slender reed upon which was fixed some mysterious symbol. This was notice to the Indians that the cabin and all about it were under his protection. Many a miner, whose life would have been sacrificed, was thus saved.

At one point on the mesas, that lay about the base of Waucoba Mountain, sixty miles from the fort, over a range of lofty mountains, two men had their camp where they were herding over two hundred head of cattle, fattening upon the white sage abundant there. These he warned to flee to the fort, telling them to leave their cattle to him, and that they would be safe. Grateful for their lives thus saved, the men told Bowers that his people ... [illegible]

... lake. By Greenly's command, the squaws and the papooses were allowed to escape into the protection of the sagebrush, where they crouched like quail, safe from the onslaught. Slowly the Indians, mile after mile, were pressed down the valley, until before them shone the waters of the sullen lake. But as steady as the march of the sun in the heavens, on and on and on they were pressed, until the shores were reached, and on into the lake. The Indian war was over, and the dead warriors of the tribe floated in the sullen waters.

The memory of this terrible day kept the peace ever afterward.

The third heroic soul disclosed by this war, says Mr Woods, was "a simple black man—a negro servant who, in an hour of peril, to save those whom he had served, gave up his life, his body to mutilation and torture." This is the story of the baptism of the peculiar mound rising from the level plain, known as "Charley's Butte."

During one of the fiercest days of the Indian war a family consisting of several men, women, and children were fleeing to the fort. In the party was an old negro servant named Charley, who had been with the family for years. He was a patient, faithful man, always recognizing the [illegible] of a negro to the white man even in his state of freedom. He was a typical Southern negro, with all the loyalty peculiar to those who lived with and served the Southerners. The party were mounted on horses, and were urging them to as great speed as possible over the broken and rocky way toward the fort, still some six miles away.

Just as they forded Owens River, a war whoop was heard in the distance, and soon there rode into view a band of painted warriors on the war trail. They had discovered the fleeing family and were riding like fury to cut off their escape. The horses of the fleeing party were worn with long riding, and with whip and spur they failed to ... LOCAL NEWS.

The Standard is pleased to note that Mrs. H. O. Woods is clearly convalescing from a successful operation she underwent at Edmonton.

The sale on Saturday conducted by Craig & Falkins, at Woods Corrals, saw a big list of stuff disposed of at fair average prices.

H.O. Woods was in Edmonton last week and while there did a little missionary work in behalf of the Vermilion district, no less than five prospective settlers returning with him.

x I have arranged with Dr. Menlove, of Vegreville to be here the 1, 2, & 3, May to take charge of my practice for a few days.—Dr. F. V. West.

Hugh Service, south of town is selling off a bunch of good milch cows and some other stuff by public auction on May 4th. Craig & Falkins will conduct the sale.

Skips Slater and Cooper received the trophies won by their rinks at the Vegreville bonspiel in January, yesterday and acknowledge the same with thanks.

The Advertiser, Stony Plains, Alta has ceased publication, at least temporarily. The management reports that publication may be resumed as soon as business warrants.

To close out an estate, tenders will be received by the executors and trustees, for the property known as the Vermilion Hotel, town. For detailed particulars see notice regarding same elsewhere in this issue of the Standard.

Saturday's issue of the Edmonton Bulletin contained a splendid write-up of Vermilion by F. R. McKitrick, which reaching as it does a very large number of outside readers, will give them some idea of the rapid growth and stability of the town and adjacent country.

A.W. Ebbett, of the law firm of Murray & Ebbett, was in Vermilion last week having recently returned from an extended absence in the maritime provinces. Mr. Ebbett is looking extremely well and tips the scales at 204 lbs. It will not be denied that he carries weight which is a good thing in the profession. His large circle of acquaintances are pleased to see him back in our midst.

Ideal seeding weather.

Good headway is being made with the Stiles Block. The frame work is up and covered, the men now working on the roofing.

Fred Whitmarsh, who was called to Edmonton some three weeks ago owing to illness in his family, returned to the district Friday last.

Farmers! Watch for sale bills, shortly. Auctioneer Brokmeier will be selling 50 head or more of cattle (steers, heifers and cows), in the Marwayne district.

Messrs. Stephens brothers have received their new auto, which was delivered to them the first of the week from West Bros., dealers. This car brings the number owned in the town up to five.

C. N. Davidson of Cummings left Monday night for his former home at Kenney, Ill. Mr. Davidson has some business interests to look after but expects to return in the course of a year. Crops being good around Vermilion he will bring up a bunch of buyers. J. K. Davidson, a son, is in charge of the farm at Cummings during his father's absence.

Well-Driller Morrison with the hole down to a depth of some 150 feet has apparently struck the bottom of an ancient lake. The water was shut off Monday and yesterday rapid progress was being made. The prospects of shortly striking rock and a gusher are extremely bright. Such being the case the water supply problem for the town of Vermilion for present and future needs will be solved.

The late Hon. David Davis once said: "Each year every local paper gives from $100.00 to $3,000.00 in free lines for the benefit of the community in which it is located. No other agency can or will do this. The local editor, in proportion to his means, does more for his town than any other ten men, and in fairness, man with man, he ought to be supported - because a local paper is the best investment a community can make. To-day the editors of local papers do the most work for the least money of any men on earth." The most tangible way to uphold the town paper is to keep your subscription paid up in advance and make prompt settlement of your account

WEALTHY TORONTO CITIZEN FOR VERMILION

Location Here Will Mean Much To the Town

John E. Bonsall, a wealthy citizen of Toronto, accompanied by Mrs. Bonsall and baby, are expected to arrive in Vermilion about June 1st, and there are the best of prospects of the family making their home here.

Mr. Bonsall, who is widely acquainted here, disposed of interests at Cobalt, Ont., a couple of years ago for a quarter of a million dollars. In a visit to Vermilion he purchased the Boutell farm east of town for $10,000, and is coming West again to engage in farming operations on a large scale, by purchasing a section more land and putting on power breakers.

The location of Mr. Bonsall at Vermilion will undoubtedly prove a good thing for the town in many other ways than farming.

It is not stated authoritatively, but rumor has it that the money lost by Bassett has long since been made up to her husband by Professor Hopkins, who insisted on repaying it. But then he could well afford to, as his discoveries have brought him ... still bringing him much more every year than a mere $5,000.

The End.

STRENGTH OF WOOD AFTER LONG SERVICE

Evidence that structural timber, if properly protected, does not deteriorate in ordinary service is afforded by some white pine beams, which formed the chords for a timber bridge during eighteen years of service, the bridge being covered during fourteen of those years. Tests of the timber showed an average elastic limit of 3,964 pounds and a modulus of rupture of 5,200 pounds per square inch. According to W. K. Hatt, of Purdue University, who records these facts in Engineering News, white pine beams of large size are credited with an average modulus of rupture of 5,000 pounds per square inch.

The great river Tsangpo, from longitude ninety-four degrees and ten seconds east to its entrance into the valley of Assam, under the name of Dihong, is practically unknown.

The region embracing the complicated mountain and river systems between India and China also affords opportunities for the adventurous explorer, inasmuch as there is much to learn about it.

In the mass of islands lying to the south of Asia, there is great field for exploration, especially in New Guinea. Some of the larger islands to the east of New Guinea are also virgin ground.

In North America most of the work of the explorer has been done, yet in the Dominion of Canada vast unknown tracts invite the explorer.

It is in South America, however, that the most extensive unexplored regions await the scientific travelers. Although this continent is far richer than that of Africa, and although it has attracted the ablest explorers, it has on the whole received much less attention than Africa, why it would be difficult to say.

Many parts of the Columbian cordilleras still need exploration, as well as the basins of several northern affluents of the Amazon...

HOW TO BAKE PLANKED FISH

At a permanent camp it is possible to have baked planked fish as a special camp delicacy. Take along to camp with you the necessary number of "planks" of planed oak, from 1 to 1¼ inch thick and varying in size according to requirements. For the average bass or trout twelve inches long will be satisfactory. Scrub plank and dry in open air. Rub in a spoonful of olive oil or melted butter on the surface selected for cooking. Place plank in the oven and when it gives out a pale ... place your fish on it. Baste the fish with olive oil or melted butter and season with pepper, but no salt. Allow usual time for baking but baste the fish often, so it may be thoroughly permeated by the acid of the gas which is formed between it and the plank. When the fish is nearly done make a border of mashed potatoes round it on the plank and return to the oven until potato is nicely browned. Arrange fried onions, boiled peas or beans within the potato border according to fancy and serve on the plank. The planks must never be washed but simply wiped clean and dried with the cloth used in greasing it, then hung up in muslin bag to protect it from dust.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

At the present moment, the London shops are the foremost centre of attraction; every day marks the arrival of fresh supplies of articles which have been designed to meet the demand, which every one prophesies will be unprecedented appertaining to dress and to personal adornment. Already all the big firms are displaying the new materials which are to be used for dresses for the early Courts. They mostly take the form of elaborate brocades, one particularly beautiful material, which will be largely used for Court trains and dresses, being a handsome black silk brocade, ornamented with huge feathers, worked at intervals of several inches apart in pure gold thread. The effect is most charming, and quite ideal for Court trains. It is also to be had in white and cream, and is quite the latest sensation in the world of dress.

Although it is generally considered right to guard the new spring models from the public gaze, and for some weeks only to show them to the most favored of customers, one big shop in the West End is already making a show of new spring toilettes and blouses, and consequently attracting crowds of sight seers and buyers.

WOULD ARBITRATION END WAR

...was, as many eminent Americans have since admitted, in form and matter an unwarranted affront to Great Britain which raised the less civilized elements in the United States to a perfect frenzy of enthusiasm; and though—perhaps intentionally—a humiliation to England, it was yet dealt with by a British Prime Minister, wedded by tradition to the older diplomacy, in such a manner as to lead not only to a peaceful settlement but to prepare the way, with the help of the United States, to a sense of solidarity between the two peoples which has steadily increased to our own day.

Honor and territorial interest were both involved, and that at a time when mutual suspicion was immensely greater than it is now; yet, the matter was submitted to arbitration. When, therefore, we take into account the change that has come over the spirit of Anglo-American relations ... decade we realize that those relations have reached a stage which places military conflict outside the range of practical politics. And even when the greatest and the most prosperous of British Colonies seems to be drifting into absorption by the United States and even when the word "annexation" is pronounced by an American statesman hardly a whisper of rancour or ill feeling is heard on either side.

Are we to conclude therefore that the contemplated treaty is supererogatory?

If in politics the immediate material result is the matter ... we should have ... in the affirmative. In saying that I do not disregard ... thoroughgoing arbitration treaty ... alliance. In the present condition of ... in Europe such an alliance ... Any attempt on the part of Anglo-Saxondom to impose peace on the balance of the world by force of arms would be regarded by other nations as an attempt to achieve Anglo-Saxon world domination, to be resisted by Pan-Germans or, as the new arrangement would cause the dropping of existing differences (mainly imaginary) by a Pan-German ... Slavonic combination. And such combination would command, even to-day, military forces as considerable as the Anglo-American, the armament rivalry would be likely to ...

ANGLO-AMERICAN COMPLETE ARBITRATION

At Guildhall, the city of London on April 28, adopted resolutions pledging the city to the support of Anglo-American complete arbitration. Over the heads of the distinguished assemblage, the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes were entwined. Speakers declared that the treaty would mark a new era in civilization. The treaty, which was first proposed by President Taft, provides for the submission of all differences to arbitration. "The profound significance of the new departure," said Premier Asquith, "is that between Great Britain and the United States, whatever the gravity of the issue and the magnitude of the interest involved, whatever the pregancy of feeling it might arouse, there would be [illegible] abandonment of war [illegible] possible solution, and a [illegible] argument for [illegible] by judicial [illegible] of the [illegible] ordeal of battle."

The resolution moved by Mr. Asquith and seconded by Mr. Balfour was as follows:

"That this meeting of the citizens of London, assembled in the Guildhall, cordially welcomes [illegible] of the United States [illegible] of a general treaty of arbitration between that country and the British empire, and pledges its support to the principles of such a treaty as serving the highest interests of the two nations, and as tending to promote the peace of the world."

Will Erect A Brick Business Block

J. W. Giles Has Plans Drawn For Building on First St. South

Another instance of the stability of Vermilion's onward march [illegible], is the announcement made by J. W. Giles, barber, that he has plans prepared for a solid brick block on the property now partly occupied by his present premises on First St. south.

The building will have a frontage of 50ft. and will extend back to a depth of 50ft. It will be two storey's high with a seven foot basement the entire size of the premises. The foundation walls will be of stone. The ground floor will contain two business stands, one 20x50 is to be occupied [illegible] by the proprietor, and the other 30x50 is for renting purposes. The second floor is to be divided into suites of offices. Excavation work for the block will commence early this month.

Owing to its location the stand is among the most desirable in the town and the premises will be the first brick business block erected in Vermilion.

The decision of Mr. Giles to put up such a costly and substantial building is another instance of the enterprise which is characteristic of Vermilion's business men and of their unbounded faith in the town's future.

People usually pay as much attention to a store as a store pays to THEM in the advertising, for instance.

Brick Company Incorporated

To Operate at Once-Local Men Interested

A company known as the Vermilion Brick Works will be in operation here almost immediately. The incorporators of the company are J. D. Stephens, G. E. Hayward and R. S. Stephens. Ten acres have been purchased on W. Bryden's homestead just west of town, and the machinery belonging to the company formerly operating here has been secured. A Mr. King of Red Deer holds the position of manager at present. The company is trying to make arrangements with the C.N.R. to have a spur put in. This will make quick and easy shipping possible. The deposit of Clay has been thoroughly tested and produces a splendid quality of brick free from lime and all undesireable properties.

Watch Vermilion grow.

G. E. Hayward is erecting a large costly residence on Second St. north.

A. E. Jones is engaged in painting the residences of Norman Atkinson and K. D. McLay.

A. E. Pilkie was able to be up for the first time to-day after his recent severe illness.

J. A. Roseborough is about to build a brick cottage on Second St. north, near the school. The stone foundation is completed.

Miss Sarah Turner and Miss Margaret Andrews left on the 30th inst for Lloydminster to take positions on Britannia Hotel staff there. Not liking their positions on their arrival in the border line town they took the next train for Vermilion and are at present assisting Mrs. Waugh in the Brunswick Hotel here.

His Work In The Old Land

H. H. Collins Gives Standard Short Synopsis of His Work as Immigration Agent

Mr. Editor,
Dear Sir—

As I promised some time ago to give you a few details regarding my visit to the old country as Immigration Agent, I beg to submit the following, which might be of interest to the readers of your valuable paper.

I left Vermilion on Nov. 28th, and after spending a few days in Ottawa and Montreal arrived in Halifax on Dec. 6th. We should have sailed on the 7th, but on the afternoon of that date a regular blizzard sprang up which kept us from sailing until 2.30 the next morning. I did not turn in until we had got well out to sea. A strong wind was blowing and a high sea running.

When we got up next morning we found the storm had increased in fury and a great many seats were empty at breakfast table. Four other Vermilionites were on board but for two days I saw none of them, at last I went in search and found two, [who were sharing a stateroom] in a very bad state of sea sickness, one was so sick he swore he would never come back, however after a few days they both got over it and were able to enjoy a good laugh at themselves. The other two I never saw till the last day of our voyage. But when the Royal Edward cast anchor in Bristol channel we all gave a sigh of relief and were glad the voyage was over, for such a week I never saw. I am a good sailor and never get sick at sea, but for my own part I was glad when we sighted the Fastnet lighthouse on the coast of Dear Ould Ireland. The Emerald Isle looked good to me that day as we steamed along her shores before rounding into the channel. I would like to say a few words [illegible] in connection with the Canadian Northern Boats, I have heard a [illegible] talk [illegible] these boats [illegible] but I want to state right here that I never [illegible] in a better boat [illegible] They can give any boat [illegible]

[illegible] latest. We dropped anchor at Bristol at 4 p.m. the following Wednesday, having made the trip [illegible] and hurricanes. We got ashore at [illegible] Immigration office and at once got [illegible] I was 3 days in the [illegible]

they are coming in tens of thousands and this year will be a record one in immigration. The day I left Aberdeen I came near missing the train owing to the crowds at the station leaving for Canada and large number of friends seeing them off. I was the means of sending over six hundred to Canada. Many of them wealthy people who intend buying land and going in for ranching. A few people in Vermilion have asked me if I was bringing them here and I answered in the negative, they asked why? Well that is easy to explain. In the first place the government don't allow us to discriminate. We have to bear in mind that from the Atlantic to the Pacific was Canada and I think the readers of the Standard will see the reason when they take into consideration that the East have to pay their share of the expense. Besides I found with few exceptions that the people I interviewed had their minds made up what part of Canada they would like to go to, it would be of no use anyone trying to take them by the ear and lead them anywhere you liked. However I did my best for Vermilion. I took with me a large number of books published by the Board of Trade and wherever I went I left one on the table in the reading room, then after I had distributed them I had another lot sent me by Mr. R. Pinkney. I also distributed four pounds of wheat which Mayor Dunsmore was kind enough to give to me. This wheat was greatly admired by all. I had a label on it showing that it was grown in the Vermilion District, and how much it yielded per acre. And the result is that over a dozen men with capital are coming to take up land north of the town, a great many went to B.C., a few to Edmonton, Calgary, Moosejaw, Regina, Saskatoon etc. But by far the most went to Winnipeg, the people in the old country think the Peg. is the hub of Canada. A large number of farm hands went to Ontario where work was found them, and all the girls went to Ontario where work was waiting them with the exception of a few who went to St. John, New Brunswick. After spending over three months in Scotland I went to London where I had a few holidays before sailing on the Royal George, March 22nd when I got to Bristol I was delighted to meet Mr. Albert Gibbs who was one of the four who went over with me.

If we had a rough passage going, the reverse was the case coming back for we had a delightful trip. And the Royal George [illegible] little over four and [illegible] days. One of the four who went with me brought back a blooming bride with him, and the one who [illegible] to return it would [illegible] diets. So the [illegible]

And my earnest wish is [illegible] may still keep [illegible] [illegible] pects I am

Yours [illegible]

"If we only could harness the powers of radium we would have an ideal motive force, for the vessels of the air. Just think—there is enough power in one handful of radium to drive the Mauretania from New York to Liverpool, and you can well imagine what such power with almost no weight could do for flying machines. Some day we may get it. At any moment some chemist may hit upon a cheap way to extract radium from its base."

Winnipeg City Schools' Lacrosse League

BIGGEST LACROSSE LEAGUE IN CANADA—FORTY-SIX TEAMS PLAYED HOME-AND-HOME MATCHES LAST SEASON—SPLENDID RAW MATERIAL FOR SENIOR RANKS TURNED OUT EVERY YEAR

In speaking of the decadence of the game of lacrosse in Western Canada, one is apt to [illegible] the fact that right in the city of Winnipeg is to be found the largest lacrosse league in Canada. Forty-six teams in one league within the city limits is a record that it would be hard to beat. Yet this is the number of lacrosse teams that competed for the various championships of the Winnipeg Schools Lacrosse League last season. One hundred and thirty-two games were played in this league last summer, and they were hard-fought games, too; and, many of them as pretty exhibitions of lacrosse as one could wish to see. Speed, skill, and endurance are all to be found in the schools league and the only thing which differentiates the games played by the schoolboys of Winnipeg from the best senior league games is merely a matter of age and weight.

The enthusiasm, too, with which the boys go at the game and the hearty manner in which they support their own school, even though they may not be on the team themselves, shows a sporting spirit which should do great things for the game of lacrosse, if some means can only be found to retain that spirit in full force after the boys leave school. The material is there, it leaves school at the end of its school days in splendid condition, with all the finer points of the game at its finger ends, with the skill born of years of practice in the most receptive years of a lifetime, with a body trained to speed and endurance, and the ability to take hard knocks with a high measure of self-control, and it needs but a little encouragement, and an opportunity for the continuance of the game until its age and weight fits it for a place on the senior teams.

In this league of schoolboys are some seven or eight hundred lacrosse players ...

About eleven years ago ... Winnipeg schools ...

... the Mulvey, Victoria, Norquay, La Verandrye, Jno. M. King and King Edward schools.

The Junior south district took in teams from the Alexandra, the Argyle, Carlton, Isbister, La Verandrye, Gladstone, Ft. Rouge, and Riverview schools.

The Junior centre had teams from the Somerset, Pinkham, Wellington, Greenway, Clifton, Jno. M. King and Cecil ...

...the end of the glacial era made habitable vast reaches of virgin country. But the winter abiding place was still the home, and to this they returned as soon as the breeding season was over.

Whichever theory is accepted, the beginnings of migration ages were undoubtedly connected intimately with the periodic changes in the food supply. North America has enormous summer stores of bird food, but the birds must return South for the winter or perish. An overcrowding necessarily ensues in the equatorial regions during the winter to be relieved again by the spring exodus northward. No such exodus occurs to the corresponding latitudes of the South. South America has almost no migratory land birds, for bleak Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego offer no inducements to these dwellers in the luxuriant forests of the Amazon.

The conclusion is inevitable that the advantages of the United States and Canada as a summer home, and the superlative conditions of climate [illegible]

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

SPRING millinery! Could anything be more fascinating than the display in the milliners' shops at this very moment? The bright ribbons and feathers, the more than natural looking flowers, the original shapes—some, it must be confessed, rather eccentric, others attractively picturesque, and a choice few practical, becoming and smart—present an almost irresistible temptation to the woman who likes to be well costumed.

The same anxious question asked whenever any new hats are exhibited: Will large or small hats be more popular? is answered in the usual way, "Both will be fashionable." One woman whose taste in dress is unquestioned has just returned from Paris with her customary number of hats for spring and summer—incidentally these have to be supplemented at intervals later in the season—and every hat she has brought over is flat and large. Another woman, equally [illegible]

Gray Crin Hat with Aigrette

[illegible]

...brims faced with velvet are fashionable this spring and there are many variations in the same style. It is only a passing fashion, however, and not so practical as might be thought, for light ribbons deface quickly, but for the woman who can buy what she likes when she likes the purchase is a good one. The forced to be economical purchaser will select the same model but will have it carried out on more practical lines—in darker colors, for instance—or will have the ribbon bows adjusted in such a manner that they can be replaced by fresh ones when necessary.

Black and white is an extremely fashionable combination this spring and is seen to great advantage in millinery. Some of the most charming hats are white with black trimming and vice versa. The brim, edged with black velvet or faced with it, and the black velvet bows may not be strikingly novel or original, but are most becoming and smart, while an all black hat that might seem too sombre is transformed by the white wings or feathers. Fancy black straw braid, with just an edge of velvet or binding to the brim and with a full white aigrette or two or three long ostrich plumes, the shape on the old three corner order, is very smart, while the larger shape, with brim turned up at the left, is an old favorite for those who have a fancy for the picturesque styles.

Unless for a stay at some Southern resort the large hats of straw and lace seem a trifle "previous," but they certainly are fascinating and hard to resist and after all why not buy them now and have the question settled? The smartest are on the old order, large in size, made of braid and with low crown, the lace on the brim falls over [illegible] coming fashion, while the top of the hat is covered with the most beautiful flowers of every hue. The brim is faced with black velvet if becoming, or with some color that is becoming. [illegible]

HAS HE GONE WRONG

(Vegreville Observer)

The public of Western Canada, with the exception of a few personal friends of the Minister of the Interior, will be inclined to be incredulous respecting the insinuations of Dan McMillanday that Hon. Frank Oliver has been engaged in the filthy game pastime of getting rich quick by means of graft. Among the various charges charged to Mr. Oliver heard from there has never been that of dishonesty. He seems to rather conducted to be open-mouthed with strict probity. Many any charges or insinuations against him will not be taken very seriously until such time as they are proven irrefutably.

Dan McGillenday, who is engaged in defaming Mr. Oliver, is rather a doubtful asset for the Hon. Frank's cause. Mr. McGillenday is remembered in Western circles for the unenviable part he played in the Yukon when in connection with strict probity. Many any charges or insinuations against him will not be taken very seriously until such time as they are proven irrefutably.

MAKERS to his Majesty, and "Imported" are words that carry much weight in many minds. It is strange what a glamor a foreign label can cast upon a commonplace article. THE genuine Yankee peddler passed out of existence with the creation of the "notion store," but he was a most interesting character, astonishingly sharp and frequently amusing. One such appeared in a general store in a Southern town on one occasion, deposited his pack on the floor and remarked to the merchant:

"I guess I couldn't drive a trade with you, colonel?"

"I reckon you calculate just about right," was the decided reply of the merchant, who had had dealings with Yankee peddlers on previous occasions. "Get out!"

"Oh, well, don't get riled up—no harm done. Now, just look at this dozen genuine razor strops, easy worth $3—let you have 'em for $2, colonel."

"I wouldn't touch any of your truck—you get out!" the merchant declared.

"Well, now, colonel, I always like you what, I'll bet you $5 that if you make an offer for them strops we'll make a trade."

"I'll go you," said the merchant, "and," he added when the stakes had been put up, "I'll give you a quarter for the strops."

"They're yourn, colonel," said the Yankee, pocketing the wager.

It is amazing that the railroad, the great pioneer, and civiliser has not reached into this treasure house of the north. This wealth belongs to Alberta and it would be a pity if political exigency should decree that it remain a closed book. But it will not. The call is too strong, too persistent, the need of transportation is too evident to be left to politicians. The secret is out, the path finder has peeped into the wilderness and the railway will follow.

PICTURES OF LOVE

My Bella is a charming maid [illegible]

[illegible]

Some, I was unlucky to inherit;
Those well-loved friends have vanished now:
Others with strange and startling faces,
Headed by that infernal cow,
Usurp their places.

It may be, as my friends declare,
I err in being too fastidious
But can the eye that holds her fair,
See that her work is naught but hideous!
And then I try to bear in mind
The thought that love is blind, or should be,
I am not blind—I can't be blind—
I wish I could be.

And yet, when Bella roams unchecked
About the room where hang these pictures
And stands admiring the effect,
I clean forget my private strictures;
The simple fact that she is nigh
Seems to improve their aspect vastly;
It's when the artist isn't by
That they're so ghastly.

The Horseman

SINCE the practice of clipping horses was introduced it has grown in favor each year, receiving its strongest endorsement from men who are best qualified to judge as to its relative advantage and worth. That properly employed clipping has been conducive of a great deal of good there can be no doubt. Anything that is of proven benefit to the comfort, health and vigor of the horse, thus adding to his usefulness, beauty and value, is always welcome to horse owners and horse lovers. For a horse to be kept in a high state of health it is necessary that he be properly stabled, fed, exercised, clothed and groomed. The latter is often neglected, and as a consequence the coat becomes rough and coarse and the pores of the skin get clogged with dirt, grease, etc. The animal grows dismal, becomes hide bound, lice thrive and multiply, eczema, mange, "cracked heels," pruritis, grease heels and many other ailments occur directly or indirectly due to neglect or ignorant grooming, such neglect being due usually to difficulty of grooming a long tailed horse, lack of time, etc.

In these cases, clipping is the remedy. Many of the troubles mentioned above will disappear or if not, will yield very readily to treatment.

The skin is the great eliminating organ of the body, pure blood depends largely upon a perfectly healthy skin with open and active pores.

The thickness of the hairy covering of the skin varies with the different types of horse, the better bred horses having the finest coats. By clipping a draft horse may yield five to eight pounds of hair. From this amount down to ten ounces is obtained from the lighter breeds.

The hair of the horse's body is changed twice yearly. The growth of the hair depends principally on environment. Thus horses in a warm barn have shorter coats than those kept in a cold barn, etc. Temperature thus regulates or should regulate, improper or slighted grooming, a majority of horses do not shed out early nor completely enough. This heavy coat of hair causes considerable sweating when at work. After finishing they come in with wet coats which may not dry for hours. This condition besides being very uncomfortable exposes them to various diseases, especially pulmonary troubles of all kinds.

Clipping will overcome these conditions or nearly so.

Taking it all in all, the benefit of clipping horses even in this cold climate cannot be overrated, provided it is not accompanied by criminal negligence, such as driving hard and then allowing the horse to stand in a cold place without blanketing, as a clipped horse loses animal heat very rapidly, a condition very beneficial while at work, but needing clothing while at rest.

If a little care is taken you will find [illegible] do better, look better and feel better clipped than unclipped.

WHO CAN SAY "DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MADE ME WELL!"

Mrs. Louis Delorme who was always tired and nervous and suffered from Backache, tells how she found a cure.

St. Rose du Lac, Man., April 3 (Special).—The story of Mrs. Louis Delorme, a well known and highly respected resident of this place is identical with that of thousands of other women in Canada. It is all the more interesting on that account. She was tired, nervous and worn out. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

"I suffered for five years from Backache and too frequent urinations, which destroyed my sleep," Mrs. Delorme states. "My head would ache, and I was always tired and nervous. My limbs were heavy, and I had a dragging sensation across the loins. Dodd's Kidney Pills made me well. I used in all ten boxes, but they fixed me up."

Thousands of other Canadian women who have not used Dodd's Kidney Pills are in just the condition Mrs. Delorme was in before she used them. Thousands of others who were in that condition and who used Dodd's Kidney Pills, are now well and strong.

We learn from the experiences of others, and those experiences teach us that the weary and worn women of Canada can find relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Brides for the West

(By E. B. R. Reser, Collier's)

"White with tucks and lots of lace." Nearly thirty years have passed since that letter came with instructions for the style of my bridesmaid frock. The prospective bride had been at school not a year before and her first really grown-up dresses were being made for trousseau. Quite an old man was to marry her—twenty-eight or nine—so it was whispered. He used to walk to school with her sometimes, and then she told us he had gone away out West. Often he wrote to her and once I remember her refusing to go skating because she must write and thank him for a gift she had received. We had never dreamed of a love affair nor had she until the letter came telling of the thoughts he was thinking of her, of the home he was building for her; of the loneliness of life without her.

That day she was grown up.

Then, before our wonder had ceased at the thought of her going so far to a land that seemed so [illegible] after the lots that was given—the whole Eastern country was filled with brides for the West. If one man could come East and take a wife back with him, what more natural than [illegible] should follow his example [illegible] West became the [illegible] for the girls who were [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] a great [illegible] girl in his loneliness and tells her that life will be unbearable without her, whatever is she to do but marry him? A horrible weight upon one's conscience [illegible] with a quarter of a [illegible] and it is the men [illegible] body and mind who appear [illegible] when they beg [illegible] a wife will give [illegible] be taken from the unearthed trunks and given as payment. Babies came—such beautiful twins—with no one to attend to their coming but the squaws, and the shack was added to. Hot summer suns beat down, and an awning of grain sacks was put over the roof of the lean-to. This was the great luxury—their gallery, their piazza—laughingly it was called by every grand name. Seats were built into a semblance of steps, and during the long, long evenings the Irishman and his bride would mount to the roof with their bit of supper, forget that there were such things as mosquitoes, and revel in remembrance and hope. I verily believe the Indians worshipped those people, and if they gave what they had to the red men the Indians shared also their spoils with them. For the sake of seeing how her gay gowns [illegible] the Irish woman gave them to [illegible] Indian girls, and great was the joy of all when they donned them.

The twins were running about bare feet, two babies had followed, when word was sent back that death had come in quick succession to those in the home land, and the Irishman was heir [illegible]

[illegible] when she was a bride."

A Scotch Lassie's Story

I had needed a charwoman, and when I heard the voice of the one who came, I stood astounded. Do you know the soft cadence of the Edinburgh Scotch tongue? The tones of the scholarly class that picks out each word like a note of music? It was beautiful and the Scotch woman was saying "But what shall I do first?" I hesitated before saying anything, for she was so [illegible]

[illegible]

English wives for Englishmen. Let the Irishman hear his home brogue when his wife cheers him. And with laudable intent they set about carrying them out. How is it that Western school registers are filled with such combinations as Giovanna O'Flarity, Mary Jane Kleskumski, and the like? Let the theorists answer.

When the present governing power was ushered in at Ottawa, fourteen years ago, a man from the West who had taken his bride to a prairie town obtained a seat in the Dominion Cabinet. To him is owed the vigorous immigration policy that has populated the West with such amazing rapidity. It was then and through him that the Government took a hand in the match making. Following the Government came the railway builders—they wanted traffic, as the Government had wanted population. Manufacturers not to be out of the game, and craving trade, also made matches, and down the scale on and on it came, until the individuals again entered with zest into the policy of "securing proper brides for our western men."

Has there ever in the world's history been such a great big romancing [illegible] Canadian West? And the lovely part of it is that no one calls it by its real name. People speak of commerce, of evangelization—of lots of conditions, but it all means—brides for the West.

"Very well, my son," was the answer. "I'll be a passenger."

But the youngster didn't want the grown-up for a passenger, so he said:

"Where do you wish to get off?"

"Cincinnati."

"All right," said the boy. "This is Cincinnati."

"After a long experience with different pain remedies, I am convinced that none are equal to Nerviline. I was taken with a cold in my chest, which later developed into a sort of chronic bronchitis. Every time I coughed it seemed to rack and tear my whole chest. I was also subject to a great stiffness in my joints, especially about the knees and shoulders, and experienced much pain in my muscles. To cure my chest troubles I first rubbed on 'Nerviline' copiously for two days, and then put a Nerviline Porous Plaster over the sore region. I got quick relief. Rubbing the sore muscles and aching joints with Nerviline did more than all other treatments combined. By the aid of Nerviline and those wonderful Nerviline Porous Plasters almost any ache, and certainly any kind of inflammatory cold can be cured.

A number of the larger banking institutions employ from one to half a dozen men whose sole duty is to examine every check that comes in through the clearing house, and vouch for the genuineness of the signatures.

To the ordinary citizen it seems nothing short of marvellous that a signature clerk will instantly recognize the slightest alteration in a signature, with thousands of checks passing through his hands each day, many of them drawn by depositors who sign but a few checks in the course of a year, but an expert signature clerk can carry in his mind accurate photographs of five thousand or more signatures, and rarely has to refer to the signature book. When not engaged with the incoming checks, the signature expert spends his time in familiarizing himself with the signatures of new customers. There is no room for uncertainty in his business, for if he passes a bogus draft it will mean a bad mark against him when promotions are in order, and to refuse payment on a genuine check means a very wrathful customer.

The signature clerk is also required to see that no checks are post-dated and to look for checks on which payment has been stopped.

In proportion to the number of checks paid by a large bank every business day, the smallness of the number of "bad" ones that slip through is nothing short of marvellous.

THE FIRE-BALLOON COMING BACK

THE fire-balloon, which was the original sky pioneer, ...

lifted into the air by the heat of a burning spongeful of alcohol, and destined to flare up in picturesque dissolution after sailing a mile or so. The fire-balloon has, however, great advantages over the gas-balloon. It is very cheap and it can not explode. Given a steady, reliable, safe source of heat, there is no reason why it should not displace the gas-bag altogether. In France, as we learn from an article on "The Twentieth-Century Montgolfier," written for La Nature by G. Camus, a special aviation society for the development of the hot-air balloon has recently been formed. What it has done and what it proposes to do are described as follows by this writer.

"A hot-air balloon that has a considerable lifting power at its start rises very quickly, but soon reaches its limit of altitude. . . . It is this brevity of time and distance that has prevented this type of balloon from developing as it should have done.

"But if we build a fire-balloon with a portable heat source so that the lifting force will not lessen, we shall have a device superior to the gas-balloon. Until recent years we had no practical combustible admitting of the solution of this problem. Now we have at our disposal an ideal liquid fuel—petroleum—and also burners that will insure its complete combustion.

"In fact, the problem is solved, and all we have to do is to group our burners in a special form of heater which will serve, before the start, to inflate the bag and during the trip to maintain the temperature within it.

"The thing is evidently to construct such a heater. The idea was in the air, and in July, 1910, a campaign of education was begun in the journal Aero. The converts who had faith in this renaissance of the fire-balloon formed a society whose sole object was the practical study and popularization of the Montgolfier type. The heater is now built and gives perfect satisfaction.

Before describing it we shall remind our readers of the essential differences between a gas and a fire-balloon and note their respective advantages and faults.

"Generally, in a fire-balloon, the source of heat is on the ground, and as the expanded air very quickly cools, the lifting power becomes almost instantly zero. In a gas-balloon, on the other hand, there is an excess of ascensional force that may be controlled in the form of sandbags. If we suppose a fire-balloon carrying a source of heat and with constant interior temperature, its signal defects will disappear. There will be no occasion for ballast, since we shall have at our disposal at each instant the slight ascensional force necessary to balance the balloon at a given altitude.

"It will be easy to ascend or descend, since it will be sufficient to increase or diminish the quantity of heat given off by the source.

"The chief faults of the gas-balloon are as follows: it uses an inflammable gas that may instantly cause an explosion; it has only a limited ascensional force dependent on the ballast that is carried; the balloon can be inflated only near a gas-plant, and the expense is great."

None of these defects, we are assured, will appear in the improved Montgolfier, for hot air is not a combustible gas; it will only be necessary to carry a few quarts of gasoline to obtain a steady temperature, and the inflation, which may take place anywhere, will be rapid. A detailed description of the burner, the heater, and the new Montgolfier are then given, as follows:

"The burner is formed of U-tubes placed at right angles and united at their upper ends by cross-pieces. Below they connect with a supply tube and an aperture for ignition. . . . The liquid rises under pressure in the two branches of one tube, crosses over, and descends in the branches of the tube having the aperture below, which it reaches completely vaporized and burns with a fine blue flame that is more powerful as the pressure is greater. . . .

"The burner is surrounded by a tube that limits and directs the flame. At the lower end there is a cup to hold the alcohol by means of which the burner is started. . . . When all the alcohol in the cup has burned out, the gasoline that reaches the burner under pressure is heated sufficiently, after passing through the U-tubes, to reach the point of exit perfectly gasified. . .

"The reservoir is carried in the car, and the frame with its group of twenty burners is fixed at the base of the balloon and about six feet above the bottom of the car. One or more flexible tubes join the burners to the reservoir.

The arrangements admit of much variation, and if desired each burner may be provided with its own stopcock, so that it may be isolated in case of need. To protect the envelope of the balloon, the flame zone is surrounded with a metal frame which will not permit too high flame to pass.

Canada's National Summer Game—Lacrosse!

CAN IT BE REVIVED IN WESTERN CANADA? SOME REASONS FOR ITS PRESENT DECAY—SOME PLANS FOR ITS FUTURE IMPROVEMENT.

THE question of whether Canada's national game, lacrosse, can be revived in western Canada is one which has been receiving a good deal of attention during the past few weeks. There can be no doubt that the game has been for some years deader than the deadest kind of door nail, and all kinds of reasons have been advanced for its decadence, the diagnosis varying with almost each physician. To those who remember the palmy days of lacrosse in Winnipeg, the game seems dead almost beyond resuscitation. To those who have watched over it, and sympathized with it in its long-drawn out dying struggles, and who have from time to time endeavored to inject into it some of its old time vigor, the case seems to be not quite so hopeless.

As to the methods of reviving it, if revival can be accomplished, opinion differs almost as much as in selecting the primal cause of delay. There seems to be no doubt that this season will see a vigorous and well-meant effort to bring the game back into popularity, but, in order to do this, it will be necessary to go about the process carefully and cautiously, for the least little bit of friction or deviation from the one single-minded purpose of acting for the good of the game in general, apart from the interests of any particular club, or league, or association, is liable to upset the whole ... and any wrong step taken at this critical stage in the life of lacrosse might have the effect of plunging it even deeper into the mire of oblivion than it is at present.

Twenty-five years ago, lacrosse in Winnipeg was outstandingly the most popular game. It was played by experts, men who compared then, and who would compare now, with the best professional lacrosse players in either Montreal or at the Coast. Players from Winnipeg went east and west, and starred at the coast and in the east long after their prime which was spent in Winnipeg with the old ... and Winnipeg lacrosse teams. At that time ...

constant crop of promising youngsters can be depended upon to fill the ranks of the senior leagues. The schools league has done its part, but there is still a hiatus which needs to be bridged by some such scheme as is laid down by Mr. Smith.

Mr. J. D. Pratt, of the M.A.A.A., is entirely in sympathy with the effort of those who are trying to revive the game. His opinion is that one of the things which, more than another, has alienated public sympathy from lacrosse, is the laxity with which the officials have managed the games. ... spectators were stated for waiting from half an hour to an hour after the time advertised for starting the game, and in later years in lacrosse, ...

PIONEER OF MANITOBA DIES IN WINNIPEG

THE death occurred on Wednesday last, at her home, 363 Carlton Street, of Mrs. Black, wife of John Black, a retired farmer of Morden and one of Manitoba's pioneers. Mrs. Black was 74 years of age, had been married fifty years, and was the mother of seven children, five sons and two daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. Black came to Winnipeg in 1908, and joined the congregation of Westminster church, the pastor of which was then Rev. Clarence Mackinnon. Previous to their removal to this city they had lived for many years near Morden, Manitoba. In the early days, Mr. Black was a sawmill owner of Eastern Canada. THE DUEL

The gods, lying beside their nectar on Olympus and peering over the edge of the cliff, perceive a difference in vision. Although it would seem that to their vision towns must appear as large or small ant hills without special characteristics, yet it is not so. Study ing the habits of ants from so great a height should be but a mild diversion when coupled with the soft drink that mythology tells us is their only solace. But doubtless they have amused themselves by the comparison of villages and towns, and it will be no news to them (not, perhaps, to many mortals), that in one particularly New York stands unique among the cities of the world. This shall be the theme of a little story addressed to the man who sits smoking with his Sabbath slippered foot on another chair, and to the woman who snatches the paper for a moment while basting greens or a pot ... ... does not lie in the sudden revelation that plague has appeared in European Russia in the province of Astrakhan. We are concerned, before all things else, with the undoubted presence of the plague bacillus in East Anglia."

The British Government is blamed by that writer for its negligence in not meeting the danger adequately, and the London News, while noting that the Government has shown some alarm because the plague bacillus has been among the rats of Suffolk for three or four years, exclaims that "at the present moment there are two experts searching for infected rats in East Anglia. Two. We ought to have 200 at work."

The London Nation, however, does not favor the theory that rats can convey a deadly bacillus into the system of human beings. Its argument runs as follows:

"When the plague raged in Bombay whole areas of the city were cleared of rats and the plague, for one reason or another, was actually more virulent within the rat-free districts than it was outside them. If vermin are the carriers of the disease, it is clearly the filthier quarters of a town which ought to suffer most severely. Yet the poison in Bombay ... [illegible]

... nights are consumed in the moving; when the old dwelling is evacuated, the place is abandoned for all time. In one case observed the reason for moving was obvious; the grass roots were found to be close to the bottom of a ditch, and much too near the heavy rumbling of the traffic along the highway.

Usually the soft, warm nights of summer are chosen for the time of moving. In one closely observed case the operation had hardly begun, when, one evening, toward sunset, the little ant hill was seen swarming with the blind white woodlice found in all ant-hills; insects, which, having lost their organs of sight, guide themselves with their antennae, agitating their feelers as if harassed by profound anxiety.

Naturalists have been unable to discover the reason for existence of these piteous beings in the ant hills. They have been watched by night and by day. It is known that they live with the ants in familiar intimacy in the ant hills, and that they exert all their feeble strength to move the ants when the time comes to change domicile. Myriads of eager proprets have been seen in the throngs of ants marching to the new dwelling place. The exodus, begun with determined haste, is pursued with increasing intensity until the last seed has been stored anew. One day, when the moving was over, and when the ... [illegible]

FAMOUS BRITISH ADMIRAL

Tells What Zam-Buk Did For Him

Many famous persons have testified to the great value of Zam-Buk, and amongst the most recent is Admiral Sidney M. Lloyd. Writing from the Royal Naval Club, Portsmouth, England, Admiral Lloyd says:

"I have found Zam-Buk most reliable for healing cuts and abrasions; while for the relief of skin irritation it is invaluable."

Another famous user of Zam-Buk is Mr. Frank Scudamore, the War Correspondent, who supplied Canadian papers with their despatches during the Boer War. Mr. Scudamore says: "Some poisonous dye on my underclothing came in contact with a small ulcer on my leg and blood poisoning set in. Inflammation, pain and swelling followed. My medical man's treatment did not seem to do any good, as ulcer after ulcer broke out, until my left leg from knee to foot was one mass of sores. I had seventeen deep ulcers at one time. I could not put my foot to the ground, and was really in a pitiful state. A friend advised Zam-Buk, and I applied this herbal balm. It was really wonderful how it soothed the pain and aching and gave me ease.

"I continued with it, leaving off all other treatment, and at the end of a week's treatment my leg was not like the same. A few boxes of Zam-Buk healed all the sores, and bit by bit new, healthy skin covered the places which had been so deeply pitted and scarred by ulceration and blood poison. The flesh is now perfectly healthy, and without marks of the old ulcers. For this splendid result I have only Zam-Buk to thank."

Zam-Buk is a cure for piles, eczema, cold cracks or chaps, ulcers, ring worm, poisons, cuts, abscesses, burns, children's rashes, abrasions, and for all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse imitations and substitutes.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

THE theatre and restaurant gown—one and the same—has suddenly become of almost paramount importance in the fashionable wardrobe, and the woman who makes a point of attending all the new plays and incidentally enjoys dining in public is forced to bestow a bit of time upon these same gowns.

The wearing of the low gown at the theatre has become almost universal, and, while there is no law enforcing it, the unwritten law which compels women to dress in what Dame Fashion decrees is the latest style exercises a most far reaching influence. There is much that is practical in this same decree of fashion.

Black and White Check Tailor Costume

... best and can be remedied oftener, the darker colors wear longer without requiring cleaning and are extremely distinctive. This winter there have been a great number of blue theatre gowns. One brilliant dark blue with blue or black jet trimmings has been most popular, while a fascinating changeable blue and mauve has been in constant demand. Bright pinks and one dark yellow shade in various materials have also been entered for competition, while lately in grey there have been seen some exquisite shades and materials.

Black and white is fashionable, exceedingly fashionable at present, and theatre gowns of this combination are to be seen in infinite variety of design. A light mauve gown with a tunic of jet is a popular model, while a black satin with a white chiffon and lace tunic is even more novel. For the latter there are two different kinds of lace used in the waist, while above the hem of the tunic is an inch band of the finest filet with an edge of guipure. The pattern of the lace shows out with marvellous distinctness against the black background, while the band of black cutting the folds over the shoulders, finishing the elbow sleeves and in the high girdle, is most striking. In fact, this combination of black and white is almost without exception strikingly distinctive.

Ashes of roses was years and years ago a most fashionable color. In the winter just past and now again this spring it is in style, and for a theatre gown combined with black lace is very smart. It is not to be worn by a young girl and is one of the few colors most becoming to older women. With a touch of soft cream white lace jewelled trimmings, in which are pink amethysts, a color scheme can be worked out most effectively. There is a smart combination sometimes attempted of a touch of blue with the ashes of roses but this can only be satisfactorily worked out by some one who is an artist in colors as well as clothes. In the meantime such a gown is essentially smart and expensive.

Fancy silks and satins are good investments, and they can be bought, especially just now, at most reasonable prices and make up effectively. They are excellent for theatre gowns, and it is a good plan to select the more unusual designs and colorings. They are often far less expensive and much smarter. The color may in itself be dull and not becoming. Trimmings of some contrasting color that is becoming will then transform the gown and besides give an original touch that will make it far smarter. Such a gown of a rather dull gray figured satin is transformed by its trimming of pale blue panne velvet.

When cost is not considered the brocade crepe de Chene combined with plain satin is extremely popular for the new theatre and restaurant gowns. The material drapes so perfectly that it is especially well suited to the newest models on the classic lines. It is to be found in all shades and colors and will be unquestionably a most popular material this spring.

HOW TO LAUNDER BLACK CLOTHES

IT is absolutely necessary to wear clothes that can be laundered if one keeps nice and fresh. This plan can be used for black lawn shirtwaists and corset-covers, and sateen, or any black underskirt except silk.

HOW WE KNOW THE AGE OF THE WORLD

EVERY one of the great scientists is by nature an adventurer; he wishes to push out beyond all other adventurers upon the great sea of knowledge, or to find his way to some new port, accepting as his lodestone that fact or series of facts which seems best to suit his purpose. Just as in the day of Columbus the wealth of India drew towards that magic shore many adventurous navigators, each one endeavoring to find some new route, so in our time there are certain speculative questions which tend to attract the highest ... powers of our scientists ... are questions of far reaching ... questions to the lay mind ... quite insoluble, yet they seem almost within the grasp of the master minds of our greatest scientists. One of the most tantalizing of these questions is "How old is the world?" Two sets of investigators have tackled the question, the physicists and the geologists, but so widely have their answers differed that to harmonize them is impossible.

Twenty to forty million years are the limits which the physicists give in response to the geologists' demand for at least a hundred million years. The physicists ... [illegible]

No Longer Has Cold or Catarrh

Dear Sirs,—I have been in the drug business for over six years, and as an up-to-date druggist have a deep-seated antipathy to certain kinds of medicines. However, being a sufferer from Catarrh, and noticing the enormous sale of Catarrhozone, actuated by motives of curiosity I opened and tried a small 25 cent package of Catarrhozone. C.P.R To Build To Vermilion

Lettergram To Standard to This Effect

Winnipeg, May 30.

Standard,
Vermilion.

E. A. James, late general manager Canadian Northern, interviewed today, stated positively that Canadian Pacific intends building through Vermilion and Grand Trunk are also planning to tap north country via Vermilion. Very enthusiastic about Vermilion's future, has promised to have information confirmed by William Whyte.

N. Murray

Later—The Standard has been informed that Wm. Whyte has stated the intention of the C.P.R. to build a line through Vermilion.

Enumeration Starts June 1st

Population Last Census Was 5,371,315

Ottawa, May 25.—Early Thursday morning the count of heads will begin all over Canada. Every man, woman and child living in Canada at midnight on the first of June will be counted, if the two hundred commissioners and their armies of enumerators do what is required of them. Some will inevitably be missed, but the count will be good enough to give the Dominion of Canada a population of eight millions or thereabouts and to give the [illegible] million people in the west at least twenty additional members in the Dominion parliament.

Mr George Pelton, a Well Known Tobacco Merchant in Newburgh, Ont., Tells of His Faith in the Merit of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

In the fall of 1903," writes Mr. Pelton, under date of June 11th, 1904, "I contracted a very severe cold which developed into bronchitis. At that I was living in New York State and consulted with four different physicians who offered me no relief. The coughing got worse and finally settled in the throat. I then started to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and felt much relief from the first few doses. I was completely cured by its continuance and have had no return of the trouble since. It is the best medicine I ever used for coughs, colds and throat and lung troubles and I have no hesitancy will be one of my friends to whom I will recommend it."

Dead Letter Office To Be Opened at Edmonton
Owing to the influx of settlers to the north-east and the additional amount of business transacted through the mails, the post office department have decided to establish two additional branch offices of the dead letter department of the west. This arrangement will place the work in divisions, the Winnipeg office handling all the business from Port Arthur to the eastern boundary of Manitoba, while the new established branches in Regina and Edmonton will handle the work of their respective provinces.
Previous to this new order, which will go into effect June 1st, the Winnipeg office had charge of the territory from Port Arthur to the Rocky Mountains.

UNWISE TO LIVE BELOW THE GROUND

Canal Worker's Experience

Some time ago I came to this place to work on the canal and through inclement weather and exposure contracted the worst kind of neuralgia. The pain would fill my forehead so that I couldn't see; it was just awful. I went to a druggist in town and was advised to use a 50c. bottle of Nerviline. That was the best advice and the best medicine I ever got. I will always recommend Nerviline for any ache or pain. It is so strong and penetrating it is bound to cure.

(Signed) A. R. Giorgi. Trenton, Ont.

Doctors will tell you that nothing but the purest and most healing antiseptic drugs are used in Nerviline—that's why it is so safe for family use, for the baby as well as the parent. If you haven't tried Nerviline, do so now—your neighbors are almost sure to know its manifold merits and uses.

PERFUME STATISTICS FROM A BOTANIST

According to the investigations of a German botanist, out of forty three hundred species of flowers cultivated in Europe only four hundred and twenty possess an agreeable perfume. Flowers with white or cream-colored petals, we are told, are more frequently odoriferous than others. Next in order come the yellow flowers, then the red, after them the blue, and finally the violet, whereof only thirteen varities out of three hundred and eight give off a pleasing perfume. In the whole list, as compiled by this authority, thirty three hundred and eighty varieties are offensive in odor, and twenty three hundred have no perceptible smell, either good or bad.

HOW WE TASTE

Strictly speaking, with the tip of the tongue one cannot really taste at all. If you put a drop of oil of bitter almonds on that part of the mouth you will find that it produces no effect of any sort. You only taste it when it begins slowly to diffuse itself and reaches the true tasting region in the middle distance. But if you put a little mustard or cayenne on the same part you will find that it bites you immediately—the experiment should be tried sparingly in order not to blister the tongue—while if you put it lower down in the mouth you will swallow it almost without noticing the pungency of the stimulant. The reason is that the tip of the tongue is supplied only with the nerves of touch, not nerves of taste proper, which go to a different centre of the brain together with the very similar threads which supply the nerves of smell for mustard or pepper. That is why the smell and taste of these pungent substances are so much alike, as everybody must have noticed, a good sniff at a mustard pot producing almost the same irritating effects as an incautious dose.

WATER UNFIT TO DRINK

[illegible] foul smells exist water [illegible] and it is then not fit for [illegible] in an open vessel in a bedroom is unfit for drinking, unless the room be much better ventilated than bedrooms usually are.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES

COULD anything be more attractive than the display of spring millinery in the shops just now? The bright flowers, ribbons and feathers; the original shapes—some it must be confessed, rather eccentric, others attractively picturesque, and some practical, becoming and smart—present an almost unlimited range of styles and colors from which to make a choice.

To the question asked whenever new hats are exhibited: Will large or small hats be the more popular? the answer is: Both will be fashionable.

Any woman ought to be able to find a hat to suit her this spring. She can be as freakish or as conservative as she will. She can wear a hat that is enormous, medium or microscopic in size. She can add cubits to her stature by her hat or don a shape as flat as a pancake. She can turn her hat up in the back or in front or at the sides or both front and back or not at all. She can choose feathers or flowers or ribbon for trimming. She can select coarse straw or fine. She can pull her hat far down over ears and brow or pose it rationally.

Yes, there are hats for all women, but there's a strong probability that a large percentage of the women will not find their own hats.

A majority of the models are trying and demand either extreme smartness or decided prettiness of the woman who is to wear any of them successfully.

MISS AGNES LAUT
Canadian Novelist and Historian

Much depends upon how the hair is arranged as to whether or not the hat is becoming. The fashion is universally accepted, for the moment, in which the hair is arranged without the pompadour or with a very small one with the hair drawn over the ears.

Many of the newest hats have been designed for the covered ears and are intended to be worn covering the entire head, but this is too trying a fashion and is modified to a great extent; at the same time the close fitting shapes are attractive if not [illegible]

With many of the [illegible]

ber have been seen, and not all worn by girls from the dressmakers', while models are being snapped up almost as soon as they are on show.

There is a good deal of exaggeration in the styles. Some of the skirts are so frankly "divided" as to be nothing short of trousers. The favorite style, so far, is to cover the trousers with a close fitting tunic, slit up the sides. Another form is to have a [illegible] in what one might call the commencement [illegible] pantaloon, which formation reaches about [illegible] the whole being encased in a tunic, without [illegible] inches off the ground. So far [illegible] that the new departure is hardly likely to be widely taken up, even by fashionable women—and yet one never knows. The same might have been said of the "hobble" skirt, yet what a success it had.

It need scarcely be said that there are two camps, those who are for, and those who are against the "jupe culotte," and it must be acknowledged that even the prettiest dresses look old fashioned by the side of this revolutionary garment. At all events, skirts will be narrow, that is decided.

JACKETS TEND TO BE LONGER

It seems that jackets are tending to become, if anything, a little longer, though not more than half length at the very most, and with quite short ones still very fashionable. Tailor-made skirts remain short; many retain the apron panel in the front reaching from waist to hem, but in this case there is more trimming of braid or galoons about the back and sides set in regular designs. In other cases the apron is carried right across to the sides, and even in some cases right round to the back at the top, the back part being brought round to the front lower down, and almost meeting. This latter style gives a very straight tight effect, best suited to very slim figures.

In costumes, the trimmings of the skirt have their counterpart on the jacket—stitchings, buttons, braid, or galoons are used upon the basque or about the waist, always in some fixed design, so as to increase the slim effect of the whole costume. Jackets now usually fasten very far down, so as to leave plenty of room for the big jabot of tucked lawn, tulle, or lace, whose note of white will brighten up most of the spring costumes. As regards the collars of jackets, there is plenty of variety. We have sailor collars cut square across the chest in front, others may be pointed, others, again, fall in loose, wide lapels; while there are some very smart ones which are stretched down right across the upper part of the jacket and are really more of a yoke than a collar. These last named, however, require a very good tailor to cut them correctly.

For the practical woman who walks and likes to be suitably dressed the serge costume is indispensable [illegible]

Consequently the apple had to take a back seat and make way for peaches, oranges, grapes and other small fruites for table use because of their finer appearance. Whoever remember the apples of even ten years ago and compare them with those now in the market the present season must wonder what has been taking place in the orchards. While it is true that many of the offerings are from new orchards of the Rocky Mountain country and the far Northwest, much of the very finest of fruit has come from old trees that [illegible]

Station Gardens For Vermilion

Through the activity of the Board of Trade, Vermilion is assured of a station garden at the C.N.R. depot next year, preparations for which will be begun this season.

H. S. Boyce, supervisor of gardens, was in town Tuesday and made an examination of the proposed grounds and will make a report to the company strongly advising the placing of the garden. The design will cover from the freight shed to the station building and then west to the crossing. Mr. Boyce said that Vermilion possessed an ideal spot for such gardens as the company is now inaugurating along their system. The park commission of the town interviewed Mr. Boyce with regard to the town park and received from him valuable suggestions as to how it should be laid out and made a thing of beauty to the town.

THE GOUT MICROBE

Chicken with gout form a novel exhibit of the Pasteur Institute in Paris when visitors are taken through the place these days. But the chickens so affected are believed to mark a distinct forward step in the study of the germ theory, because Prof. Metchnikoff, the distinguished scientist, believes he has succeeded in isolating a microbe responsible for this painful ailment, and it is due to experiments made by him that the chickens suffer. The chickens were fed a diet of horseflesh and this food caused the increased growth of certain microbes in the intestines and produced swelling of the joints just as occurs in gout in the human being.

Prof. Metchnikoff is also convinced that the absorption of poisons by these same microbes of the intestines is the cause of degeneration of the organs of the body usually ascribed to old age. One of the chief degenerate changes found in old age is in the condition of the arteries. The walls became hardened and brittle. Professor Metchnikoff was convinced that the degeneration the cause of which was never before determined was the result of the activity of the intestinal microbes. Experiments on young animals with cultures from a diseased intestine brought about a hardening of the ar[illegible]

HOW BIRDS LEARN TO SING

There is strong evidence that some kinds of birds learn to sing by direct imitation, and just as strong evidence that others produce their characteristic notes without any singing master at all. It would thus appear that there are two kinds of song birds, one that requires instruction and another that is independent of it. Yellow hammers, linnets and orioles belong to the former class; robins, thrushes, and blackbirds to the latter. G. W. Bulman, who writes on this subject in Knowledge, tells how, while walking in Northumberland, England, last August, he had the pleasure of listening to the singing lesson of a young yellow hammer. He says:

"One bird, the pupil, with slightly weaker and less decided song, was answering another which sang in a clearer and more finished style. There was no mistaking the fact that the first song came from the more accomplished songster, and it was hard to resist the conviction that the other was an imitation. It seemed, in fact, a young bird learning to sing. There was no hurry, and always a quite perceptible pause between the songs. Then came three times in succession the teacher gave the song without the final note. And the pupil duly replied with a song one note short. Then the instructor went back to the complete version, but so long as I listened it was answered by the incomplete song.

"August is a specially favorable time for listening to the yellow hammer's song. And in listening to this August songster I had often thought there must be two similar but distinct song birds, and tried to make out to which of the buntings the other could belong. The one song was rapid, clear and distinct, the other slow and frequently omitting the proper ending. But listening carefully one afternoon I convinced myself that the former was that of the old bird and the latter that of the young one learning to sing. First of all came the quick, clear, decided song, and then, after a few seconds, the slow, hesitating, and often stopping short imitation. These were given in regular alternation for a long time. As I listened to them, it was impossible to resist the conviction that it was a young bird receiving [illegible]. Personally I have [illegible] any evidence that any [illegible] thrushes [illegible] blackbirds, which I have heard [illegible]

Women With Weakness

For all weaknesses from which girls and women suffer, no surer remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They maintain that bracing health every woman so naturally desires; they oppose disease, and bring strength that lasts till old age.

"No medicine could be more beneficial than Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes Mrs. Mary E. Ayrton of Victoria. "I have been strengthened, my digestion is better, I have improved in color and feel considerably better since using Dr. Hamilton's Pills." Sold everywhere, 25c per box or five boxes for one dollar.

parently learn by imitating their parents while still in the nest. The old birds sing a sort of duet together, and according to the naturalist Hudson, "the young birds, when only partially fledged, are constantly heard in the nest or oven, apparently practising these duets in the intervals when the parents are absent." To quote Mr. Bulman farther.

"The direct imitation explanation of bird song is strengthened by the fact that in many birds the imitative faculty seems to be strong. Putting aside the familiar cases of our own starling and the American mocking bird, the following examples of imitation in birds not usually mimics may be cited. On one occasion I heard a blackbird crow like a cock. And I find that Yarrell records the fact that it is occasionally known to do so. On another occasion I heard a robin imitate the song thrush. Again on one occasion only I heard a skylark twist the song of a chaffinch into its own more copious melody. I incline, however, to think that this may have been unconscious imitation. There are birds, however, like the cuckoo, which apparently can not learn by imitation whose song must be supposed to be innate."

CULTURE AND THE EMPIRE

The Empire must live by the forces that begot it. It cannot hope to give any such exclusive prosperity as a Zollverein might afford. It can hold out no hopes of collective conquests and triumphs—its almost military rule [illegible] be the guaranteeing of a common unaggressive security; but if one, and if it is to survive, it must give all its [illegible] such a civilization as [illegible]

A Real American in Mexico

That "two battalions of the Salvation Army could go down to Mexico and capture the whole revolution, both sides of it, with their tambourines," is the humble opinion of Leon A. Watts, who has recently returned after a year's stay across the border. Born on one of the wildest of frontiers, his early life spent punching cattle and repelling night attacks of cow stealing "greasers," Watts is a typical American soldier of fortune, says Robert E. Pinkerton in the Milwaukee Free Press. And, what with campaigning through Cuba with the Rough Riders, service in the Philippines, and breaking horses for the United States army at Fort Riley, Kan., his life story reads like a Richard Harding Davis novel.

But Watts was educated at the University of Texas and is only an adventurer by avocation, his real calling being that of an engineer. This, however, he regards as more dangerous than fighting, more dangerous than any he has witnessed in Mexico, at any rate, he relates.

The battles are a joke. I saw one where they fought all day, fired 5,000 rounds, and the official count of the score was eleven killed.

If the insurgents win one or two decisive battles, it is all off with Diaz.

Except the rurales and the federal artillery, none of the federal troops is loyal. In Mexico you know, the convicts compose the standing army. They have to corral them at night and stand guard over them, instead of putting them on guard duty.

In Mexico when a man goes on a toot and shoots up a place, or commits some crime he goes into the army by force. The army, as a result, is willing to turn against Diaz [illegible] will whenever [illegible] the upper hand.

The rurales, however, are a good body of fighting men; in fact, they are the highest paid soldiers in the world, getting $60 in gold per month when there is no fighting, and $2.75 per day when they are [illegible]

[illegible] as the best means of getting rid of them.

They are [illegible] and wear the gaudiest uniforms [illegible]

[illegible]

Lawton laid in the street. We went out to pick him up and give him a decent burial, but the government troops would not let us touch him. He laid there all night, and some one stole his clothes and shoes. We asked for permission to bury him, but they would not grant it, and he was carted off in a wagon with a dozen peons and buried in a big hole with the others. We think we know where he was buried, but are not certain.

Of course, that sort of business made me sore, and I intended to get evidence and take it up with the proper authorities. I took a picture of Lawton lying there, without his clothes and with his head almost shot off, and intended to bring it through. But the government heard that I had the picture and took the film, together with a lot of other films I had exposed when the battle was on. Not only was the film taken, but I was warned to keep my mouth shut and not say anything about the death of the American when I got back to this country.

The other American named Watts, a Texas cowboy, wasn't "going to stand for that sort of thing," even after their warning, and after the film was taken. "He was a real Texan and wanted to clean up the whole bunch by himself.

He started and nearly got me into serious trouble as a result of our names being the same. Of course being a Texan myself, I was not far behind him but I was a little cooler and did not want to go through with it against those odds.

Fighting may be a joke in Mexico but an arrest is not.

In Mexico when they arrest you under martial law [illegible]
[illegible] never get a chance. They tell you they will be fair and reasonable, but the only kind of reason they give you is a stone wall and a handkerchief over your [illegible] mounted. When I got back, all except two had gone horses and all. I thought they had spread out to attack us and started back. I went through the mill. In the darkness two men jumped on me, one hitting me on the head with a rock. I could have killed both of them, but I was afraid to shoot for fear that would bring the others and would block my retreat to the fort. So I beat it up the mountain as fast as I could. They did not attack us that night, and a few days later the war scene shifted and we were able to get out.

Watts admits that Diaz is a good president from the standpoint of Americans interested in Mexican rubber and mines. And for some others:

But, for the peon, the lower class, and the big class, of Mexico, there could not be a worse president. Madero is a good man, and would try to make a good president and inaugurate reforms where Diaz has inaugurated oppressions, but it would not make much difference in the end. Without Diaz to exercise his iron bound rule, the country would be in one continual revolt.

The peons are worked so hard, and paid so little, that they can't get their noses off the grindstone. They can't stop work and hunt for a better job, and few of them would have the ambition to do so. There are no schools, and the people don't know there is anything any better for them.

He is personally acquainted with one of Madero's brothers, having lived near him at San Antonio, Tex., and

He stopped to see him on the way out, but Madero had left for across the border, the United States authorities hav[illegible]

He is skeptical of the honesty of our [illegible] in Mexico and scoffs at the explanation of "manoeuvres" on the part of United States troops along the [illegible]

When the troops start out for man[illegible]

[illegible] to be hurt but himself if he gets "bumped off." Watts wants to go back. There, too, he has been [illegible] all his life."

[illegible] owing, it is said, to the want of suitable accommodation in the new Palace of Justice, it was finally transferred to Viterbo, distant some two hours by rail north of Rome, where it is hoped that it will be fairly tried.

The exact date of the formation of the Camorra is veiled in much obscurity, but like most of the secret societies of its kind it owes its development to oppression. Under the rule of the Bourbons the lot of the poorer classes in the Kingdom of Naples was in several respects worse than that of absolute savages who are able at least to enjoy the rough freedom of the wilderness. The poor were ground down in every way. Tax collectors drove them of their wages, and they were prevented from enjoying [illegible]

[illegible] the Camorra provided [illegible] for their curtailed liberties. It was then that the ministers of the autocrat became alarmed by the rise of a secret society which termed itself the Camorra. This band of [illegible] ranged the country after dark and went out and [illegible] in a fearless manner many of those things which the law prevented them from obtaining in a better way. There was a wonderful bond of fellowship between these night riding conspirators, who were always prepared to assist one another and to meet resistance with death if need be. Many of their expeditions [illegible] undertaken simply for revenge [illegible] only without any prospect of [illegible]

[illegible] a common fund, which again was [illegible]

General Election In Fall Seems Certainty Says Senator Talbot

Edmonton, May 27—A general election next fall, forced upon the country by the filibustering campaign against the reciprocity agreement by the opposition upon whose shoulders must rest responsibility for bringing on an election before redistribution can give to the western provinces their just representation in the commons, is the probable course of political events as seen by Senator Talbot, who came into the city last evening from Ottawa.

"If the bill passes the American senate," said Senator Talbot, "it will then rest with the opposition at Ottawa to determine whether the agreement shall go to the country this fall, by way of general elections, whether they will allow the bill to pass and be ...

...when a bill is being considered in committee, and obstructionist tactics may result in the permanent holding up of a measure."

Senator Talbot said that he could not, of course, forecast the line of action which will be taken by the opposition, he declared that the intention generally attributed to the opposition leaders was before the issue.

"The Conservatives realize that under the present system of distribution of seats, they have a much better opportunity of securing support for their cause, than would be the case were the ... to be postponed until ..."

Healing Among the Ancients

DEW WATER

The ancient "dew ponds" of England have their modern counterparts on the Rock of Gibraltar, where drinking water is obtained by the condensation of the abundant dew in especially prepared basins. The primitive process consists in making a hollow in the ground, and filling the bottom with dry straw, over which is placed a layer of clay. On a clear night the clay cools very rapidly, and the dew is condensed into water in the basin. The pond is improved by putting a layer of asphalt or Portland cement under the straw. At Gibraltar the present practice is to use wood instead of straw and sheet iron instead of clay.

AN EXPERIMENTAL WOOD-PULP MILL

Officials of the United States Department of Agriculture have received with satisfaction the announcement from the experimental ground wood pulp mill which the department has been equipping at Wausau, Wisconsin, in co-operation with the American Pulp and Paper Association, that the mill has begun to grind. The carrying on of the tests now announced as under way was provided for by a special appropriation, placed at the disposal of the Secretary of Agriculture by Congress last winter, to conduct tests of the suitability for paper making of plants and woods which seem likely to become valuable sources for the supply of new material.

Secretary Wilson considered that the best use which could be made of this money would be to conduct experiments on a commercial scale with various kinds of wood. Some of these have already been studied in the laboratory and found to be satisfactorily suitable for pulp manufacture. But in order to know whether they can profitably be utilized under present conditions, it is necessary to test them under methods of manufacture comparable with those employed in actual business operations.

ELECTRIC PENDULUM DRILL

Many new ideas in the arrangement of plaits and folds are constantly appearing. A wide inverted plait at the back of the skirt instead of the straight panel left open from about the knees is seen in both cloth and silk skirts. The skirts with this plait are as straight as ever, but with this fulness the ugly lines are done away with. The panel skirts are not smart unless the panel is of even width its entire length. The old theory of a panel narrowing markedly toward the waist line is out of date and now it is rather a desirable feature of a skirt to make the wearer look quite straight and flat.

There are no absolutely plain skirts this year. There are overskirts and tunics, folds of the material or wide, straight flounces, and on party frocks there are bands of lace and occasionally festoons of flowers holding the sheer chiffon or net. The combining of two or more different textures in the one gown necessarily means that the skirt cannot be really plain, for the draped material has always to be finished off in some way, either with lace or ribbon or a band of hemstitching. Folds of satin adorn all gowns from the plainest to the most elaborate and deck every material, linen as well as chiffon and silk.

This dainty, cool, blue and white foulard, illustrated here, has separate waist and skirt, both opening at the side front.

Combinations of different colors are as popular as combinations of unlike materials. Dark blue voile is frequently draped over rosy pink satin, while brown over soft blue and gray over yellow are a few of the contrasts that are smart. Embroidery is fashionable for older persons, but a school girl's gown should be embellished with simple bands and folds of satin or with insertions of lace or net or perhaps with a simple design in braiding, but heavy hand embroidery is out of place upon her frock.

Fichus are once again a marked feature of the newest French gowns. The new fichus are made of sheerest lawn or mousseline de soie and are very narrow and bordered with a little frill of lace. They are the fichus of the first part of the nineteenth century and ... the gowns fashioned of ... a fichu may b... terial as the rest of the gown, but when the dress is of heavier texture a different ... must be use. As yet the fichu has not been ... adopted but there is every likelihood of its forming ... of the summer gowns.

Surplice lines are also in evidence on the simplest frocks, as well as for party gowns. The material in a deep V beneath a yoke of lace or chiffon, is always becoming, while if this design gives too plain an effect for a slender figure a ...

...is worn on dress occasions lace can be more abundantly used, as so much consideration need not be given to the wear and tear of the wash tub. ... almost as fanciful and ... as possible and yet remain in good taste.

For general wear one young girl has made herself combinations of corset cover and short petticoat, and separate drawers to complete the set. The pieces are of an exceedingly smart cut and made of ... ing qualities. The point of distinction about this set of lingerie is the somewhat unusual scallop which outlines the flounces and follows the lines of the neck. It is composed of three points with a ... between the triplets. It was designed by the miss who later marked it on the muslin, and embroidered it in her spare moments. This combination is put together at the waist with beading and about the low square neck eyelets have been worked that permit of the passing through of a ribbon. Indeed, this set of lingerie has proved so serviceable and so dainty that the young girl who made it declares that she wishes for no other style for everyday wear.

When she is visiting or dressed to go out in the evening she wears a chemise instead of the combination. It is trimmed with real lace and embroidery, both being simple and chaste in design. She has proved to her satisfaction that real lace wears so much better than imitation that to employ it is a veritable economy. The real lace yokes of her chemises usually remain ... after the under parts have become worn past ... It is then possible to use these yokes over again ... new garments.

Still another miss ... makes her own lingerie found the pattern that she desired for a nightgown in a newspaper. It proved to be extremely simple to make, slipping on over the head, and yet when completed, it appeared very smart. In decorating this gown she puts most of the trimming on the sleeves, making them very effective. The V-shaped neck she treated with a simple ... of beading edged with narrow ...

A truly elaborate nightgown has been made by a girl who had the opportunity to copy one that her aunt brought from Paris. The original was made of fine linen and trimmed with real lace. In Paris it cost $13 while in this country ...

The Mystery of the Bond Street Diamonds

By Allan Lethbridge.

"Yes," said Mr. Fenton, senior partner of the firm of Fenton and Powell, Bond Street jewellers, "that is precisely why we called you in. Scotland Yard has failed. They have neither found the gems nor the thief. They haven't even put forward a plausible explanation. I don't much believe in amateur detectives, but I certainly have heard you favorably mentioned, hence my sending for you."

The occasion for this interview was certainly extraordinary and mysterious. Precisely three weeks had elapsed since the discovery of a remarkable jewel theft, carried out apparently in broad daylight, and in a shop full of customers. The stones stolen were unset diamonds, such as are kept by first-class jewellers for making up into pendants and other expensive articles of a similar nature.

According to the published reports, one of the salesmen was showing a prospective purchaser these gems, which were lying in a mother-of-pearl shell or effect. Something said to him caused him to turn his head. When he looked again, two of the largest diamonds had disappeared, and in their stead were two common pieces of cut glass, which wouldn't have deceived a novice.

Needless to say, the prospective customer was detained. He appeared a most respectable, middle-aged man, with gold pince-nez, and a suave manner. He was at first a little irritated at suspicion attaching to him, but afterwards submitted to being thoroughly searched, supplied the authorities with his name and address, and, in fact, did all that could possibly be expected of him.

Yet the bald fact remained—the stones had gone.

I have always been fascinated by detective work. In my humble opinion, the individual who would be a successful detective must cultivate his senses beyond the normal. He must possess the keen-sightedness of the sailor, the palate of a tea-taster, and the acute sense of touch of a blind man. Following along these lines, I had made one or two most successful coups, and had tracked down criminals when the police had already given the matter up as a bad job.

Hence I was not surprised when Mr. Fenton, in his dire perplexity, sent for me.

When I am out on business I never, for obvious reasons, give my correct movements. While chatting along these conventional lines, the husband arrived. One glance and my heart gave a leap. There was no mistaking him from my description. It was Mr. Dallas. I was introduced in an informal manner and we all had tea together.

Almost the first remark Mr. Dalas made was in reference to his experience in London. He related it to me with gusto, and roared with laughter at the idea of his having been suspected. "But," he said, with a tinge of seriousness in his voice, "it might have been very awkward, very awkward indeed." I commented upon the proverbial carelessness of shop attendants, and added that I knew something about the subject as I was a traveller for a Russian firm of jewellers.

Really, that was very interesting. He had been trying to match some stones for his wife's necklace when the unfortunate episode had occurred. Perhaps some time I would give him a little practical advice upon the subject. There was more swindling over gems than over anything else. The next thing was, how to spend the evening? What did I say to the opera? Excellent! Then he would arrange for seats.

He didn't know anything about music, and he was afraid he did not come of a musical stock, but still, he knew what he liked. I nearly said "What about your niece?" but refrained. The opera was excellent—"La Boheme," with Melba—and my new found friends improved on acquaintance. Both were intelligent beyond the ordinary, and proved excellent company. Supper followed, and before the "good nights" were said, I had promised to spend the following day with them.

Only one point I did not understand. Mrs. Dalas had distinctly said that they were all alone in Paris and that they had no relations this side of the water. What about the niece, then? Probably an error on the part of the clerk at the Metropole.

Next morning we all went for a drive in the Bois and I played host at lunch. Mr. Dalas brought the subject of gems up again and reminded me of my promise to advise him ...

... somewhere, embedded in wax, to be called for at a convenient moment. What more natural place than the ledge of the counter?

Messrs. Fenton and Powell never recovered their stolen property, as Mr. and Mrs. Dalas had left hurriedly for an unknown destination. But all their show cases are now flush faced!

WHEN DR. JOWETT TRIED TO FILL A VILLAGE PULPIT

Rev. Dr. J. H. Jowett, reckoned by many competent sermon critics the world's greatest preacher, has arrived in New York to begin his ministry in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. Dr. Jowett's coming to America has been hailed as the greatest gift England has made to America in a generation.

In a little book—"J. H. Jowett, M.A., D.D.: A Character Study"—which has just been published in England, Mr. Frank Morison recalls an interesting story of the popular preacher. When on a holiday some years ago he visited a little chapel on the north coast. The villagers found him a seat, unsuspecting his ministerial profession. As the time for the commencement of the service approached there was some confusion owing to the preacher not having arrived. A hurried consultation was held, and it was finally decided to ask the visitor if he thought he could conduct the service for them. Modestly replying that he "would try," Dr. Jowett ascended the pulpit. No doubt, says Mr. Morison, he preached one of the sermons which have been listened to with interest by crowded congregations at Birmingham, but his little audience were quite unmoved.

Some few days later it became known that "Mr. Jowett of Carr's Lane," was staying in the district, and he was astonished to receive a deputation from the tiny chapel in which he had preached only a few days previously. "Oh," he said in reply to a pressing invitation to again occupy their pulpit, "but I conducted your service only the other Sunday." "Yes," was the reply, "but we didn't know who you were, sir, then." Whether Dr. Jowett's audience were quite so unresponsive to his eloquence as he would have us believe may, perhaps, be doubted.

Mr. Morison has something to say of the great men, Angell James and Dale, whom Dr. Jowett succeeded at Carr's Lane, and he gives some very interesting details of the early life of the extraordinary influence he had been able to exercise. Mr. Morison attributes much of his popularity as a preacher to his power of literary and graceful speech. ...

Canadian Buffalo Are Now Repatriated

COLONEL BEDSON'S HERD OF BUFFALO SHIPPED FROM STONY MOUNTAIN IN 1909 FORMED NUCLEUS OF GOVERNMENT HERD NOW AT WAINWRIGHT—SHIPPED FROM WINNIPEG, THEY TRAVELED VIA OMAHA, NEBRASKA AND MONTANA TO WAINWRIGHT, ALTA.—A TOUR OF TWENTY YEARS' DURATION.

The Latest Addition to Buffalo Park at Wainwright are Highly Appreciated

Wood Bison and Hybrids in the Buffalo Paddock at Fort Smith, Northwest Territories

It is certain that very few were left in the Canadian West when the Canadian Pacific Railway had been completed. The construction gangs of that road destroyed the struggles of this once mighty herd, as was the case in the building of the Union Pacific Railroad in the United States.

To this day, however, the whole of the vast west is one vast and pitted with their grave-like trails and basin like wallows, which are permanent records of the migratory hordes and their deep herds of these hoary beasts.

The old time Hudson Bay factors who still survive, tell of the grunting conditions of the Elbow and Battle, when the emigrants of the pioneer far company with their crushing Red River carts in the post in three hours in order to secure the yearly supply of pemmican for their northern hunting and trading posts. Although the buffalo had already been scarce by piles of unknowingly are, but which bore nearly all been gathered up and sold, to be used as fertilizers, "Pile of Bones" or Regina, was the head of this peculiar industry, which flourished shortly after the Riel rebellion.

The last buffalo to be killed in Western Canada met his death in 1906. He had been wounded some during the year but escaped, to meet his fate on the range of a couple of ranchers near the south branch of the Saskatchewan, who had a herd of several hundred ill gained cattle, and it has proved that, about the time when the railhill cross fly south, two of the ranchers were sent out in search of them. They caught sight of the band at noon on the second day out and were amazed to see it massed together for all the world like a herd of horses about a smudge of smoke fire, when the flies and mosquitoes are at their worst on a still, cloudy summer evening. With much difficulty they broke up the throng, and there, where the centre of the swirling press of blind masses had been, they found the lone and trampled carcass of the mighty monarch.

The herd, which has so grown for square miles, and contains many then bellowed lakes, endless chains of big sloughs and a few small permanent lakes, has been surveyed on closed with a high fence of wire and tamarac posts. A number of deer were enclosed in the building of the fence so that the bison will have companions in their spacious preservation. In fourth years there should be 10,000 head at Wainwright.

The buffalo was of vast importance to the Indian aborigines, its tendons of extreme supplied strong strings for bow ing, and bows by which they forcibly drove their deadly arrows tipped with poison for hunting or for warfare, his straight fore leg bones armed the spears with clubs to kill the wounded proteids matters of the enemy to bottle by hitting them on a tender part of the head, its horns were used for goblets, and material for making tender, its skin afforded warm clothing for their bodies in winter, and also sufficient covering for [illegible]

How the Earth is Warmed

Professor Sir J. J. Thomson's recent lecture on the amount of energy transmitted by the sun to the earth is of more than ordinary interest at the present time. The lecture dealt with the possibility of using the sun's energy, estimated at not less than 7,000 horsepower per acre on a bright sunny day. It is a most lavish expenditure, but practically wasted because nobody quite knows how to use it. It suggests the possibility of obtaining power at less than half the cost of the cheapest hitherto obtainable, and at the sacrifice of only a degree or so of temperature. This would never be missed. The power of the sun, however, is not heat altogether. The scientists call it radiant energy. How, then, is the earth warmed? As spring is advancing and the average daily temperature is rising it may be profitable to find an answer to this question.

[illegible] gap between two rods of carbon. This tiny flame is known as the electric arc, and it will light a surface of several hundred square yards. The face of the sun is 1½ millions of millions of square miles, and its brilliancy is more than double that of the electric light. In point of size, the sun is 300 times larger than all the planets put together. Compared solely with our own planet it would take 1¼ millions of earths to make a globe the size of the sun. [illegible]

MR. SALTING'S SAVING HABITS

The late George Salting of London, world renowned for the splendor and worth of his collection of art objects, was a man of peculiar habits and temperament [illegible] to her husband: "Well, if you will sit up, you must have something to drink," went to the sideboard, mixed a brandy and soda, took it to him, put the glass to his lips, and stood by him to see that he drank the whole, which he did with no visible reluctance. He handed the empty tumbler to his wife and thanked her. She put her arm about him, kissed him, looked at me, reproachfully, but amiably, and vanished.

[illegible]

Bismarck then "plunged at once" into his subject which was nothing less than the history of the last four years, during which he had ruled over Prussia.

Mr. Smalley first met Lord Kitchener at Aldershot, Mr. Hall's place in Sussex. He had lately returned from Egypt, and it was known that the hero of Khartoum was travelling by the train that day, and crowds assembled at the railway station.

"When we reached Guildford six or seven thousand people thronged the station. They hurrahed for "Kitchener" and as the cries for "Kitchener" met with no response they were raised again and again. Lord Kitchener sat in a corner buried in a rough grey overcoat, silent and bored. He had no taste for 'ovations' and triumphant greetings. Lord Glenesk told him that he really must show himself and acknowledge these salutations; so Lord Kitchener rose with an ill grace, walked to one of the open doors of the saloon, [illegible] the soldier the salutation demanded to see."

SCRUBBING ITALY'S "BLACK HAND"

It is evident that a vivid interest, far outstripping that taken in the coming British Coronation ceremony, in the question of Home Rule, the Peers' veto, reciprocity, arbitration, or the change in the Spanish, Italian and French ministries, has been roused throughout Europe by the trial of the camorrista, who have operated on this country and all over the world under the picturesque title of the "Black Hand." [illegible]

[illegible]

FROM MESSENGER BOY TO RAILWAY MAGNATE

David Holliday Moffat might safely be called a self-made man. From an unpromising start in life as messenger boy in New York, he forced his way up the ladder of success, until at the time of his death, a few weeks ago, he had been the president of two railways, a director in great insurance companies, the owner of vast, unusually productive mines, and head of Colorado's largest bank. [illegible]

[illegible]

engineers were kept in the field even in mid-winter. On the last day of the year 1902 Mr. Moffat threw the first shovelful of dirt on the grade near Denver. In the next two and a half years, despite tremendous obstacles, the rails were pushed steadily around and through the foot hills, over the Continental Divide and far out in the Middle Park. Thus the mountains were conquered and thus the hardest part of the work was done. The rest of the line to Salt Lake City are down watercourses and the construction is comparatively simple. [illegible]

"I'm going to Europe," he said. "Do you want to go along?"

"Do you mean it?" faltered Tom Guy.

"Certainly I mean it," answered his patron. "I want you to go."

Digging for Bacon's Secret Records

Baconian "cipher" enthusiasts persist. They are one and all determined to prove that Baron Verulam created most of the Elizabethan literature, and not merely the Shakespeare plays. Dr. Owen, of Detroit, Michigan, is one of the latest cipher solvers, and his convictions are so firm that he has gone to England to establish them before the world. The following descriptive article, from the London Standard, gives many of the details of his quest:

The tide of the river Wye, they tell me, is higher than anywhere else in the world, except in the Bay of Fundy and one other place; it rises and falls sometimes as much as forty feet, and it rushes in and out like a mill race. But for a couple of hours or so between each tide the river shrinks into a mere stream, some twenty yards in width, flowing between shelving banks of the slimiest, stickiest mud it is possible to imagine. Anyone standing during the last week or two by the old Roman ford, about half a mile as the crow flies above Chepstow Castle, might have observed that the moment the tide was out a party of about a dozen men would come out from under the yews which reach out from the western bank and begin work on timbered shafts sunk in the bed of the river, about a third of the way across. Night did not interfere with their labors; they delved by the weird light of naptha flares hung on the branches of the yew trees and stuck upon poles in the mud.

The man who directs this mysterious enterprise lives away over in the quaint old town of Chepstow, in the [illegible]

Pertinent Personalities

WHETHER it is because the Englishmen as a race are better sports than the Canadians I cannot say, but certainly the British members of parliament are more enthusiastic sportsmen than the representatives in the Dominion House. Just at present the annual parliamentary golf handicap is being played off. Both Premier Asquith and Hon. A. J. Balfour are entered, as well as Lloyd George and Winston Churchill. Balfour is regarded as the likely winner, having won the parliamentary championship now two years in succession. There is an annual parliamentary cricket match at Westminster, also an annual steeplechase. At Ottawa, R. L. Borden is about the only real crack golfer in the house. There is not a member of the cabinet who indulges in any sport to any extent. Hon. George Graham in his early days was quite an athlete. His performance at Melville, Sask., on the occasion of the Laurier tour last year, when he pitched for the parliamentary nine against the press team in a baseball game rather opened the eyes of the natives.

The Canadian apparently does not keep up his indulgence in games after he passes the youthful stage as does the Englishman. There are many members of the house who were famous athletes in their early days but few who now take part in even golf or lawn bowling. [illegible] He was an all round sportsman in his youth, and in the early nineties was considered one of the best rugby players in Canada, being captain of the famous [illegible] years of the sentence had been imposed on the ground that the man was an habitual criminal. The man was released on January 6th, and sent to work near Wrexham. Two days of this benevolence proved enough, and on the eighth the now famous old shepherd disappeared. The papers took the case up, and the joke was introduced in the commons, anxious enquiries being directed to the two ministers about the missing protege. "Active search," replied Mr. Churchill, "is being made for him." On one occasion, when being baited in regard to his gentle shepherd, the home secretary replied that he understood the old man had been enticed away for political purposes, but he declined to give particulars.

The old shepherd has turned up again. He was arrested in Shropshire, charged with having entered a house by the cellar window and stealing four bottles of whisky. The old fellow is now quite a figure in British politics.

THE FIRST SHOT OF THE CIVIL WAR

Roger Atkinson Pryor, lawyer, editor, and soldier, now nearly eighty-three years old, was selected to fire the first shot of the Civil War, but gave up the honor to another. A few days ago, on the fiftieth anniversary of the firing on Fort Sumter, [illegible] ranged for his old friend, Edmund Ruffin, to do it. "But," says Roger Pryor, "[illegible]" the tale are, in spite of their faults, self-sacrificing and thoughtful for others, whose death is the one expedient on which the novelist relies to cut all knots. Mlle. Once again, then we find a book owing its success—and "Marie Claire" is already in its twelfth thousand—to its style alone, and vindicating to some purpose the truth of the view that to please the public it matters little what you say so long as you know how to say it."

Provincial Premiers May Be Knighted

London, June 18—It is needless to say that the coronation honor list, which is expected on Monday is awaited with the keenest interest, which is not the least among the group of expectant Canadians. It will surprise most people if it does not include Hon. L. P. Brodeur and the unknighted provincial premiers here, namely, Hon. A. L. Sifton, Hon. Walter Scott, Hon. J. D. Hazen, Hon. R. P. Roblin and Hon. R. McBride, unless as is quite possible, some more democratically minded of them think it inexpedient for domestic political reasons, to accept handles to their names. Friends of the mayors of Montreal, Winnipeg and Toronto now here, all express hopes. An interesting feature of the list will probably be a royal dukedom for Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duke of Teck, the Queen's brother. This will make the number of royal dukes seven, the others being the Dukes of Connaught, Albany, Saxe-Coburg, Gotha and the Duke of Cumberland, son of the late King of Hanover.

$30,000,000 To Be Spent In West By C.N.R

Expenditures by the Canadian Northern Railway in the west this year are likely to amount to $30,000,000, according to an estimate made at Winnipeg. The construction of new lines and improvement of existing routes will be responsible for the outlay.

CUMMINGS

Mr. Sadler, student, preached his farewell sermon before a large congregation in the Autumn Leaf schoolhouse here on Sunday, June 11th. Mr Black and Mr. Hade coworkers in the Presbyterian church, were present and also spoke. This post is no sinecure for a student but Mr. Sadler by his steadfast devotion to duty has won the esteem and respect of all ... the district for his future welfare.

Five Years Dyspepsia Cured

"No one knows what I suffered from stomach trouble and dyspepsia," writes Mr A B Agnew, of Bridgewater "For the last five years I have been unable to digest and assimilate food. I had no color, my strength ran down and I felt miserable and nervous all the time. I always had a heavy feeling after meals and was much troubled with dizziness and specks before my eyes. Dr. Hamilton's Pills were just what I needed. They have cured every symptom of my old trouble. My health is now all that can be desired." THE GRAVE OF CARE

We buried Care in an open grave,
And laugh, as we turned the sods,
The laugh and the song and the cheer we gave Rang out to the Hill of Gods.
We buried Care with a right good will
And never a sigh gave we,
And over the mound we danced our fill
And planted the seeds of glee
It's many a day since the seeds were sown
In a single mirthful hour,
And up from the mould they all have grown
With many a charming flower
There are Blossoms of Cheerfulness
Buds of Mirth
Sprigs of the Merry Heart
There are perfumed flowers of the Joy of Earth
And blooms of the Better Part
We water them all as they grow and grow
With the tears of our revelry,
And hour by hour they nod and blow
To the beautiful sunlit sea
...
And take me—I wot not where
So the sun be warm and the day be long
And the flowers nod o'er the grave of Care

Cheerfulness A Great Asset

The great English author, Thomas Carlyle says:

"Give us, O give us the man who sings at his work. He will do more, he will do it better."

No man can work to good advantage with aching feet.

The man who would be cheerful and achieve something worth while, should seek the comfort and satisfaction always found in "INVICTUS" footwear.

To produce the "INVICTUS" no detail of manufacture is considered too small for the most careful attention. That is why you will find every model of "The Best Good Shoe" bearing distinctive marks of style and quality.

Magnificent Crop Prospects

Reports From All Points Indicate An Abundant Harvest

From every part of the surrounding country come reports of the unusually promising appearance of the growing crops. The weather from earliest spring till the present has been most favorable. With plenty of rain and Alberta Sunshine, the fertile prairie soil for which the Vermilion district is becoming so favorably known, has produced this summer a luxuriant growth of vegetation surpassing that of previous seasons. The improvements in the farming methods adopted are much in evidence in the appearance of the crop and crop lands.

The acreage sown to cereals is much larger than last year and with the yield which is now practically assured, there will be at least an increase of fifty per cent over last years product.

Change In Service To North P.O.'s

Several Settlements Will Recieve [illegible]

Commencing next week several of the settlements north of Vermilion will receive their mail matter twice a week instead of weekly as at present. Some changes have of necessity been made in the route and the post offices which will benefit by the new service are Maughan, Pegus, Northern Valley Hopkins, Caskeyville and Elk Point, the mail leaving Vermilion every Tuesday and Friday of each week at noon.

The mail for Campbell Lake, Coyote Valley and Landonville will leave Vermilion every Tuesday morning as formerly.

J. R. Caskey will cover both mail routes.

Baseball Boys Improve In Form

Better and brighter days seem to be in store for the Vermilion Baseball club. AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Midgic Station, N. B.—One can hardly believe this as it is not natural, but it was my case. For ten months I suffered from suppression. I had different doctors, tried different medicines, but none helped me. My friends told me I would go into a decline. One day a lady friend told me what your medicine had done for her, so I wrote you for advice and received your reply with pleasure.

I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at the second bottle showed improvement. Now I am regular and never was so well in my life, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine.

Please publish my letter for the benefit of others.—Mrs. JOSIAH W. HICKS, Midgic Station, N. B.

Indian Head, Sask.—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is indeed a boon to women who suffer from female ills. My health is better now than it has been in my five years of married life and I thank you for the good your advice and medicine have done me. I had spent hundreds of dollars on doctors without receiving any benefit.—Mrs. FRANK COOPER, Box 448, Indian Head, Saskatchewan.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

ADVANTAGES TO BE GAINED BY THE STATES

James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture at Washington, Writes on Reciprocity

Mr. James Wilson, secretary of agriculture for the United States, in a recent article on reciprocity says:

"Half a century ago the American farmer had no home markets in which to sell his surplus crops. He arranged for a home market by protecting all diversified industries. This brought the home market the best in the world. Population has outgrown production from the farm in some cases, and threatens to outgrow it in others.

The American farmer brought about the building of the American factory because he wanted a home market. That home market is the best to be found anywhere, because our people all live well and are all able to buy the best farm produce—that is, all who are willing to work. It may be said without much exaggeration, that the American farmer is responsible for the upbuilding of the factory. He has voted steadily for half a century to give protection to the extent of the difference in cost of production between this country and any country that desires to sell in our markets. Was that right or wrong? Was it wise for the farmers to do that? There was no market at home. They wanted a market as near the factory as they could bring it. Now millions of people who work in these factories and in occupations other than farming want food at reasonable prices. Who can condemn them for that desire?

The advantages that will come from reciprocity to the people of the United States will be, first access to the Canadian woods. Then there will be access to Canadian markets for our fruits, free fish, free trade in seeds, free trade in flax, free barbed wire fencing, free trade in horses. The last will give us a market for our draft horses in those new provinces that are being opened up. . . .

Going further west he says:

I am firmly convinced that it would be to the advantage of both countries for us to take the export wheat of Canada, mill it and send the flour to the markets of the world because the dairymen of the United States would then get the by-products of the mills and as the population of the United States increases the dairy market will be greater and greater. ...

FOR TEETHING BABIES

There is only one medicine for teething babies—that is one that will make teething easy and at the same time can be given with absolute safety. That medicine is Baby's Own Tablets—every box of which is sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to be free from all those injurious opiates and narcotics which make "soothing" stuffs so harmful. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. George Leblanc, St. Pamphile, Que., says: "I used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby when he was teething and constipated and found them an excellent remedy." The Tablets are sold by Medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Housekeepers are strongly advised to commence the use of Wilson's Fly Pads early, because a few flies killed in June would otherwise become a host by August.

Spraying machines won't do you a bit of good hung up on a nail. Get them down and use them on the bugs every day or two.

An important point in potato culture is the selection of seed. Seed should be chosen from the best potatoes, not from the poor ones. The ideal way is to go over the patch, choose the plants that look the healthiest, have the best foliage, and so forth and mark the using of the best potatoes from these plants for seed.

A stitch in time saves nine, and every house fly killed early saves a thousand at least later on. Wilson's Fly Pads will kill many times more flies than any other article.

A Thought for Today

Our Round Table

OF COURSE, there isn't any table—we could not have one large enough to accommodate our readers—but the spirit is here. When you read the verse in the Poets' Corner you should be glad to know that thousands of other readers are enjoying the thought and the music of poetry. When you listen to Grandma Watkins the experience of the unhappy mother, or of one of the protagonists set forth in her clever verse, appeals with a universality that is the test of worth-while literature. Others are saying with you, "I always thought that, too."

The sympathy in recreation or work is a forceful bond. The chain of kindred thoughts holds us around our reading table, and subconsciously we are gratified and pleased in the knowledge that there are others far away enjoying the same thing.

You will be pleased with "The Introduction"; "A Question of Relationship" also demands your attention. Are you paying, or are you making another pay? Somebody must pay, one of our contributors says. Read the little discussion. Have you felt that the art of conversation is in a pitiable state of decline? Barbara Lee asserts that the fine art is going or gone.

If you have not joined our reading circle, come right up to the round table. There is always room for more and a hearty welcome in the form of fiction worth reading is always waiting.

Going—An Art

WILL some one establish a school for the encouragement of the slowly, but surely, dying art of conversation? It is, I think, at its ebb, and if small talk grows very much smaller, I fear we shall be dumb—if we are not that already.

Have you ever listened to the endless, silly chatter of grown-up participants in afternoon teas, art exhibitions, the dramatic or musical performances, or the ordinary home gathering of a few favored ones? It is generally sickening in its frothy, gurgling, foamy nothingness. I have listened in vain for one clever remark from beautiful "buds" in the house. I have yet to hear more than a dozen persons who are entertaining conversationalists. They can play golf, take a fence beautifully, embroider, warble, play at the various versions (simplified and otherwise) of the classics, and yet in the art that is the fruit of sociability the greater number is pitiably deficient!

It is a well-known fact that the palm is given to woman for her charming conversational powers, just as the prize goes to her in the art of letter writing. But be careful, my sisters! You are neglecting the gentle art of being entertaining. You are devoting too much time to the building up of a "perfectly dear little gown" or a ravishing complexion, and your powers of expression are minus.

Many thinkers ascribe to us the art that is disappearing from our drawing rooms with alarming rapidity. "There can be no art of conversation without woman," says a present-day philosopher; but, alas! woman is either bridging it or discussing the harem skirt and the recent riots in Paris.

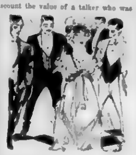
"Perfect darling!" "Lovely, perfectly lovely!" "Isn't he a dear?" "Gorgeous!" "Sweet!"

I collected these at the end of the prologue in "I Pagliacci" the other evening, just as specimens of the small talk that the woman of today delights in; and believe me, they are representative of the so-called educated people who have been blessed with fortune and years of schooling. How mature, sensible women can spend an afternoon or evening of their lives in driveling, innocuous conversation is beyond my comprehension. I have found that the thinking women keep quiet on occasions like these. But you see that in itself is disastrous.

Not every one of us is blessed with wit or a golden voice, but to every one of us is given an opportunity to read the thoughts of master minds and to think for ourselves.

If a pink tea means nothing more than perfectly delicious flowers and a gorgeous time, I advise that you omit this special form of abomination from the season's entertainments.

In other days the art of conversation was valued in a degree that surprises us in a century characterized by its decay. Any one who had something to say and could say that something well was admitted even in the so-called exclusive salons. Voltaire, the aggressive, conceited, disagreeable, was always welcome, because of his ready wit.



Who could discount the value of a talker who was capable of the famous retort after he was challenged to a duel? You remember? He had launched one of his biting and inimitable epigrams at a prince, and the only reply that the latter could make was his card. Voltaire amiably said: "It would not be fair; you are tall and I am small; you are brave and I am a poltroon. Besides, if you wish to kill me—well, I consider myself as dead."

The ability to converse well broke down all barriers that the lack of a coat-of-arms might have raised. You know of Madame Geoffrin. She was the daughter of a valet of the dauphin. She married a bourgeois, who was wealthy and ignorant. She had no beauty, she lacked elegance; she served very mediocre dinners and one never wrote. But she could talk, and for a long time in the latter half of the eighteenth century Madame Geoffrin was the acknowledged leader of society. At her receptions ... grand seigneurs were to be seen—and heard.

At her gatherings history, science, literature and art were discussed; politics and religion were rarely touched. And in that summing up of this leader's success lies the truth of the whole matter. Conversation will sustain itself by its own weight; but you must first have something to talk about! If your adjectives are restricted to lovely, darling and gorgeous, you are going to come to the end of your conversational rope in a short time. If you can buzz for five minutes on the coloratura's trill or the "atmosphere" of a landscape painting, or the "feeling" in a palm, do not think that you have exhausted the unplumbed depths of truth or art or science. To be sure, the curtain is rung up just about at this point; or Percy Ibbetson appears on the scene to divert attention; but do not for one minute think that you are a brilliant conversationalist if you can keep up the chatter. Where are our Madames de Stael and our Mary Wortley Montagues?

It seems a pity that the few arts that are conceded to be in our hands are not better cultivated. Are we retrograding? Don't tell me that in future history we shall be classed with the people of the middle ages of Greece and Rome, where the art of conversation was almost nihil because of the sequestration of the women!

Here is your opportunity to do something for history. Say something—and say it well!

BARBARA LEE.

Grain farming is a gamble in which the farmer stands to make all or nothing, but that is not good business. It is safe to say that, even with the splendid prospects there are this year of getting a bumper crop, there is not a farmer or a farmer's wife but would feel a great deal more secure and less worried, if he had some live stock or a field of alfalfa or timothy, or a good flock of poultry, or a field [illegible] of roots and vegetables. NATIONS' HOMAGE TO KING GEORGE

Great Naval Review of Ships of Eighteen Nations at Spithead

London, June 24.—One hundred and eighty-five ships of war representing eighteen nations, paid homage to King George V and his consort, Queen Mary, at Spithead today. Spread over a six mile stretch of sea were the fighting monsters all dressed in flags and bunting and presenting an unexcelled and many colored picture. It was a magnificent tribute to Britain's sailor king. As the King and Queen, on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, proceeded through the long line of battleships, cruisers, and other vessels, each ship gave the royal salute.

The thunderous tones of the great guns was deafening. Included in the party aboard the royal yacht were distinguished envoys to the crowning festivities. Of the ships in the great column one hundred and sixty seven represented Great Britain and eighteen were the most splendid types of other nations. There had been a great exodus to Spithead all morning. Thousands of Americans were in the van.

It was 12.30 o'clock when the royal train arrived at Portsmouth. Their majesties were met by Admiral Moore commander in chief of the British fleet and officers of the naval guard of honor. When the party had stepped aboard the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, the royal standard was run to masthead.

An officer on the bridge of the Lord Nelson's flagship Victory, had been watching for this signal. Scarcely had the standard been caught by the breeze than there came across the water the sight of fire from an open port of the old flagship. Before the report of the gun had reached those on board the royal yacht or the crowds that lined the shore and the pleasure craft and sightseeing craft there was another flash. Then there was one continuous flashing of fire and booming of guns and the shots were heard far up the line, passing the word to further ships six miles away that the review had begun.

As the royal yacht drew near there was a [illegible] in the first ship in line. It was the royal salute. When the vessel ceased [illegible] the salute was taken up by the next. The foreign warships in their turn thundered out their greetings. In all [illegible] guns boomed salutes to the newly crowned king and queen. The men of the ships manned the rails and the bands played "God Save the King."

The king and queen stood on the bridge of the royal yacht as they went up the line of the great warships and came back [illegible] the foreign ships and the sightseeing craft. It was [illegible] o'clock when the Victoria and Albert dropped anchor in the roads and abreast the flagships. From the bridge [illegible] signal that was [illegible] the fleet. Then from the [illegible] The King [illegible] while the Prince of Wales was dressed in the uniform of a midshipman.

Don't Knock, Be A Booster!

Editor of the Standard,

Dear Sir:—

There seems to a tendency on the part of certain Vermilion people to feel discouraged and even to "Knock" the Vermilion Paradise Valley league ball club because of the fact that the team has lost something like three straight games. Such a feeling on the part of the citizens is not doing justice to themselves, to the ball team, or to the town.

There must be a team at the top of the list and there must be one at the bottom. If Vermilion happens to be the unfortunate one to grace the bottom the public should not get out the hammer but should endeavor in some way to help put the team back near the top.

Toronto in the Eastern League a few days ago, stood with eleven straight defeats to their credit and the people of that city remained loyal to the team, knowing that it's a long lane that has no turning.

Remember, baseball is a game, and a good one, and the best way to help the home team and the town it advertises is to patronize the game and above all to "Boost" the time when our player need encouragement is when they are losing, not when things are coming their way.

By INA WRIGHT HANSON

This is the letter that I wrote [illegible]

"What became of Ludema?"

"She has been dead a good many years."

"Shall we try that new duet now?" she asked, springing up. "Do you know I'm glad you licked Willie Henderson."

Next day was Sunday, and over a very late breakfast my brother [illegible]

FEMININE DAIRY WISDOM

Fodder planted the first week in June will be ready to cut for the cows by the middle of July.

Plan for an abundance of supplementary food to make up for the drying pastures.

There may be a time in the full flush of pasture in June that the cows will need little or no grain, but watch carefully with scales and tester that no time is lost by short feed.

Some pastures may give perfect food, but others do not.

Nothing helps out more than a big lot of first-class fodder-corn.

Plant thin enough so the sun can reach and perfect the sugar in the stalk, and so that each stalk will develop at least one ear.

The bull pasture and pen must be kept in repair.

The bull should be trained to lead and obey the word.

Kindness and firmness will work wonders in keeping the herd bull kind and tractable. Never trust any bull.

The bull must have exercise, but under no circumstances should he be allowed to run in the pasture with the cows.

A piece of ground adjoining the pen or stable—an acre is none too much—should be enclosed with a strong fence. In the corner of the bull pasture opening from the stable a small yard should be enclosed by strong gates.

Every morning and night he should be fed in the stable. During the days he should have the range of the whole space.

Fling a blanket over your cows when you are milking, no matter whether you spray them or not.

FEEDING CALVES

The essential feature in feeding young calves is to keep as near to nature as possible. The newly born calf should suckle its mother for at least the first day even if she is a very valuable milk cow and the prejudice against this practice is strong.

The first milk of the newly calved cow contains certain medicinal qualities that are very essential for the well being of the new calf. This medical quality of the milk cannot be transferred to the calf in any better shape or condition than for the calf to take it directly for itself from its mother. The first milk is also scarcely fit for human food unless you accustom yourself to it, therefore give the calf its natural food and start it on its way to development in a healthy and robust condition.

When you take the calf away from its mother the pure milk should be continued to be fed to it for at least three weeks. The calf may then be gradually switched off on to skim milk. Always have the milk at a temperature that is fairly warm to the hand, but not scalding. In place of the cream that has been taken out from the milk linseed meal or pulverized linseed cake should be substituted.

To make this preparation powder down some linseed cake, and pour over it some scalding water. When it has thus steeped for ten or fifteen minutes let it stand covered for a while. When ten minutes add the skimmed milk and cool to the right feeding temperature. By this method of substituting linseed cake for cream you save the cream for your own use, and in all probability the cake is as cheap for you to buy as the cream is for you to use.

The calf also about this time should be fed some chopped grain, alfalfa hay or some clover or even chopped mangolds will be greatly relished by the little fellow. In this manner you may keep the calf in a growing, thrifty, healthy condition. Never keep a calf tied up all the day long if you have no stock run for it, or a feed lot for it to run at large in, fence in a small yard that the calf may run and skip around to its heart content.

If the calf is to be fed for the block then feed it accordingly by giving it concentrated grain foods. If it is reserved for dairying purposes then feed it bulky rough feed that its digestive apparatus may be accordingly developed for this purpose.

The chirpiest man we ever knew was forever telling other folks to have a ball.

TO CLEAN STRAW HATS

Now is the time to clean your white straw hat to be ready for the warm weather. This is best done as follows:

Remove all the trimming and scrub the hat well with tepid water and soap, using a nail brush for this purpose. Afterwards rinse in cold water.

Then procure a packing case, and hang the hat up inside by means of a nail. Place a saucer of common sulphur in the case, and set it alight. Cover the box with a cloth or blanket and leave it until the sulphur has burnt out. The hat will then be perfectly clean and dry.

Cut worms do the most injury in the spring. Their ravages are most noticeable in gardens and wheat, although they often attack beets, and in fact any green vegetation. They are night feeders altogether and the farmer's crop slowly disappears while he sleeps. During the day they hide in the ground at a depth of about an inch or so under some protecting shelter.

Stops Itching Heals the Skin

And Cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and All Skin Diseases.

These Results You Can be Sure of When You Use

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Quick and certain are the effects of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Itching is stopped almost as soon as it is applied. The sores are cleaned out, morbid growth is arrested and the healing process is soon set in action.

Compare these results with the tedious and uncertainty of internal treatment for itching skin diseases. [illegible] after the health of the blood and the system generally, but get rid of the annoying and torturing skin ailment at once by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The reputation of Dr. Chase's Ointment has been made by its marvellous success in the cure of eczema and piles. But it is just as effective in the cure of old sores and wounds which have defied ordinary treatments and have been given up by doctors.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is prized by mothers as a treatment for the skin troubles of babies, such as chafing, skin irritation, scald head and baby eczema. Its soothing influence stops the itching and it prevents the trifles [illegible] from these lesser skin troubles.

DESERTED FARMS IN THE EASTERN STATES

How the Trusts Have Seized the Great Market of "Ninety Millions."

Mr. C. L. Sibley, of Montreal, who has recently returned from a tour of the Eastern States where he wrote a series of articles [illegible] Deserted Farms in the United States, says in referring to reciprocity:—

"Do the Canadian farmers imagine that they can invade the markets of the United States and succeed where so many American farmers fail? [illegible]

in Cash Prizes for Farmers

Your Photograph May Win a Prize

AMONG the prizes we are offering in our big Prize Contest is one of $100.00 (Prize "C") for the farmer in each Province who furnishes us with a photograph showing the best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement. For this prize, work of every description is included.

Now just as soon as you finish that new silo, barn, feeding floor or dairy, that you've been thinking of building, why not photograph it and send the picture to us? The photograph doesn't necessarily have to be taken by a professional or an expert. In fact, your son or your daughter's camera will do. [illegible] you might use the kodak of your neighbor's son neighborhood. [illegible] In any event, don't let the idea of having a photograph made deter you from entering the competition. Particularly as we have requested your local dealer to help in cases where it is not convenient for the farmer to procure a camera in the neighborhood. By this means you are placed on an equal footing with every other contestant.

Get the circular which gives you full particulars of the conditions and of the other three prizes. Every dealer who sells "CANADA" Cement will have on hand a supply of these circulars and he'll give you one if you just ask for it. Or if you prefer you can use the attached coupon or a post card and send it to us and you'll receive the complete details of the contest by return mail.

If you haven't received your copy of "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete," ask for that too. It's a [illegible] book of 160 pages full of useful and practical information of the uses of concrete.

Write us to-night and you'll receive the book and the circular promptly.

Do not delay—sit right down—take your pen or pencil, and fill out the coupon NOW.

Please send Contest Circular and book.

Under the auspices of Christ Church Ottawa S. D., Coronation festivities in the shape of a picnic were held on June 22nd. Despite the foreboding aspect of the weather about 200 people were present, including a large contingent from town. The chief event in the sports programme was a football match between Vermilion and the Church team. A well contested game ended in a victory for the Church team by the narrow margin of 2 to 1. An excellent repast was provided by the ladies, and in the evening an impromptu concert, which was much appreciated, was carried out. The evening proceedings came to a close about 11 p.m.

Vermilion, June 29th, 1911.

The picnic at Christ Church, Ottawa district held on Coronation Day, was well attended and proved a most enjoyable affair. A large number from town attended.

Nine petitions for sidewalks were recently presented to the Vegreville town council. These were granted and the ratepayers will shortly be asked to endorse money by-laws providing the necessary funds to build the walks.

Heavy rains, general throughout the district, fell last Thursday, and Friday morning very heavy rains prevailed, the week closed showery and warm and in so far as moisture is concerned the district is assured of bumper crops.

Cut worms are reported to be doing great damage to garden stuff this year. Last year it was so very dry that it gave the moths of which the cut worms are the larva, a fine chance to lay eggs and this accounts for the exceptional crop of cut worms. A friend of the Standard, who had a very fine garden, was advised to lay salt between the rows of radishes as it had never been known to fail. He tried it and reported next morning that the little beggars were pulling up the radishes, dipping them in salt and eating them by the score.

VERMILION'S BIG DAY WEDNESDAY, JULY 12

$600.00 For Horse Racing and Other Sports

Vermilion's annual day of sports has been set this year for Wednesday next, July 12th., and will undoubtedly be bigger and better than ever before. The various committees entrusted with the programme have been working hard and are giving the public one big round of entertainment and attractions for the day.

Substantial purses are hung up for the horse races, which is a guarantee of close and exciting contests for the big end of the prizes.

Maidstone and Mannville baseball teams are expected to clash here for honors, and the local nine are pitted against Vegreville in a league game so that the crowd is assured of some little excitement in the ball line.

Lovers of football will be treated to a match between the famous ... of ... who put it over the Vermilion champion ... on Coronation Day, the local boys ... given the opportunity to redeem themselves.

The athletic events ... numerous but a large degree of interest centres in the Standard Road Race Cup, which has been won two years hand running by Stewart Miller, who will endeavor to gain its possession for good by a third win.

In the evening a grand concert and ball will be given in the new Royal George Theatre.

It being the glorious Twelfth, not the least among the day's celebration, is the Orange Parade of all the Lodges in this County. The Orangemen have from 12 to 2 o'clock for their portion of the day and several prominent officers of the Grand Lodge are expected to be present and deliver addresses.

Given fine weather and the town will entertain one of the biggest crowds in its history, and the committees are sanguine that the event will prove one continuous round of solid enjoyment for each and all.

It is expressly desired that all business places be decorated for the day and flags hoisted to give the town a gala and holiday appearance.

Arrangements are under way whereby it is expected that the Vermilion Band will supply the music for the day.

SILAS OF HEBRON VALLEY

A Wall Street Deal and What It Brought Him.

By M. J. PHILLIPS.

John G. Davidson, with his clean shaven, comely face, cleft chin, blue eyes and firm jaw, might have been from appearances an actor. He might have been mistaken for a popular preacher or a professional baseball player. His age was apparently anywhere between thirty and fifty years.

He had the air of good living and prosperity which the men of the world is supposed to wear.

All guesses as to his profession, however, would probably have gone wide of the mark. He was senior member of the firm of Davidson & Cole of Wall street, a firm which bore a rather shady reputation. Even now he was hurrying home from a hunting trip in Maine which had been cut short by the tip, irregularly received, of a big "killing" to be made the next day on the Stock Exchange.

In other words, Davidson & Cole were preparing to garner several hundred thousand dollars because the Hillmans and the Silvers were about to close in a death grapple for the control of the New York and Western. Each faction held about one-third of the stock. Speculators and investors held the other third, mostly in small lots. The Silvers needed the road, it was said, to stifle its chances of becoming a dangerous competitor. The Hillman crowd desired it for these very possibilities.

[illegible]

...thing in investing all his money to a perfect stranger, but the remembrance of Davidson's face with its unreadable smile then reassured him. "I was a darn fool for ever thinking of this thing," he muttered. "Though sure it beat me if I tried speculatin' by myself. I guess Davidson's square."

The New York and Western episode in the Stock Exchange that was merely a skirmish in the great industrial warfare which goes on ceaselessly in that part of the granite-ribbed Wall street. A few profited. Scores were ruined. Before Davidson & Cole had cashed up, partnership with the stock Davidson scented danger and had begun to sell.

His suspicion was verified. The story of the fight for control was a clever fake which had already caught many small firms. It developed that the Silvers and the Hillmans had long since come to an amicable agreement in regard to the road.

FIRST BOX CURED HIS LAME BACK

High Praise for GIN PILLS

Smithville, Ont.

"I suffered for three years with a Pain in My Back. I am now taking Gin Pills and find a great relief after taking only one box."

W. J. Baldwin.

Is it any wonder that we sell GIN PILLS with an iron-clad guarantee of money back if they fail to give relief? We know that GIN PILLS will stop the pain in the Back—relieve the bladder—and cure every trace of Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism.

GIN PILLS HAVE CURED thousands of cases of Kidney Trouble that were regarded as hopeless.

We don't ask you to buy GIN PILLS to find out what they will do for you. Simply write us, mentioning this paper, and we will send you a sample box free. Then if you are unable to get the regular size boxes at your dealer's, write us and we will supply you at the retail price—50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. GIN PILLS are made and guaranteed by the largest wholesale drug house in the British Empire.

National Drug and Chemical Co., Dept. N. P., Toronto.

The original Gin Pills made by National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Toronto, are sold only in this box.

If you keep cats at the barn and you will find that it pays to do so, feed them every milking time. Give them plenty of milk and some meat. Starved cats lose ambition. The well treated cat hunts for fun and exercise.

Have you ever been caught out in a cold June rainstorm? You know how it chills one. Then get the cows quickly when it begins to rain and drop a bit of nice hay in the manger for them to busy themselves with.

It costs less to make a pound of young flesh than it does to make a pound of mature flesh. Start the young stock to growing at once. A stunted calf, colt, pig or chicken is usually an unprofitable piece of property.

Towels should be thoroughly dried before being put away. In their damp condition mould sometimes forms on them which not only spoils the towels but has been known to cause skin troubles.

ALL AROUND THE HOME

When silver is not in constant use a piece of camphor will keep it from tarnishing.

Brushing moth holes in furniture with paraffin will arrest their progress. The holes should be filled with paraffin wax.

Valuable china and glass may be saved from chipping by placing a heavy Turkish towel at the bottom of the basin in which it is washed.

After mirrors are washed and dried they should be rubbed with alcohol and polished with tissue paper.

Net blouses do not get stringy if washed in bran water. Pour boiling water over a small bag of bran and when cold rinse the net in it. After an umbrella has been in use for a short time put a drop of oil in the centre of the top about once a month. This prevents the ribs from rusting.

To clean French kid gloves place them on your hands and wash them in some spirits of turpentine until quite clean. Then hang them where there is a current of air and the smell will disappear. Look out for fire.

The people who have to travel to town over a bad road are beginning to see the error of their way.

It Has Many Qualities.—The man who possesses a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is armed against many ills. It will cure a cough, break a cold, prevent sore throat; it will reduce the swelling from a sprain, cure the most persistent sores and will speedily heal cuts and contusions. It is a medicine chest in itself and can be got for a quarter of a dollar.

No use letting them break your will before you cash in.

Somehow we always feel dubious about a ball player who forgets the batting order.

Ask for Minard's and take no other.

Mouse Traps

Should be thoroughly scalded and aired after two or three captures or they will be practically useless.

REST AND HEALTH TO MOTHER AND CHILD.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN, CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHOEA. [illegible] Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Some folks get on in the habit of saying "Whoa" to their horses when they do not mean it, that these faithful animals [illegible] when their masters really do mean for them to stop [illegible] keep going. When you say "Whoa" mean it. That is the only way your horses have of knowing what it is.

A MOTHER'S PRAISE OF BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Allen Mason, Carleton, N. B., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets ever since I have had children and that is going on fifteen years. I always found them entirely satisfactory for all the ailments of little ones and feel that I cannot praise them too highly." Mrs. Mason's praise is just that of thousands of mothers who consider Baby's Own Tablets the only safe and sure remedy to keep in the house for their little ones. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DON'T INTERRUPT

The tiresome habit of interrupting is the bane of modern conversation. We are in such a hurry to get to the root of the matter that we cut our friends short in the middle of their sentences and before they have recovered from the [illegible] [illegible] our [illegible] we finish these for them quite differently from the way they would have done themselves. It is too much trouble to explain to us even if we would let them, so they hold their peace and we ourselves are often the sufferers. I did not understand [illegible] afterwards when some [illegible] stake is the sequel [illegible] "Don't interrupt" should be written in letters of gold.

District Forging to the Front Many Improvements Going Ahead

A new district, or rather an old district with a new name. Where is it? Not many miles S. E. of town a place that is rapidly growing. Mr. Hall and Mr. Murray on Sec. 14 will soon have 150 acres broken much of this is in crop this year. Then on 10 Mr. Barr and Mr. Mitchell have 150 acres, here passing along the road I saw the best growth I have yet seen of wheat and oats.

Sec. 4 is trying to beat anything in the Township, here are 4 nice homesteads and I was told that next spring would see 400 acres in crop.

We have had nice showers for the past two weeks and it makes breaking easy.

There is a fine new school here built by Ferrel & Walker of Vermilion, and from the number of little ones I saw playing outside I should think the school did not come any too soon. Miss Fleming of Owen Sound, Ont., has charge of the school.

And here I want to say that the people of this place wish to thank their neighbors from other Townships who attended the Box Social here some time ago and helped to put up the sum of $55.00. The Money I was told was used to help purchase an Organ for the school and church services.

Rev. Mr. Snowden holds service at this place every Sunday morning.

Mr. John Barr has just finished a fine large lumber stable.

Mr. D. Murray has a new house and barn under course of construction, these are a few of the many improvements up-to-date

How many of us take the STANDARD? It's a very common thing for a neighbor to walk from one to five miles to see the ads. Don't you ever think how well you were paid for that walk.

Now here is hoping that each family in the district will subscribe for the Standard, right quick so that they may have it in their own home to read when they please.

Armstrong — Bannatyne.

A pretty wedding took place on [illegible] at the residence of Mr. P. W. Bannatyne [illegible] fourteenth avenue, when his second daughter Edith, became the wife of Cecil Armstrong. Rev. William Shearer, superintendent of Presbyterian missions for southern Alberta, officiated. The bride who was given away by her father, was attended by Miss Eva Williams, while Francis Bell supported the groom.

The bride entered the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Mr. Stander, with organist of Grace Presbyterian church.

Following the ceremony about 30 guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding supper.

The young couple left on the evening train for Banff, amid the customary showers of rice and confetti. Upon their return they will take up their residence on Seventeenth avenue east. Calgary News Herald.

Borden's Vegreville Meeting

Town Extends Civic Reception to Leader of Opposition

Where Mr. Borden Stands on Big Issues Before People of Canada

(Special to the Standard)

Vegreville, June 30th.—The meeting addressed here yesterday afternoon by R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party, Dr. W. J. Roche, M.P., Marquette Man. and J. G. H. Bergeron of Quebec, was attended by several hundred people, despite the fact that the weather was very unpleasant and the roads practically impassable.

The meeting was held in the town hall, but the room was entirely to small to hold the audience. F. A. Morrison of this town and Conservative candidate against W. H. White in the last election was chairman. Before the meeting opened an address of welcome from the town council at Vegreville on behalf of the citizens was read by Mayor Goodwin to which Mr. Borden replied in appropriate terms, thanking the citizens for their welcome and wishing them the very best success and prosperity. An address was also read by Mr McElroy of Fort Saskatchewan on behalf of the Fort Conservative association assuring him of their confidence in him and in his policy, and endorsing his stand on the question of reciprocity. Dr. Roche was the first speaker. He began by stating that the reciprocity pact was agreed upon by Laurier without a mandate from the people of Canada. The farmers last year appealed to him asking for a reduction of the tariff on agricultural implements, cement and woolen goods. They did not ask him for reciprocity and not until the western delegation reached Ottawa in December was the question brought before the public. Laurier promised when in the West that before he would disturb the tariff he would appoint a commission to investigate. He has not kept his word. Taft asked for reciprocity and Laurier acquiesced. If Laurier desired to give reciprocity in agricultural implements he could have done so by taking advantage of a statute in force in the United States for a number of years. Dr. Roche could not see where the pact could work to the advantage of the farmer. The prices of horses, cattle and other farm products were higher in Canada than in the United States. That was admitted by the document issued under the authority of the Congress of the United States. As to wheat prices they were very often and are now higher in Winnipeg than in either Chicago or Minneapolis. Liverpool fixes the prices for Canada as well as the United States. If we pool our wheat with that of the United States we stand to get the same price as they do, and we shall have to pay the middleman's profit and extra haulage. We consume 80 per cent of our agricultural products in the home markets. If the agreement passes we expose the 20 per cent to the competition of the United States and the 12 favored nations, any one of which can send their products in here free of duty but we have to pay duty in order to get into their markets. He thought we should endeavor to get into the Liverpool market the cheapest and most expeditious manner. For that purpose Mr. Borden was pledged to build and equip the Hudson Bay Railway as a government owned and operated railway. Mr. Borden, he pointed out, endorsed all the demands made of him by the farmers with the single exception of reciprocity and he opposed that because he was convinced it would work out to disadvantage of the people of this country.

Mr. Borden was well received when he arose to speak. He pledged himself and his party

Missed $1250.00 Auto by 4 Wheat Kernels

A. Fox of Town Came Within Ace of Sporting a Car

The competition put up by the Advocate and Thresherman of Winnipeg has closed and A. Fox, of town, just missed landing land ing the first prize a $1250.00 automobile. Competitors were to give the number of kernels in a 1 1/4 sack of No. 2 Northern wheat. Mr. Fox secured the [illegible] [illegible] from Jos. Robertson and made the count of 174,999 kernels, the winner a farmer in Saskatchewan came the nearest to the correct number with a count of 174,996, the correct number being 174,990. As it is Mr. Fox won second prize in the big competition and got a chest of carpenter's tools.

CUT FELT WORK

A NEW handicraft has arisen. Cut felt work, an art applicable to such household articles as bureau scarfs, pillow covers and tablecloths is an art, one which is bound to become popular by its easiness of method and its beauty of appearance.

A felt heavier than usual, and known technically as "32 ounce," must be procured. Sometimes it can be obtained ready cut in squares, circles and ovals, but it is easy enough, with knife or scissors, to cut it yourself to the size and shape desired. Get a felt of some rather light or bright color.

Now with a broad brush wash one side of the felt with dye in any sharply contrasting and yet harmonious shade. Combinations with black are always pretty. After this is dry, draw with a hard pencil the design you wish to cut out. Broad, conventional effects are best without very narrow lines or minute interlacings.

With a sharp penknife next cut out either the design itself or the background, as you prefer, being careful to cut only deep enough to expose the other color, and to cut everywhere with equal depth. Ragged edges may be trimmed off afterward.

If you wish a further color contrast, you may either touch up portions of your design or dye again and re at its other places. The former method is, however, the safer of the two.

Finally place a sheet of muslin over your felt and iron with a hot and very heavy iron, so as to give an absolutely smooth surface. The final effect is very much like applique work, but heavier.

It is well for the amateur to practice first on an old piece of felt until the proper results can be obtained. The two dangers are a wet dye which will sink too deeply into the felt, and a slip of the knife nearly or altogether through it. The work is, however, very easy, as I have said and the final effect is quite stunning.

It is a timely suggestion for the fast approaching gift season and provides pleasant work for leisure hours.

The special conveying R. L. Borden and party made a short stop at Vermilion enroute to Lloydminster Thursday last. Quite a crowd congregated at the depot and when the opposition leader appeared he was lustily cheered. Beyond a few words expressive of pleasure and evidence of growth witnessed on all sides, Mr. Borden did not make any speech. There was no further speaking here. Several members of the party as well as Mr. Borden exchanged personal greetings with the crowd in which manner the time was whirled away until the special departed.

ANDERSON-WILSON

A quiet, but interesting event occurred at the home of Mr. & Mrs. Curtis H. Wilson Wednesday evening, July 5th., when Mr. Wilson's sister, Flora Estella, a teacher for the past year in the Alexandra school, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Leslie Anderson of Digby, Nova Scotia, by Rev. Mr. Tyner, pastor of the Baptist church.

The bride, who was unattended, looked very charming in an Empire gown of white silk.

After a midnight supper was served, the happy young couple left on the eastbound express for Digby, where they will reside.

Two Letters

Nothing of Which Was Ever Posted

By Ethan Armour Buche

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911

It may seem paradoxical, but there is nothing more dreary than a beautiful morning when one carries a load on his heart. I had left Adele the night before, she having told me that she honored and respected me, but would not marry me. And now I was walking on the road to the village to post a letter accepting an offer my uncle, who was in the tea trade, had made me of a position in his counting room at Hongkong. The beauty of an opening spring marked me. The warm sunshine, the sprouting leaves, that delicate pale tone Nature was putting on, contrasted painfully with the loss of the girl I loved and from whom I was about to permanently separate myself by going to live in a barbarous land. A robin on a limb of a tree, cocking his head on one side, looked at me, seeming to smile and say at the same time, "Poor fellow!" A chipmunk sat up on the top rail of a fence eying me suspiciously, and somehow he seemed to be saying to me incongruously, "Cheer up, cheer up! You'll fare better next time."

I knew very well why Adele had refused me. It was all on account of Wilmarth. He had come on to the field not more than a month before with that air of superiority some men always carry about them—an air of intellectual supremacy. When one expressed an opinion in his presence he would put on a look as much as to say, "My dear fellow, I have long ago solved that problem, but you—why, it ...

... future level," I said gloomily. "You haven't asked me to whom my letter has been written."

"It would not be polite to do so."

"It is to my uncle, accepting the position he has offered me. I sail next week for China."

The announcement didn't seem to bring the slightest [illegible] to her; at least she gave evidence of none.

"They're letting the water out of the lock now," she remarked.

"I have given my promise to remain in China five years before returning to America, and then only to stay a few months."

"Now they're going to open the gates."

This was maddening. Yet I was angry only with myself. Could there be anything more pusillanimous than for a man refused to attempt in this maudlin fashion to excite sympathy in the girl who had refused him?

"Since this is to be our last meeting for years, perhaps forever, I ask you to permit me to do something for you, a little favor, a trifle. I wish to remember it in connection with this parting."

"What is it?" she asked.

"Permit me to take that letter to the mail for you. I promise you I will not look at the address."

"Oh, there's no hurry about posting it, it will keep."

What could be more self sacrificing than for me, having received my quietus from Adele, to post her letter accepting Wilmarth? It would be typical, of course, but lovers like things typical rather than real.

"Why should there be delay?" I asked.

She did not notice the question. She was evidently intent upon the canal boat, which was now floating out into the open basin.

"Come," I said, "why should you delay posting your letter to Mr. Wilmarth?"

It had come out in spite of me. She turned and brought her big, honest, surprised eyes to bear on me.

"Pardon," I stammered. "I have no right to assume to whom your letter is written."

Aged Duke of Grafton Directed the Fire-Fighters Himself.

The Duke of Grafton, who has been seriously ill, is in his ninetieth year. His grace is a hon. equerry to the King, and served in the Crimea with the Coldstream Guards, being severely wounded at Inkerman. For many years past the duke has made his home at Wakefield Lodge, Pouny Stratford, the family seat in Suffolk, Euston Hall, having been burnt down some years ago. His grace has spent a great deal of money on repairing the ravages of the fire, but the new building even when completed, will lack much of the charm of the old red-brick mansion which was an exceptionally fine specimen of seventeenth century architecture.

Euston was built by Henry, Earl of Arlington, who according to Evelyn "had no expensive vice but building, and to have all things rich, polite, and princely." The duke has been singularly unfortunate in the matter of fires, for not so very long ago there was an outbreak at Wakefield Lodge on which occasion, by the way, his grace gave a wonderful display of activity by directing the subduing of the flames from the top of a high ladder which he scaled in order the more effectively to direct the work.

The duke likes a good story, and the following will be appreciated:

The bucolic audience assembled in the village schoolroom rattled their hobnailed boots upon the boarded floor to welcome the gentleman with the well-fed appearance, who had motored over from the nearest town to deliver his lecture, "The art of getting on."

He "made good" for about an hour, and concluded with the fine peroration, "The successful man is the man who strives persistently. His motto is 'Push and keep pushing', for by that alone does he reach his goal."

Applause seemed to hang fire, and a small man at the back gave vent to a laugh that might have come from a megaphone.

The lecturer held up his hand for silence. "You, too, my friend, will have to push," he commenced.

"So will you, I reckon," interrupted ...

Sir Walter Gilbey Has a Reputation in the Swiss Mountains.

Sir Walter Gilbey has celebrated his eightieth birthday at Elsenham Hall, Essex, England, surrounded by his family, grandchildren, and other relatives and friends. The village was gaily decorated with flags, peals were rung on the church bells, and various presentations were made on behalf of the tenantry, friends, and neighbors. Sir Walter is a living contradiction to the saying that a rolling stone gathers no moss, for he has gathered much moss and had tried many things, from a clerkship at under a pound a week in an estate agent's office to service in the Army Pay Department in the Crimea, before joining his brother in the modest wine and spirit venture, which his business-like methods have since converted into one of the most gigantic concerns of its kind in the kingdom.

Despite his age, Sir Walter is still wonderfully hale and hearty. This estimable condition he attributes to life in the open. He is still as keenly interested in horses as he was a quarter of a century ago. It was he who was mainly responsible for the London Cart-horse Parade, an event which every Whit Monday Sir Walter never fails to attend.

In appearance, Sir Walter Gilbey presents a striking contrast to the average prosperous merchant-prince and scientific agriculturist. In dress and general bearing he still clings to the mid-Victorian style. His frilled shirt, with a small white cambric tie and a high stiff collar, a buff waistcoat, and closely-fitting drab box-cloth trousers, were familiar features in clubland. When out walking he invariably carries a large black-rimmed monocle, and a little ash stick cut from the hedge and utterly innocent of ornament or ferrule.

In his early days Sir Walter used to devote some portion of every year to mountain climbing. While in Switzerland he once had a somewhat weird experience. He was about to make an ascent when he thought that he might as well make some inquiries about the guide who was to accompany him.

"Is he a thoroughly skilful climber?" he asked his hotel-keeper.

Ways in Which the Stripes on the Sleeve of a Naval Officer.

It is safe to say that of the tens of thousands who will witness the Naval Review on June 26th at Spithead very few will be able to distinguish an admiral from a commander, or an engineer-lieutenant from a fleet paymaster, and yet to the initiated it is the simplest thing in the world. Odd glance at the sleeve of his coat is sufficient for the well-informed, for, whereas the army officer carries the insignia of his rank on his shoulder, the naval officer carries his in gold stripes extending round the sleeve.

Naval officers comprise the executive or military branch, and the engineering, medical, and accountant branches. Whereas the executive officer is always recognized by the uppermost stripe on his arm being extended into a small circle of gold lace above it, all the stripes of the other branches go straight round the sleeve, and in addition have a distinctive colored cloth between the stripes. Thus the engineer officer always has purple cloth between the stripes, the medical officer always has red, and the accountant officer has white, so the observer can at once see to what branch an officer belongs.

As regards rank, the number of stripes will tell him. Two striped indicate a lieutenant, an engineer-lieutenant, a surgeon, or a paymaster—always having regard to the gold circle on the uppermost stripe for the lieutenant, or the purple, red or white cloth between the stripes, and no circle, for the other branches. Three stripes, of which the middle one is only half the thickness of the other two, indicate a senior lieutenant or senior engineer, a staff-surgeon, or a staff-paymaster, while three stripes all of the same thickness denote a commander, a fleet-surgeon, or a fleet-paymaster.

A captain has four stripes. Officers of admiral's rank have always one broad gold stripe nearest the cuff, and from one to four thinner gold stripes above it. Thus, a rear-admiral has the broad stripe and one stripe above it, a vice-admiral has two above, an admiral has three, while an admiral of the fleet—of whom there are only five on the active list, one of whom ...

GOLDEN THOUGHTS

Genius without taste will often commit enormous errors and, what is worse, it will not be sensible of them.

Obedience is a habit, and must be learned like all other habits ...

Let us not envy some men their accumulated riches; their burden would be too heavy for us. We could not sacrifice as they do, health, honor, quiet and conscience to obtain them. It is to pay so dear for them that the bargain is a loss.

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people and the old are hungrier for love than for bread. The oil of joy is very cheap and if you can help the poor on with a garment of praise it will be better for them than blankets.

... sharply for their absence.—R. L. Stevenson.

No other fly killer compares with Wilson's Fly Pads.

The returns from growing pigs are so quick that it pays to practise intelligent and up-to-date methods.

No man is fit for good society who does not help society to goodness.

AS TO THE BACHELOR

As to the bachelor, why doesn't he get married? Is his heart broken? Not a bit of it; there is no such thing as a broken and heart and never was; it is all delusion. He doesn't marry because he has never found just the right kind of a girl. He has been looking for one for a long time and what is more is still. But he is a particular creature and he isn't going to take just anyone for the title of a married man. He realizes that marriage is one of the best things in life—if it is a good one—but he also realizes that it can be one of the worst tragedies if not favorable. Life is pretty good to him just the way it is and he isn't going to turn the tide. He is still watching and when a girl comes along with brains, a clever girl, one who is pretty, one with his tastes and ideas, then he will send you his announcement cards, but not before.

Then there is another type. Why doesn't he marry? He is such a suitable chap, not at all particular. He is waiting. Waiting for what? For money. Do you think he wants a woman to help him pinch along and save up for him? When he marries he wants his wife to have every comfort, every luxury, all there is in life. She shall have a fine home, servants, automobiles, everything. She shall have no worries no cares. Not until he can offer these will he marry. He asks no girl to wait for him, it might be too long. He wishes to spoil no one's career. When he is ready he will not be hard to please, but until then he will be content with his work.

If allowed to roam over your house those few innocent looking house-flies may cause a real tragedy any day as they are known to be the principal agents for the spread of those deadly diseases, typhoid fever, diphtheria and smallpox.

The argument in favor of the dairy Short horn cow needs not to be stated at great length, but it is, I think, convincing. To me it appears to be as follows:

She is the real short Horn cow. It is well known that from the earliest history of the breed the Short Horns have been great milkers and the efforts of the earlier breeders who by careful selection and good care of the animals evolved the type of pure-bred cattle and furnished the original entries in the herd book, were adopted principally to improving cattle already known to be deep milkers. ...

For the average farmer the foregoing argument is conclusive, that it is so can easily be proved by an appeal to the experience of any extensive dealer in cows extending over a long period of years. ...

NEARLY DIED OF STONE IN THE BLADDER

GIN PILLS SAVED HIM

413 James St., Hamilton, Ont.

"Five years ago I was taken down with what the doctors called inflammation of the bladder—intense pains in the back and loins and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks which became more frequent amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

"My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and strong, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me." John Hernan.

AID TO HORSE OWNERS

During recent years many appeals have been made to the Hon. Sydney Fisher, minister of agriculture, by horse men anxious to bring about an improvement in the quality of our light horse stock and who are [illegible] for [illegible] infusion of thoroughbred blood is essential. Recognizing the force of these appeals as well as the importance of the [illegible], Mr. Fisher has decided to grant assistance under certain special conditions to persons maintaining thoroughbred stallions for service in the various provinces.

In deciding upon this step the minister has been largely influenced by the fact that while stallions of other recognized breeds, when in capable hands, are as a rule fairly profitable [illegible] with regard to the thoroughbred, the advantages of breeding to horses of this class being unfortunately not fully realized by the present generation of Canadian farmers.

The lack in our [illegible] horses of the quality derivable [illegible] from the infusion of thorough[bred] blood is the subject of [illegible] comment by all European horse [illegible] who visit the Dominion [illegible] to investigating [illegible] whether [illegible] purpose or for ordinary [illegible]. In this connection [illegible] The [illegible] blood.

The [illegible] as follows:

(1) [illegible] department, [illegible] in the Thoroughbred [illegible] of the Canadian National [illegible] Stock records.

(2) Horses [illegible] sound size quality and [illegible] shall be free from [illegible] unsoundness, [illegible] to be examined [illegible] a thorough [illegible] either at the [illegible] veterinary director general [illegible] other members of the veterinary staff of the department, or other persons as the minister may from time to time appoint for this purpose.

(3) Horses so approved shall be duly and properly advertised to stand for service of mares, under the ordinary and general conditions usual in the districts in which they are to be kept, at an annual service fee (except in case of thoroughbred mares) of not more than $15 to insure, such service fees to become due and payable only when mares prove to be in foal.

Any person, firm or corporation owning or controlling any thoroughbred stallion in regard to which all of the conditions above set forth shall have been duly and properly fulfilled, shall, on production of satisfactory evidence thereof and of the fact that a reasonable number of mares, other than thoroughbred mares, have been served during the season, be entitled to receive at the close of each such season the sum of $250 from the funds of the live stock branch. If in the event of a horse dying or becoming [illegible] for service during the season, an approved substitute is immediately placed in the same district, the minister may after due consideration of the circumstances, authorize the payment of the subsidy above mentioned.

The necessary forms will be furnished on application to the veterinary director general and live stock commissioner, department of agriculture, Ottawa.

Canadian Northern Railway Will Complete 550 Miles of Railway in Alberta this Year

Under charters granted to the Canadian Northern Railway company 550 miles of railway will be constructed in Alberta during 1911. [illegible] will be commenced.

Between 650 and 700 teams are at work in connection with the various outfits on the main line toward the mountains. The 100 miles of grade is under contract to James O'Connor, J. D. McArthur and McMillan Bros. and Kenny.

O'Connor's contract [illegible] the 70 miles farthest west on the stretch. He has [illegible] teams at work. McArthur who is constructing the grade between the Pembina and Carrot river has [illegible] teams at work, and McMillan Bros. & Kenny, who are building the grade west of St. Albert [illegible] the Pembina [illegible] on their contract. It is estimated [illegible]

[illegible]

It is expected that steel will reach Athabasca Landing early next September. Under the construction of the smaller bridges on the main line west of St. Albert will be hauled to the bridge sites by teams, and construction work on the bridges will be proceeded with as soon as possible so that when steel laying commences on the line it can be carried forward without delay.

WANT CANADIAN WHEAT FOR EXPORT

United States has Surplus Production Get Our Superior Quality

Canada Also Needs Wheat

Such prophecies as James J. Hill has made in regard to expecting the United States as almost as the Dominion of Canada to produce wheat for bakings, when the actual agricultural figures of the United States are considered. Those people in James J. Hill's class serve to temporarily stop it want Canadian wheat for milling and better prices and bonuses are wheat from Canada has a

In dissipated, nervous people, such as can endure suffering that cause a shadow over half her existence. A aching back tired limbs attacks of and headaches and backaches need not be a part of a woman's life. Such trifles indicate plainly that the system requires the new blood which is supplied by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills make new, rich blood, and thus drive out the poisons which cause pain. They have cured them above all other medicines. Mrs. Daniel Ward, who lives with her husband, Pedlar Point, Man., says: "I can give Pink Pills the credit for saving my life. I suffered terribly before I began taking them. I had a bad cough, and the doctor said I was in a decline. I was very weak from stomach trouble and could get no rest day or night. I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and before I had used the first box I felt that they were helping me. I continued to use them for about three months, and by that time I was entirely cured. I am now in the best of health, and can do my housework without any trouble. I am sure that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life, and I feel that I cannot say too much in their favor."

You can get these Pills through any dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LOW PRICES IN THE STATES

Markets Go Farm Produce on the Down Grade

There has been a decided recession in the values of farm products and other commodities in the United States, as shown by the index figures compiled by the Bureau of Labor, which make the high cost of living in the form of semi-monthly reports to the Department of Commerce at Washington. The Pioneer Line of the Paul Mierotz recently published the following table which shows prices of various commodities in April, 1910 and April, 1911.

	1910	1911
Cornmeal, per bush.	1.21	1.31
Lard, per lb.	.16	12½-15
Potatoes	.60	1.00-1.25
Chicks' nest, per crate	2.50	1.90
Hens' wheels	.14½	.11½
Bacon	.16½	.14
Flour (best) per bbl.	4.60	5.00
Eggs	.22	15-18
Butter (best grades)	23-25	.28
Cheese	.15	.20
Sirloin steak	.22	.20
Porterhouse	.25	.20

The above statement combined with the recent proclamation of Hon. Mitchell Cudahy, foreman of United States Packers, that Scott, Dunn would be the next sensation at Chicago, seems to point into depth to an era of low prices across the line for every thing that the farmer has to sell in comparison with the United States according to those facts which go to show that Canada is farther into a country where the farmer is demoralized and markets are falling.

DEBASING MOTIVE OF WORSHIP

Religion has little importance to the average worship of its objects. The great idea of God has become dwarfed in the mind, cash declines, hero and fears and often an abnormal fear, and the object of prayer has remained. Kipling in a recent poem, "Recessional," is the spirit of suffering, and peculiarly struck it. Kipling's poem is a prayer that God has been given to the nations, not to the masses, treasures, but to the few. He has left a heritage of sorrow to the masses, to suppress the wrath and to humble them, and they always pray to Him in their hour of need. Their worship is not spiritually speaking, to edify but to debase—to make them feel their own littleness.

THOUGHTS

The best preparation for the future is the present well seen to the last duty and deed.

An idle brain is the savage guard of all vice.

The truly great is one in whom all mankind is confident that nothing small can enter.

Let us rejoice in what is beautiful, in what is magnificent, and in what is great, and let us not be ashamed to show that we rejoice.

You need, now and then, men who have the wisdom to listen without being wise, who are not embarrassed, they are the pick of the world.

Those who yield not a feather of wisdom for some amount of mumbling strength.

Not during the irrevocable past Make thy moan, fool, while it flies, It comes on to upsets at last To something fleeter—alas!

—Longfellow

TAFT'S CONCLUSION

Farmers Shall Get Share to Canada Than They Will Buy

The Taft conclusion that the farmers of the United States have been robbed by the tariff for the benefit of the manufacturers of the Republican party, was announced at Washington just now at a meeting of the Republican leaders.

"I believe this treaty to be the best thing for the farmers that has been done," the farmers many years," declared Taft, and all Canada will be benefited in the face of Providence, to get an outlet for its products, and this country and Canada and not get the benefit that will be derived from the same traditions the same language and practically the same character of ideas. If we could, as we shall not, have free trade with Canada, we would not have free trade in Canada as we do. We do have free trade in Canada, and we never have had free trade in the United States. This is the first step in the direction of reciprocity—I am moved to say the first step in the direction of free trade.

CHANGING A QUARTER.

What You May Do With a Twenty-five Cent Piece in Tangier.

The traveler who goes ashore at Tangier is likely if he wanders about aimlessly to meet himself coming back to the same starting place. He's curiously postal cards may be mailed at four separate postoffices, with different stamps on each. Or, writes [illegible] E. A. Forbes in "The Land of the White Helmet," at a British hotel he may exchange French money for Spanish postage and mail his letter in a German postoffice. But he may not put British, French, German and Spanish stamps on the same letter, for that might lead to international complications.

He may also do coin tricks equal to those of the prestidigitators. Let him take an American quarter dollar and exchange it for English money. He now has a shilling and a ha'penny over.

He may exchange the shilling for a French franc and receive 20 or 40 centimes in change. The franc may be traded for a Spanish peseta, plus 20 centimes in copper. The Spanish peseta may now be converted into a Moorish peseta, "hassani," with a handful of copper to boot.

He now has his pockets weighted down with English, French, Spanish and Moorish copper, yet he can buy just as much from a Moor with his hassani peseta as he could have bought with his original quarter.

In a thoughtless moment one day I held out a hassani peseta to the American vice consul general at Tangier and asked him how much it was worth.

"A hassani peseta," he replied glibly, "is worth ten dhirems or twenty half dhirems."

"And twenty half dhirems equal"—

"Two or three cents less than a Spanish peseta," he answered. "But you must remember that the valuation of Moorish silver fluctuates from day to day; at times it is officially worth only a third of its face value."

"Today is Thursday," I said in desperation. "The hour is 1:45 p. m. Would you mind telling me how much this hassani is worth in American [illegible]"

"I'll figure it all out for you," he [illegible]

At 2:30 he was still figuring, so I crept softly out and wandered into a Moorish tea house. There I spent the hassani in riotous living.

PICKED THE RICH PLACE.

Vancouver Man Forecasted the Wealth of the Canadian Yukon.

Belief has been general that the discovery of gold in the Yukon district of Canada was the result of an accident, as in the case in most great finds in mineral.

The story of John McDougall, of Vancouver, shows that the finding of gold at Dawson was the outcome of observation following a working out of gold location theories in the Cariboo district of British Columbia. Circumstances deemed important at the time prevented him from making the trip into the Yukon. Had he carried out his original intention he might not only have made the discovery, but much money besides. Mr. McDougall has resided on the Pacific coast thirty years, and is a successful contractor in Vancouver.

The early 90's on the Pacific coast were very dull. In the later months of 1894 McDougall, finding that little was doing, decided to venture into the [illegible] territory. [illegible] tales of gold finds came from time to time. On the boat were Dan Hart and John Guise, with whom he formed a partnership.

On the same boat was William B. Lansing, a prospector from Montana, who had gone north in 1886 and had struck gold up the Stewart River. Lansing told him of the working of French-Canadians at the head of Sixty Mile and at the head of Forty Mile, these two creeks coming almost together at their sources.

When he was told by Lansing that the workings on the Stewart were two hundred miles in a south-easterly direction from the head of the Forty Mile, he became interested at once. Remembering his other observation in Cariboo, that the best ground lay just north of the highest elevation, he inquired if there was any height of land on the line between these two points. Lansing replied there was a place known throughout the country as the "Moose Pasture," located approximately half way.

McDougall was more interested than ever. He got Lansing to draw on the billiard table in the Occidental Hotel at Juneau a rough map of the Yukon River, with its tributaries, the Stewart, the Forty Mile, and the Sixty Mile. This showed the Moose Pasture close to what was then known as Reindeer Creek, and almost on the Yukon River.

"When we go in," McDougall said to his partners, "we will prospect there"—drawing a semicircle on the north side of the Moose Pasture. It is a remarkable fact that this semicircle included the best paying ground of the late Yukon discoveries.

Is Your Loaf Like This?

If your flour is of the right quality, it ought to produce uniformly good bread. When the loaf comes out of the oven it ought to be appetizing and inviting in appearance. The crust should be crisp, tender and sweet as a nut. The pores of the bread should be regular showing uniform expansion by the yeast and every loaf should be light, plump and should expand over the top of the pan. Bread made from Ogilvie's always comes up to the highest standard of excellence when made right. It is always uniform, and good to look at as well as good to eat.

Summer and winter, day after day, month after month, "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" is milled by exactly the same process from exactly the same standard uniform grade of the best Red Fyfe wheat. And this uniformity is guaranteed by rigid safeguarding tests at the mills before the flour is shipped. Get ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR from your grocer and stick to it.

NOW OR NEVER THEIR SLOGAN

American Speakers and Writers Say, We Must Get Reciprocity Now or Give it up Forever

"Now or Never" [illegible] slogan of the Reciprocity [illegible] of the United States. President Taft expresses [illegible] in his famous speech to the New York newspapermen when he said: "The forces that are at work in England and Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States and to make her part of an imperial commercial band reaching from England around the world to England again by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity with all the advantages that I have described, and that earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it up now or give it up forever."

Since President Taft has spoken many others have reiterated his words. The Boston Commercial Bulletin declares:—

"As Canada is undoubtedly destined to make as big industrial strides in the future as in the past decade it is evident that with the lapse of time she will become less and less desirous of renewing negotiations with the United States. The time therefore has come for us to strike. Shall we let the opportunity pass?"

Commenting on this utterance The American Economist observes:—

"This is another way of saying that if we are going to cheat Canada in a Free Trade reciprocity dicker we had best do it right now, because, if we wait too long Canada will get her eyes opened and refuse to be cheated. Is this fair or decent or is it a mere demonstration of Yankee smartness? The Canadians are not fools. They have developed their industries under a protective tariff and now have an industrial future. The time for us to strike passed long ago."

Going further west we find The Minneapolis Journal echoing Mr. Taft's New York speech in this fashion:—

"The Taft policy spells not only North American commercial union but also the doom of the British imperialistic unity. Too late provided Congress acts, the British are awakening to the value of the prize they so famously rejected. Too late, if Congress rises to a level with this, perhaps the greatest piece of statesmanship effected by an American President since Thomas Jefferson annexed the west. Today England is our best customer and Canada our third best. [illegible] our foreign trade wanes and that of Canada grows. If we push Canada into England's arms the trade arrangements between the two will tend more and more to shut us out."

FANNIE WOOD'S POULTRY TALK

Every season teaches us some lesson that would be profitable to us for [illegible]

As the season [illegible] cleaning and [illegible] of brooders and brood [illegible] are very important.

A spray pump is a big help in controlling the lice pest.

Shelters [illegible] chicks to take refuge under when a sudden rain comes will save many a little peeper.

A flat stone on light brood coops will prevent them from being upset during a windstorm. The old mother hen has troubles enough without having her home turned over or the roof blown off.

Better shut up the brood coops at night: you will sleep better. No telling when a rat or weasel will pay an unexpected visit.

Of course the young poultry must be kept free from lice and mites but we must be careful in the use of remedies or the chicks may be killed.

A little lard on the head and on the wings of the chick or turkey [illegible] the lice, but too much grease is absolutely fatal. Never grease the heads of young turkeys with [illegible]

Young turkeys can not stand confinement in close coops. They must have plenty of air and the coops should be moved to a fresh spot every few days.

Common sense [illegible] is a big help in getting us through the hard places in the chick business.

The difficulties of poultry work at this time are overcome by the [illegible] and pleasure in watching the different broods grow and develop.

The true lover of fowls enjoys looking after the comfort of the growing chicks. The one who cares so little for poultry that the work seems irksome is surely lacking in one of the elements needed to enable him to reach the top notch in poultry culture.

CUMMINGS

Miss Aleyn of Edmonton, is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. Edward of this district, to recoup after a severe illness.

On Wednesday, 12th July, some of our Valley people took a day off and started for the Battle river for a day's fishing and outing. Among those who went where our two resident Messrs Black and Arnold, the Misses Brown, Mr. & Mrs. Edwards and their guests, Mr. & Mrs. Winterguille, Mesdames Morrison and Stone and Ethel and Mack Falconer. Messrs. Black and Elward were the only ones who were favored by the fish but they were go-getters and shared up so we could say that we had some fish.

On July 5th our annual picnic was held on Mr. Davis' farm. A program of sports was provided, afterwards during by the young men, women and children. Those who won prizes were, Mr. Black, Miss Nan Pringle, Miss E. Curry, Miss Ethel Morrison and Miss Hyrum three dozen eggs and also a cake was awarded. Miss Curry won 2 races, it pays to enroll and also the big ones race.

W. Seal won the horse race and it was this race which terminated what otherwise would have been a pleasant day, Mr. Samuelson being three feet from his horse against a wagon wheel breaking one of his ribs.

Town of Vermilion

BY-LAW NO. 80

A. By Law of the Municipality of the Town of Vermilion in the Province of Alberta to authorize the issue of debentures for the sum of $2,000.00 for the purpose of making permanent improvements to highways, including the construction of side walks in the said town.

WHEREAS it is desirable to make permanent improvements in the highways and construct permanent side walks in the said town of Vermilion.

AND WHEREAS it will be necessary to borrow the sum of $2,000.00 for the purpose aforesaid and to issue debentures of the Municipality therefor, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum payable yearly, which is the amount of the debt intended to be created by this by law.

AND WHEREAS the amount of the whole rateable property of the said Municipality according to the last revised Assessment Roll thereof is the sum of $[illegible].

AND WHEREAS the amount of the existing debenture debt of the said Municipality, outside of the debt due for current expenses of the year is the sum of $31,100.00 and no part of either the principal or interest is in arrear.

AND WHEREAS it is desirable to make the principal of the said debt repayable by twenty annual instalments of such amounts respectively that the aggregate instalments of principal and interest shall be equal in each year during the period of twenty years next after the day on which this by-law takes effect as hereinafter provided.

AND WHEREAS it will be necessary to raise annually in each year for the period of twenty years during the currency of the debentures to be issued under this by law a sum sufficient to pay the several instalments of interest and principal and interest upon the principal from time to time remaining unpaid on the said debentures.

NOW THEREFORE THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF THE TOWN OF VERMILION ENACT AS FOLLOWS

1—It will be lawful for the Mayor of the said Municipality of the Town of Vermilion to borrow on the credit of the said Municipality the sum of two thousand dollars for the purpose aforesaid and to issue a debenture or debentures of the Municipality for the sum of $2000.00 in sums of not less than $100.00 each and payable in twenty equal yearly aggregate instalments of principal and interest, which said debenture or debentures shall have coupons attached thereto for the payments of annual instalments of principal and interest thereon from time to time falling due.

2—The said debenture or debentures shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable yearly and as to both principal and interest may be payable in any place in Great Britain or Canada in sterling money or Canadian Currency.

3—The Mayor of the said Municipality shall sign and issue the said debenture or debentures and shall cause the same and the coupons to be signed by the Secretary Treasurer of the said Municipality and the said Secretary Treasurer is hereby authorized and instructed to attach the Corporate Seal of the said Municipality to the said debenture or debentures.

4—The said debenture or debentures shall be dated the 1st., day of September 1911 and shall be payable in twenty aggregate annual instalments of principal and interest on the 1st day of September in each and every of the years from 1912 to 1931, inclusive, in such manner that each instalment of principal and interest shall be equal in each and every of the said years.

5 During the currency of the said debenture or debentures there shall be raised annually by a special municipal rate on all the rateable property in the said Municipality, in the same manner as the ordinary general municipal taxes, a sum sufficient to meet the annual instalment of principal and interest payable in each year in respect of said debenture or debentures.

6 This by law shall come into force and take effect on the 1st., day of September 1911.

7 That the votes of the electors of the said Municipality qualified to vote on the by law shall be taken on Saturday the 12th day of August 1911 commencing at nine o'clock in the fore-noon and continuing until five o'clock in the afternoon at the Town Hall in the said Town of Vermilion by Chas. V. Caesar, Secretary Treasurer of the said town who is hereby named and appointed the Returning Officer for taking the said vote.

8—That on Friday the 11th day of Aug. 1911, at the hour of nine o'clock (9) in the fore noon at the office of the Secretary Treasurer of the said town on Main Street the Mayor shall on application of any person interested in promoting or opposing the passing of this by-law appoint in writing one person to attend the final summing up of the votes by the said Returning Officer and one person to attend the poll on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of promoting the passing of this by-law and one person desirous of opposing the passing of this by-law.

9—That the Returning Officer shall attend at the said Town Hall in the said town of Vermilion at 12 o'clock noon on Monday the 14th, day of August 1911, and shall there sum up the number of votes given for and against this by-law.

Read a first and second time and passed provisionally and carried in council this 17th day of July 1911.

Edmonton Business Men at Vermilion

The special train carrying the Edmonton business men, stopped at Vermilion Wednesday noon on the return trip from Lloydminster.

The party was met at the station by members of the Board of Trade and citizens generally.

An address of welcome was tendered the visitors by Mayor Dunsmore, which was replied to by W. A. Griesbach. The party were then taken on an auto trip around the town and country. They were well pleased with the prospects of the place in general.

Vermilion was the first place on the trip that the party were met by automobiles. They were delighted with the reception given them.

The banns were published in the Anglican church last Sunday, of Miss Flo Mace and E. Deltombe. The wedding will take place in August.

H. N. Stephens, of Stephens Limited, was in Edmonton this week on business.

Animal Superstitions.

There are many animals that the superstitious consider it unlucky to kill. Among them may be mentioned a lady-bird, a martin, a robin, a stork and a money spider, while to kill a wren means that you will break a bone before the year is out. Many animals are also supposed to herald death, and superstitions in this direction are so numerous that only a few can be mentioned here. The most commonly known is the clicking or tapping of the beetle called a death watch, which is reckoned as an omen of death to some one in the house.

The howling of a dog at night near a house is supposed to predict the death of a sick inmate, as also the settling of a white pigeon on a house bodes death to some one in the house, while, again, an old saying among the superstitious runs, "No person can die on a bed or pillow containing the feathers of a white pigeon."

That the gnawing of furniture by rats presages death is also a common superstition. To meet certain animals is considered lucky, while to meet others is the reverse. For instance, to meet a sow with a litter of pigs is very lucky, but it is unlucky if a sow crosses a traveler's path. To meet a weasel is lucky, but should a hare run across the road in front of you it augurs bad fortune.

[illegible] the Bottle Too Quickly.

Will Low, the painter, told a story of the Latin quarter days of Robert Louis Stevenson. Low and Stevenson were great friends in their youth. Their friendship indeed continued up to the time of the writer's death.

"Louis," said the artist, "was no less diplomatic than brave. He could be fiery, and he could also be gracious and pacific. One night, I remember, we sat in a garden in Montmartre. The red wine had been flowing pretty freely, and one of our party got heated and aggressive.

"Finally some one said a thing that this fighting chap disliked. As soon as the words were spoken he grabbed up a bottle and hurled it at the other's head. It was a strong, true shot and would have hit the mark had not Stevenson sprung to his feet and caught the missile.

"'Tut, tut, George,' he said to the thrower; 'tut, tut. If the bottle is passed so quickly, none of us will be able to stand out the evening.'"

Reason to Be Happy.

What is the use of being at odds with the world? What is the use of being blue and despondent? The world is full of trials for us all—has plenty of trouble and worry to hand out even to the best of us from time to time. But there would be no need for men and women—we could all be babes—if there were no great life problems to solve, no burdens to bear, no sorrows to live down. These are the balance wheels of life. They are the trials we have to face in order to strengthen us and broaden us to the opportunities and the real happiness that riches [illegible] not command nor poverty bar.

The Butler Was in Doubt.

The recent St. Andrew's dinners, according to the Westminster Gazette, have been noteworthy for the profusion of Scotch stories, which in several cases fairly set the tables in a roar. Some of them have an ancient ring, but there is one that is perhaps not generally known. A doctor was attending a dangerous case where a Scotch butler was engaged. On calling in the forenoon he said to Donald, "I hope your master's temperature is much lower today than it was last night." "I'm [illegible] sae very sure about that," replied the butler, "for he dee'd this morning."

An Authority.

Peter McArthur was once talking with a friend when he quoted another man as a financial authority. His friend disputed the right of the person quoted to be considered an expert. Mr. McArthur insisted that the man had a right to speak like an oracle.

"What is your definition of an authority?" [illegible]

"My idea of an authority," retorted Mr. McArthur, "is a person who bluffs beyond my limit."

Strained Relations.

It took place in a dairy

[illegible] dairyman was pouring large quantities of milk through a fine wire netting.

There were [illegible] the milk.

Other microbes by the hundred were sitting on the edge of the crock and gayly looking on.

Their relations were being strained.

Science to the Rescue.

Housekeeper—Has any way been discovered to kill the pests that destroy carpets?

Great Scientist—Yes, madam. Take up the carpets, hang them on a line and beat them with a heavy stick.

"Will that kill the insects?"

"Yes, madam, if you hit them."

After the Fact.

What a pity it is that our learned anthropologists never discover that a man has criminal eyes, mouth, ears and nose until after he has committed a murder! Oh, science, how many frauds are perpetrated in thy helpless name!

Painless Pulling.

Sufferer—Do you pull teeth without pain?

Dentist—Well, not always. I sprained my wrist last time I pulled a tooth, and it hurts me [illegible] occasionally.

It makes [illegible] prouder to be the friend of a [illegible] than it makes others to be rich.

The residence of G. E. Hayward on First St. north, is rapidly approaching completion. It will be one of the finest residences on the C.N.R. line and will cost over $7000.00.

A. A. Mackenzie, collector for the International Harvester company, arrived in town this week with his new auto. Mac will do his collecting now in up-to-date style.

Garden Party

Mrs. MacKinnon gave a garden party last Tuesday evening at "The Poplars" An enjoyable evening was spent. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Long, Misses Craig, Redmond, Close, Boyd, Dr. Heal-Patrick, the Misses Sullivan and Messrs. Sullivan, Gates, Kennedy, Crowe, Morrison Craig and West.

Dominion Election This Fall Assured

Secretary of State Instructed to Have Election Lists Prepared

Ottawa, July 24—If any doubt has existed as to the probability of a general election being held in the course of the autumn with reciprocity as the issue it was removed in the House to-day when the leaders got into close grips on the question.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared without reservation of any kind whatever that if the opposition does not allow the reciprocity agreement to pass there will be an appeal to the people. He said that the Government had nothing to disguise and that when Mr. Borden stated during the course of his western tour that he did not propose to allow reciprocity to go into effect without an appeal to the people he had given instructions to the secretary of state to have the election lists prepared.

New Lieut-Governor

Ottawa, July 24—A new lieutenant governor of Manitoba will be appointed in a few days to succeed Sir Daniel McMillan, who is retiring after filling the position with marked tact, distinction and ability during the past eleven years.

The Mystery of The Yellow Room

By GASTON LEROUX. COPYRIGHT, 1908 BY BRENTANO'S.

CHAPTER V.

In Which Joseph Rouletabille Makes a Remark to M. Robert Darzac Which Produces Its Little Effect.

ROULETABILLE and I had been waiting for several minutes by the side of a long wall [illegible] the vast property of M. [illegible]

[illegible]

No one was astonished, then, that the head of the Paris police had at the outset of the mystery of the yellow room telegraphed his precious subordinate in London, where he had been sent on a big case of stolen securities, to return with all haste. Fred eric had made all speed, doubtless knowing by experience that if he was interrupted in what he was doing it [illegible] and a firm profile. His forehead was prominent, his chin and cheeks clean shaven. His upper lip, without moustache, was finely chiseled. His eyes were rather small and round, with a look in them that was at once searching and disquieting. He was of middle height and well built, with a general bearing elegant and gentlemanly.

Larsan turned his head at the sound of a vehicle which had come from the chateau and reached the gate behind him. We recognized the cab which had conveyed the examining magistrate and the registrar from the station at [illegible]

"Ah!" said Frederic Larsan. "If you want to speak with M. Robert Darzac, he is here."

The cab was ready at the park gate, and Robert Darzac was begging Frederic Larsan to open it for him, [illegible] he was pressed for time [illegible] next train [illegible] Paris. Then he recognized me. While Larsan was unlocking the gate M. Darzac inquired what had brought me to the Glandier at such a tragic moment. I noticed that he was frightfully pale and that his face was lined with the effects of some terrible suffering.

"Is mademoiselle getting better?" I immediately asked.

"Yes," he said. "She will be saved perhaps. She must be saved!"

He did not add "or it will be my death," but I felt that the phrase trembled on his pale lips.

Rouletabille intervened.

"You are in a hurry, monsieur, but I must speak with you. I have something of the greatest importance to tell you."

Frederic Larsan interrupted.

"May I leave you?" he asked of Robert Darzac. "Have you a key or do you wish me to give you this one?"

"Thank you. I have a key and will lock the gate."

Larsan hurried off in the direction of the chateau, the imposing pile of which could be perceived a few hundred yards away.

Robert Darzac, with knit brow, was beginning to show impatience. I presented Rouletabille as a good friend of mine, but as soon as he learned [illegible]

Rouletabille did not take the extended hand. Eying with the utmost solidarity, he said:

"Monsieur, I have lived several years in Russia, where I have acquired the habit of never taking any but an ungloved hand."

I thought that the Sorbonne professor would express his anger openly, but on the contrary, by a visibly violent effort, he calmed himself, took off his gloves and showed his hands. They were unmarked by any cicatrice.

"Are you satisfied?"

"No," replied Rouletabille. "My dear friend," he said, turning to me, "I am obliged to ask you to leave us alone for a moment."

I bowed and retired, stupefied by what I had seen and heard. I could not understand why M. Robert Darzac had not already shown the door to my impertinent, insulting and stupid friend. I was angry myself with Rouletabille at that moment for his suspicions which had led to this scene of the gloves.

For some twenty minutes I walked about in front of the chateau, trying vainly to link together the different events of the day.

When Rouletabille came out of the chateau in the company of M. Robert Darzac, extraordinary to relate, I saw at a glance that they were the best of friends.

"We are going to the yellow room. Come with us," Rouletabille said to me. "You know, my dear boy, I am going to keep you with me all day. We'll breakfast together somewhere about here"—

"You'll breakfast with me here, gentlemen"—

"No, thanks," replied the young man. "We shall breakfast at the Donjon Inn."

"You'll fare very badly there. You'll not find anything"—

"Do you think so? Well, I hope to find something there," replied Rouletabille. "After breakfast we'll set to work again. I'll write my article, and if you'll be so good as to take it to the office for me"—

"Won't you come back with me to Paris?"

"No; I shall remain here."

I turned toward Rouletabille. He spoke quite seriously, and M. Robert Darzac did not appear to be in the least degree surprised.

We were passing by the donjon and heard wailing voices. Rouletabille asked:

"Why have those people been arrested?"

"It is a little my fault," said M. Darzac. "I happened to remark to the examining magistrate yesterday that it was inexplicable that the concierges had had time to hear the revolver shots, to dress themselves and to cover so great a distance as that which lies [illegible]

Points for Mothers

There are some problems in raising an only child. How to restrain from self-house is one of these. Another is how to create the independence which is usually the portion of members of a large family.

Here is the story of one woman who seems to be bringing her one little girl up in exactly the right way.

"No, Mary," she said recently, "you cannot go to visit Jane today at all. You were there yesterday. I do not wish you to feel that you must always either go somewhere or have some one at the house. I want you to be independent of others. Learn to draw upon yourself for amusement."

Mary seemed quite satisfied and proceeded to entertain herself.

"I never have allowed the child to acquire the habit of feeling that she must always have some one with her," said her mother. "If I see a tendency in that direction I have her remain at home alone for a day or two until her equilibrium is again established. I think there would be fewer gadding, gossiping women if mothers took pains to adopt this plan with their children."

This seemed rather a sensible view, and I led her on to still further express herself. "Why," she said, "I know women who feel that they cannot stand it to be alone for even an hour. They seem really miserable if left to their own resources. They seem to have no resources within themselves, but are always expecting some one to entertain them or amuse them. I think it leads to all sorts of evils," she added emphatically.

"Now, had they been taught in childhood to find something to do with every hour and to really look forward to the opportunity of solitude for the accomplishment of many things, such as study, reading or work, all this restlessness would have been avoided. The habit of self reliance is the best kind of help in all sorts of emergencies. I mean that my girl shall first of all be self reliant."

A DANGEROUS FISH.

The Peril That Comes With Cruising on Electric Ray.

Trouble lurks in the least suspected spots. One would think a smooth, shallow cove a safe place in which to float in a good craft, yet Charles Frederick Holder met with an adventure in just such a spot, which he relates in "Big Game at Sea." The author was visiting a friend on the New England coast, who was given to the study of natural history.

One day the author accompanied his friend on a collecting trip, and here is the story of the result as he told it:

Opposite his house was a little bay with a clean sandy bottom. Over this we slowly drifted. I sat in the stern, enjoying the day and examining the curious things my friend drew out of the water. Suddenly he gave an ejaculation, and I saw him reeling, seemingly helpless, to his pole. His face was ashy pale, with a white appearance like one stricken with a fatal disease.

I sprang forward just in time to catch him as he fell back into the boat and lowered him to the seat. At first he could only motion toward the water. He was almost rigid. Finally he recovered enough to say "Torpedo!" I saw the harpoon he was holding dancing about, evidently forced into a large fish. Grasping it, I soon discovered the trouble, for I received an electric shock strong enough to almost knock me over. I dropped the pole.

By this time my friend had recovered enough to tell me to let the fish remain where it was. With difficulty I rowed to shore. When the boat was grounded I picked up an old glass bottle, took a turn over it with the line and, with the help of this homemade insulator, pulled the fish on shore.

It proved to be one of the largest torpedoes, or electric rays, I have ever seen. Under certain conditions it would have been capable of killing a man. When touched the fish would roll its eyes dismally and give a low croak.

I have never known a man to be killed by one, but many have been injured, and, as for my friend, he did not recover in a week.

AN OLD TIME DINNER.

British Table Manners in the Seventeenth Century.

An account of hospitality in England in 1629 gives a good idea of the manner in which a country gentleman of the period lived. Dinner and supper were brought in by the servants with their hats on, a custom which is corroborated by Fynes Moryson, who says that, being at a knight's house [illegible]

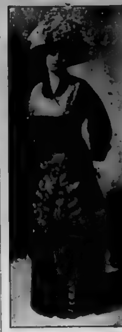
NEWNESS IN SUITS.

Vivid Blue Is the Smart Shade of the Parisian Element.



A CHARMING SUIT IN BLUE AND WHITE SILK.

Paris is favoring blue in all shades this summer. Never has there been such a year for this color, and there seems to be no tone of blue that is not worn. Periwinkle is immensely popular, [illegible] and sea tones are much used, but it is the [illegible] tone, of which radium is perhaps the latest and most vivid example, that is the prominently smart shade of the Parisian moment. Though so vivid, it is not crude, but none the less it is trying to many complexions and, like all brilliant blues, will be still more unbecoming as the season advances and our complexions feel the effect of wind and sun. These blues are usually toned down by black.

Did Not Need Sympathy.

A couple of old salts met after a long absence, and the following animated conversation ensued:—

"Well, old man, how are you getting on?"

"First rate! I have taken a wife."

"A very sensible idea."

"Not a bit of it; she's a regular Tartar."

"Then I'm sorry for you, mate."

"There's no need; she brought me a large vessel as her marriage portion."

"Then you make a good bargain, after all?"

"Nothing to boast of, I can tell you. The ship turned out a worthless old tinder-box."

"Then I'm sorry I spoke."

"Bah! You can speak as much as you like. The old tub was well insured and went down on her first voyage."

"So you got the pull there, anyhow."

"Not so much, mate; I only got five hundred dollars out of the job as my share."

"That was too bad."

"Too bad? Nothing of the sort! Wife was on board and went down with the vessel."

Creating a Mind

In an article in Hampton's, Rheta Childe Dorr has this to say in regard to the results accomplished in one city in betterment of the defective youth.

"In the city of Cincinnati a special class under the supervision of Miss Louise M. Doll has made some astonishing records. Here is one of Miss Doll's extreme cases.—

"A sixteen-year-old boy named August had entered school in September of that year for the first time in his life. Until he was eight years old he had suffered from infantile paralysis. All day the boy sat in the classroom doing nothing. He had some idea of number work, but he could neither read nor write. After a few months in the ordinary grade, he was transferred to Miss Doll's special class. At that time he had so little control of his muscles that it was deemed impossible to teach him to write. His hands fell off the desk whenever he attempted to form a letter. After the first attempt Miss Doll saw the hopelessness of trying to confine the child's efforts to a small area. Instead of keeping him at his desk she sent him to the blackboard [illegible]

"Do you remember," she asked, "that you said once that unless I promised to be yours the sun would cease to shine?"

"I don't remember it now, but I suppose I may have said something of the kind."

"And have you forgotten that you assured me that unless I permitted you to claim me as your own the moon would fall from her place in the heavens?"

"Oh, well, if I did say so? Why do you want to bring that up now?"

"I merely wished to assure you that I'm sorry I didn't shut my eyes and let her fall."—Chicago Record-Herald.

WHEN JENNY LIND SANG.

A Nightingale That Charmed Hearts as Well as Ears.

Nothing in Richard Hoffman's musical recollections is more charming than his description of Jenny Lind.

"She would trip on and off," he says, "as if in an ecstasy of delight at the opportunity of singing, bowing and smiling to her audience and giving every one present a flattering sense of contributing in a measure toward the success of the evening. She had three or four songs which showed the wondering compass and power of her voice, and one or more of these were called for at every concert—a Swedish echo song in which she would echo her own voice by a sort of ventriloquism that was quite marvelous and another in which she made a remarkable diminuendo, reaching a pianissimo as faint as a sigh, but with a carrying power that made it distinctly audible at the most extreme limits of Castle Garden or Tripler Hall, where the later concerts were given.

"This was a fine building situated at Broadway and Bond street and just finished in time for the second series of concerts. The hall had fine acoustic advantages, and it was a great loss to New York when it was destroyed by fire a few years later. The Winter Garden was afterward built on the same site.

"One of the most haunting things to me was her singing of Taubert's bird song, 'I Know Not Why I Am Singing.' Her shake was the finest I ever heard, so close and even as to be altogether perfect. Her voice, which she said herself was naturally stiff and stubborn, she had educated and practiced into such a degree of perfection that her roulades and cadenzas were unparalleled in their execution.

"In her sacred songs she rose to the sublime, and on one occasion as she finished singing the aria 'I Know That My Redeemer Liveth' I recollect that Daniel Webster, who was seated in the centre of the balcony, rose from his seat and made her a profound bow. Her rapt expression of face and never ending volume of voice made her appear like some inspired seraph [illegible]

AND WHEREAS the amount of the existing debenture debt of the said Municipality, outside of the debt due for current expenses of the year is the sum of $31,100.00 and no part of either the principal or interest is in arrear.

AND WHEREAS it is desirable to make the principal of the said debt repayable by twenty annual instalments of such amounts respectively that the aggregate instalments of principal and interest shall be equal in each year during the period of twenty years next after the day on which this by-law takes effect as hereinafter provided.

AND WHEREAS it will be necessary to raise annually in each year for the period of twenty years during the currency of the debentures to be issued under this by-law a sum sufficient to pay the several instalments of interest and principal and interest upon the principal from time to time remaining unpaid on the said debentures.

NOW THEREFORE THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF THE MUNICIPALITY OF THE TOWN OF VERMILION ENACT AS FOLLOWS:

1.—It will be lawful for the Mayor of the said Municipality of the Town of Vermilion to borrow on the credit of the said Municipality the sum of two thousand dollars for the purposes aforesaid and to issue a debenture or debentures of the Municipality for the sum of $2000.00 in sums of not less than $100.00 each and payable in twenty equal yearly aggregate instalments of principal and interest, which said debenture or debentures shall have coupons attached thereto for the payments of annual instalments of principal and interest thereon from time to time falling due.

2.—The said debenture or debentures shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum payable yearly and as to both principal and interest may be payable in any place in Great Britain or Canada [illegible]

3.—The Mayor of the said Municipality shall sign and issue the said debenture or debentures and shall cause the same and the coupons to be signed by the Secretary Treasurer of the said Municipality and the said Secretary Treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to attach the Corporate Seal of the said Municipality to the said debenture or debentures.

4.—The said debenture or debentures shall be dated the 1st day of September 1911 and shall be payable in twenty aggregate annual instalments of principal and interest on the 1st day of September in each and every of the years from 1912 to 1931, inclusive, in such manner that each instalment of principal and interest shall be equal in each and every of the said years.

5.—During the currency of the said debenture or debentures there shall be raised annually by a special municipal rate on all the rateable property in the said Municipality, in the same manner as the ordinary general municipal taxes, a sum sufficient to meet the annual instalment of principal and interest payable in each year in respect of said debenture or debentures.

6.—This by-law shall come into force and take effect on the 1st, day of September 1911.

7.—That the votes of the electors of the said Municipality qualified to vote on this by-law shall be taken on Saturday the 12th day of August, 1911 commencing at nine o'clock in the forenoon and continuing until five o'clock in the afternoon at the Town Hall in the said Town of Vermilion by Chas. V. Caesar, Secretary Treasurer of the said town, who is hereby named and appointed the Returning Officer for taking the said vote.

8.—That on Friday the 11th day of August 1911, at [illegible] o'clock in the forenoon at the office of the Secretary Treasurer, [illegible] the Mayor shall on application of any person interested in promoting or opposing the passing of this by-law appoint in writing one person to attend the final summing up of the votes by the said Returning Officer and one person to attend [illegible] on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of promoting or opposing the passing of this by-law.

9.—That the Returning Officer shall attend at the said Town Hall in the said town of Vermilion at 12 o'clock noon on Monday the 14th, day of August 1911, and shall there sum up the number of votes given for and against this by-law.

Read a first and second time and passed provisionally and carried in council this 17th day of July 1911.

CUMMINGS

Cummings and district is to be favoured by two mails a week starting Monday July 24th. This is welcome news as the mail ran in the past has been inconvenient. After you received mail it was a week before it could be answered.

There is also a petition in asking for a government line of telephone to this district.

We also need a line of Railway very badly through this part, as lack of transportation is holding this part back, a farmer growing grain has 22 miles to haul to an elevator or car Vermilion and 16 or 18 miles to a siding on the G.T.P. or 24 miles or so to Wainwright or Erma. To haul grain to Vermilion this year is nearly impossible unless something is done on the road south of Grizzly Bear Coulee the grades are so bad, to haul to Wainwright we have to go too far and also have the Battle River Hill to contend with and to Erma or the G.T.P. siding we have to cross the Buffalo coulee. The siding is the nearest, but few of us have not enough grain as yet owing largely to difficulties mentioned, to ship in car lots. So it is up to the merchants or the Board of Trade of Vermilion or both to do the best they can to alter existing conditions in time to enable the farmer to haul his grain in profitably.

Rev. McLean preached in the Heather Bell School House Sunday, July 23rd on the need for Sunday schools and also administered the sacrament of the Lords Supper.

OUTDOOR SPORT AND ZAM-BUK.

Every athlete, every ball-player, every swimmer, every canoeist, every man or woman who loves outdoor life and exercise, should keep a box of Zam-Buk handy.

Zam-Buk is a purely herbal preparation, which, as soon as applied to cuts, bruises, burns, sprains, blisters, etc., sets up highly beneficial operations. First, its antiseptic properties render the wound free from all danger from blood poisoning. Next, its soothing properties relieve and ease the pain. Then its rich herbal balms penetrate the tissue and set up the wonderful process of healing. Barbed wire scratches, insect stings, skin diseases such as eczema, heat rashes, ring-worm, babies' heat sores, chafed places, sore feet—all come within Zam-Buk's power. It also eases and cures piles. All druggists and stores. Avoid imitations.

Big Fees Paid by Sightseers When Pageants Are Under Way.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, and the death of a monarch puts money into the pockets of the ... Those who profit most largely by such an event are the seat-mongers on the line of the funeral procession.

The value put upon seats is always rising. When Edward I. became king a farthing was charged for a seat to see the coronation procession. On the accession of Richard II. the price rose to 1d., and from Henry V.'s coronation to Henry VII.'s it was 2d. By the time Charles II. was crowned it had gone up to 2s. 6d., while exactly double as much the ... was paid at the coronation of William III. Then the value of seats on such occasions appreciated enormously. To see the procession when George III. was crowned half a guinea was paid, and sightseers on George IV.'s day of days cheerfully paid five and in some cases ten guineas. This was considered the climax, but the value put on seats in later days has been much greater.

Why the enormous rise? The main reason, as far as our own times are concerned, is that wealthy Indians, Americans, and other foreign visitors have been willing to pay anything for a seat to witness a state pageant. Hence the value has been inflated.

The present high scale was set at Queen Victoria's Jubilee, when large sums were paid for rooms from the windows of which the procession could be seen. Few rooms, however small, could be hired for less than 10 guineas, and for many 100 guineas was demanded and paid. A large building on the route, being empty, was secured for the day by an enterprising individual for 1,000 guineas, and he had no reason to regret his outlay.

On the occasion of Queen Victoria's funeral the Jubilee rate for seats was confirmed. In St. James' street £30 had to be paid for a single chair, while seats which a few days before the procession were offered for 2 guineas afterwards fetched 5 guineas. A window which let when "Lord Roberts came home for £200 found a hirer at £400 on the occasion of the Queen's funeral. As it will hold only fifty people at the utmost, the hirer must have charged pretty heavily for every seat in it. Again, some rooms in Piccadilly let for as much as 200 guineas.

High as these figures are, however, they were surpassed in several instances. The most remarkable "deal" in connection with the funeral was that of a gentleman who took a mansion near the Marble Arch for the day for the amazing sum of £1,300.

At Edward VII.'s coronation and again at the royal progress the price of seats was equally high. In South London some landlords evicted tenants that they might obtain windows for the function, and received more for a single day's occupancy of a part of their premises than they got in normal circumstances for the use of the whole for a year. Others, however, let their tenants make as much as possible on the occasion, with the result that many strenuous workers made handsome sums by letting their humble homes to sightseers.

Perhaps the highest price ever paid for a window was £1,000, secured by a landlord near the Marble Arch to enable some Americans to view the funeral procession of the King on its way to Paddington.

Queen-Mother's Relations

No royal lady of any time has been so intimately related to such a large number of kings and queens as the Queen-Mother of Great Britain, who has been the recipient of world-wide sympathy in her great grief and sorrow. Her father and mother were king and queen, her husband was a king, her mother-in-law was the ... Queen Victoria, her son is now King of Great Britain, her daughter is Queen of Norway, a sister was for some years Czarina of Russia and is now Dowager Empress, one brother is King of Denmark, another brother King of the Hellenes, one of her nephews is Czar of Russia, and another nephew ... her son-in-law is King ... while a third and fourth are destined to be King of Denmark and King of the Hellenes respectively.

"Charlie" Carrington

Earl Carrington, who was recently appointed Lord Great Chamberlain of England by King George, is one of the largest landowners in England. The late King Edward and "Charlie" Carrington, as he is popularly known, ... grew up together in close intimacy. For five years he was governor of New South Wales, where he studied agriculture. Lord Carrington returned home a convinced and enthusiastic land-reformer. He believes in getting men back to the land, and has established no fewer than 5,000 small holdings on his estates. The new Lord Great Chamberlain has a wide reputation as an excellent administrator.

Toy Spaniel an Old Breed.

The English toy spaniel is undoubtedly one of the oldest and most popular breeds of pet dogs known. As far back as the days of Charles the Martyr this breed was much prized by the ladies of the court. In the narrative of the execution of Mary Queen of Scots, indexed in Lord Burghley's hand and forwarded to the court, it was recorded that one of the executioners found her little pet (a spaniel of practically the same type as those afterward known in the reign of Charles II.), which had crept under the folds of her garments to be near her and which would not be taken away.

The Great Cod Banks.

There is just one other great cod bank in the world besides those off Newfoundland. It lies off Cape Agulhas, which is the southern tip of Africa and south of the Cape of Good Hope. The Agulhas plateau is said to be almost a duplicate in size and richness of the north cod banks. But this is too far off, so there is little promise of its appeasing the hungry appetite of the world for cod.

"Dean," said he, "the music of those chimes is so beautiful that it always sets me dreaming of the past. My boyhood days—"

"What do you say?" interrupted the venerable dean.

"I say the chimes are very, very beautiful. They make me think—"

"What?" yelled the dignified old dean again.

"The chimes — the chimes — how beautiful—"

"Speak louder!" cried the dean once more. "I can't hear you for the devilish bell."—Short Stories.

A Household Medicine.—They that are acquainted with the sterling properties of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the treatment of many ailments would not be without it in the house. It is truly a household medicine and as it is effective in dealing with many ordinary complaints it is cheaper than a doctor. So, keep it at hand, as the call for it may come most unexpectedly.

BRIGHT LITTLE ONES MAKE HOME BRIGHT

Babies that are well sleep well, eat well and play well. They sleep naturally and wake up good natured. The child that is not rosy-cheeked and playful needs prompt attention, for it is not well. A sickly child can be restored to health with a few doses of Baby's Own Tablets, which cure colic, indigestion, constipation, teething troubles and the other disorders from which young children suffer. Mrs. Thos. Whiting, Waterford, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets in my home for some years and would not be without them. I find them just the right medicine for little ones." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Recovered by Thieves After Serving Out Their Jail Terms.

It is well known to the police that there are a number of ex-convicts who are literally rolling in riches and driving about London and the provinces to-day in their own motor-cars and carriages, said a detective to the writer the other day. The majority of these men are old embezzlers, and there seems to be little doubt that they are able to live well and keep going ... furnished residences because ... they stole was hidden ... before being arrested and sent to prison.

There are thousands of pounds' worth of valuable property looted by thieves from various sources that lies buried in odd corners of Britain and will probably only be recovered by the men themselves on their release. Cases are constantly occurring where an embezzler after running off with a large sum in gold refuses to divulge the hiding place of his ill-gotten gains. He is sent to prison, and the loot remains unrecovered. In nine cases out of ten the embezzler, finding arrest imminent, buries his stolen property and digs it up again when he comes out of prison.

A man who was for many years an inmate of one of our prisons is now living in affluence in a town up north. He was imprisoned for embezzling $20,000 from his employers, and he declared at the trial that he had spent every penny of it. For some time after his release from jail he lived in a cheap lodging house at Hoxton, and then one day he declared that he had come into a fortune, a brother in Australia having died and left him some thousands. As a matter of fact, although the police had no proof, he had recovered the money which he had embezzled years before.

A man of considerable means now living in the United States served a term of imprisonment for forgery, having obtained $73,000 by means of false checks. Not a penny of the money was recovered by the police. During the forced confinement of the thief his wife, in pursuance of a previously agreed plan, went out to service in a gentleman's family. As soon as the husband was liberated, however, his wife resigned her position, and the pair sailed immediately for the colonies. It ultimately came to light that the money which had been stolen by means of the forged checks had been buried under the flooring in a Soho house.

Some fifteen years ago a Hindu merchant who had come to London to make purchases of gems was robbed of many thousands of pounds. The thieves carried their ill-gotten wealth to a cheap tenement in Whitechapel, but, finding the police hot on their track, they carried the loot one dark night to a remote spot on the Essex marshes and secretly buried it. They then disappeared and have not been seen since. It is believed that the money remains to this day where it was buried.—London Tit-Bits.

Thousands Would Do the Same.

A pretty story concerning Mr. W. H. Lever, of Sunlight soap fame, is going the rounds. At an outing of the children of Port Sunlight two little girls invited Mr. Lever to go with them on the switchback railway. Like a jovial schoolboy he consented. As they were going along one little girl said, "I've been in one of these before at New Brighton. I've got a rich aunt there." "Oh, indeed," said Mr. Lever. "Yes," went on the little one, "she has got £300 saved up." "But you've got more than that, haven't you, Mr. Lever?" inquired the other child. "Well, you know," replied Mr. Lever, seriously, "I keep spending my money, and you can't have money if you spend it, can you?" "And are you very poor now?" asked the first tiny girl, anxiously. "Well," said Mr. Lever, "I keep spending, and what ever shall I do when all my money is gone?" Almost simultaneously his small companions shouted, "Come and live with us!" "I have received a large number of invitations in my lifetime," says Mr. Lever, "but none so dear and so sweet to me as that."

A Daring Noblewoman.

Lady Ernestine Hunt, the eldest daughter of the Marquis of Ailesbury, is the first [illegible] commission as lieutenant in the medical branch of the territorial division of the British army. Lady Hunt is an unusual woman. She was one of the half dozen adventurous women who took part in the Jameson raid in South Africa in 1895, in connection with the ambulance department. For some years now she has divided her time between a little place she has in Ireland and her ranch in Canada. At the latter place she is an extensive breeder of horses, which are sold in London and Dublin at very remunerative prices, thus making her ranching adventure an exceedingly profitable one.

The King's Right-Hand Man.

Lord Knollys, who is to be private secretary to George V., acted in a similar capacity to the late King for nearly forty years. His lordship is the only man who can approach His Majesty at all hours and under any circumstances. Lord Knollys delights in relating an amusing malapropism in which he figured recently. A gentleman-in-waiting, who was anxious to obtain some favor from the King but was too nervous to interview His Majesty, sought the assistance of Lord Knollys. "I do not like to speak to the King," said the applicant, "because he might not care to listen to me. It would be a different thing, though, if it were yourself, Knollys, for of course, there is nothing of the gentleman about you."

An Opalized Snake.

What is supposed to be an opalized snake has been discovered by a prospector at White Cliffs opal fields, South Australia, from whom it has been secured by an Adelaide resident named J. S. Saunders. On a piece of ironstone, dark brown in color, and therefore making an excellent background to show off the precious stone, was embedded the form of a small snake or lizard of pure opal. The head and eyes are to be plainly seen. Even the scales of the back can be discerned.

The Doctor's Answers

By Dr. Lewis Baker.

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature. Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing a self addressed envelope for reply. If unable to obtain any of the drugs mentioned of your regular druggist, go to some prominent large retail drug store which is sure to be well stocked.

Maud:—I am glad to know the prescription cured you so quickly. Yes, I can give a prescription which will increase your weight from one to three pounds a week. It is not so expensive for it improves the health, weight and strength marvelously. Keep up the treatment until your weight is satisfactory. Syrup hypophosphites comp. 3 ozs., essence of pepsin 3 ozs., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz. (not cardamom) and comp. essence cardiol 1 oz. Mix, and take a teaspoonful before and after meals. Plumpness follows the use of this almost invariably if continued several months.

W. B. K.—Jaundice, yellow skin, blotches, constipation, biliousness, foul breath, coated tongue and pain in liver region can soon be cured by the following prescription. Fluid extract mandrake 2 drams, comp. essence cardiol 1 oz., aromatic fluid cascara 1 oz., and aromatic syrup rhubarb 4 ozs. Mix, shake, and take from one-half to one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime. I have cured the chronic liver affections with this.

Madam.—Your womanly disorders cannot be prescribed for in these columns. Write me in full and I will treat your case successfully if not too far along.

W. E.—A [illegible] in your condition should not [illegible] taking treatment even though [illegible] have been disappointed; and [illegible] treatment which I advise for [illegible] victims of dissipation who [illegible], weak, nervous and lacking in the functional powers of the [illegible] that they cannot act naturally [illegible] with perfect self-confidence and self-control, so seldom fails to produce satisfactory results, that I regard it a boon to mankind. It is especially for men with defective ailments of a nervous character, while excellent for weak diseased women. Comp. syrup sarsaparilla 3 ozs., comp. fluid balmwort 1 oz., comp. essence cardiol 1 oz., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at bedtime. This will make you soon feel the tinge of health and vigor coursing through the body.

S. C. C.—For scrofula, ulcer, pimples, boils and impure blood, accompanied by running sores I usually prescribed the following for a constitutional blood remedy: Syrup of hypophosphites comp. 6 ozs., fluid ext. dandelion 1 oz., comp. fluid balmwort 1 oz. Mix, and take a teaspoonful before or after meals and one at bedtime. The dose may be gradually increased to two teaspoonfuls. This makes a fine spring tonic, too, for both children and adults. It is harmless and you can feel perfectly safe in using anything I prescribe.

Chronic.—Judging by your symptoms you suffer with chronic bronchitis. The cough mixtures you have been using cause constipation, and you cannot expect a cure while such a condition exists. Remember a laxative cough remedy should always be used, if there is a tendency to constipation, have this mixed: Comp. essence cardiol 1 oz., aromatic fluid cascara 1 oz., syrup white pine comp. 4 ozs. Take from ½ to 1 teaspoonful 8 to 10 times daily or as necessary to check cough. I have known this to cure when all else failed.

Minister—And how did Noah spend his time in the ark?

Small Boy: Fushin'.

Minister—A very reasonable suggestion, my laddie.

Small Boy (musingly)—But he would a catch much!

Minister (surprised)—What makes you think that?

Small Boy (thoughtfully)—Because he had only two wir-r-ms.—The Sketch.

There is no poisonous ingredient in Holloway's Corn Cure, and it can be used without danger of injury.

Crawford: I see that writing poetry has recently got a young man out of prison.

Crabshaw—Yes; and if he keeps at it he will probably wind up in the poorhouse.—Judge.

The Officer Knew.

A story is old concerning two travellers who found themselves in a Prohibitionist State, and were discussing the question of how to obtain alcoholic liquor, when a pleasant-looking policeman appeared and wished them "Good morning."

"I say, Jim," said one of the travellers, "let's ask the officer."

"Follow me," said the constable, and he conducted them in and out and round about until they stood in front of the cathedral. The travellers looked at each other in astonishment.

"Surely, my good man," said the first, "you do not mean to tell us that we can obtain what we want in a church?"

"You see the church, do you?" said policeman solemnly.

"Yes," assented the two.

"Well," that's the only place in this state where you can't get it."

A BIG KITCHEN—OR A SMALL?

"'I guess you wouldn't think so if you had to keep it clean.'"

A CORRESPONDENT to whom we owe much writes:

"Would you be willing to ... the comparative merits of the big, the middle sized and cabinet sized kitchen in the modern city and in the suburban house, or would you prefer to invite a symposium upon the subject, if you deem it of sufficient interest to housemothers in general?

"Some contemplated changes in our house seem to demand the reduction of dimensions of the present kitchen, and I am speculating as to what the effect of a condensed kitchen would have upon the administration of that branch of domestic work.

"First, may we hear what you think of the plan as carried into effect in the dwelling of today? [illegible]"

It is hard for the most advanced thinkers to strip any subject of the shrouded draperies that association has hung about it. And we have heard and read so much of the old-fashioned kitchen of our foremothers that we think of it as part of the poetry of that departed day. I have in mind as if I had seen it but yesterday what I declared, in a sort of romantic ecstasy, was "the ideal kitchen of my dreams." It was the largest room in an old homestead nestled in the ... of the Berkshire (Mass.) hills. There were four windows looking out upon the mountains and valley of that most picturesque of New England ... The walls were painted a pale soft yellow, the floor was of a darker harmonious shade of the same ... the wall at one end was lined with shelves filled with bright pewter and copper utensils, on the opposite wall were other shelves ... a wealth of shining tinware ... dresser spread wide wings ... between the door and the ... which had been built in ... great fireplace within a quarter ... I had already remarked that her speech was neither illiterate nor as provincial as that of the other farmers' wives we had met in the neighborhood. For example, she had said when I showed a bunch of fringed gentians gathered in the meadow:

"You know that ... the most poetical of New England wildflowers? I don't think I have seen ... before in ten years."

Yet I had picked them in her own field.

I was still holding the flowers and, looking from them to the narrow, seamed face, I began to comprehend why she had never had time for woodland and pasture strolls.

Chief of Police Oakley is having a brick addition added to his residence on Second St. north.

Howe's trained animal show gave a big afternoon's performance here last Thursday before over 800 people.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Gonyon of Chatham, Ont., are visiting Mrs. Gonyon's parents Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Collins, town.

A full meeting of all members of the band is called for Monday evening next at 8.30 o'clock at the town hall. Business important. G. Welsh Secy.

The new Optimus School will open on August 1st, Tuesday next, with Miss Emily Johnson, a graduate of the Vermilion High School, in charge. A full attendance of the children of the district is requested by the board.

W. J. Rundle and wife of Dundalk, Ont., returned home last week after visiting relatives in various parts of Alberta and British Columbia. While in Vermilion they were the guests of Mrs. Jas. Roseborough and sons, Mrs. Rundle being a sister of the Messrs. Roseborough.

Miss Bessie Collins who is visiting her brother J. A. Collins at Edmonton had the misfortune to lose all her jewelry by thieves entering the house of her brother while they were attending an entertainment. A watch, gold bracelets, and locket were stolen valued at $125.00. No clue to the burglars has been obtained.

Bert Rogers of Rhea, Okla., has just returned to the States after two weeks spent in the Landonville district. His chief object in visiting these parts was with the view of locating land for a number of families at Rhea, all of whom wish to procure farms of 320 acres each. Mr Rogers was greatly impressed with the country and the contrast in the grasses and herbage here with the dry and parched conditions of those in his own State. We can assure Mr Rogers and his friends that they can make no mistake by settling in Alberta and particularly in the Vermilion district.

The order for the printing of the Prize Lists for the sixth annual exhibition of the Vermilion Agricultural Society has been placed with The Standard and the job department is pushing ahead with the work with as much expedition as possible. A large number of changes have been made in the get up of the list generally and it will be found to be in a much handier form all round. Both the advertising and special prize list is exceeding heavy, there being something like 26 pages of the former alone. The fair promises to be bigger and better than ever.

Morrison & Son, who have so successfully operated the well boring machine for the town since last fall, have been released by the council on the sale of the outfit to F. A. Morrison. When Morrison & Son got the outfit into good running shape they were enabled to carry through all their operations without a mishap of any nature which only men of experience and care could do. In the four wells bored for the town the cost was away below contract prices. In the outside work the operators made a substantial profit for the town. Suffice to say that the experience of these men coupled with their conscientious work has been the means of saving a very large amount of money to the town in similar operations undertaken by contract.

Ohio Editors Visit Vermilion

Buckeye State Quill Drivers Entertained by Town Council and Board of Trade

200 IN THE PARTY

The special containing some two hundred members of the Buckeye Press Association of Ohio arrived at Vermilion this morning and at 9 o'clock were waited on by representatives of the town Council and Board of Trade and presented with an address of welcome and freedom of the city. The address was signed by Mayor Dunsmore and W. J. Seed, Pres. of the B. of T. Rigs were on hand and a large percentage of the visitors were driven throughout the surrounding country and shown the chief points of interest and given a view of the magnificent crops. Groups flooded the town and visited leading places of interest, the Standard office naturally was stampeded and all work suspended during the bombardment. Unfortunately notification was given that the train would leave at 10 o'clock instead of 12 noon and consequently the extended arrangements planned for the reception could not be carried out. However, the newspaper party were delighted with their outing here and the beautiful appearance of the town and country.

The special reached Winnipeg Sunday direct from Toronto, the trip being planned by O. H. Williams, Canadian immigration agent for Ohio. All were realizing their keen anticipation of seeing the much discussed Canadian west.

T. Armstrong Tells of the English Bohemians of the Sixties.

Many interesting facts concerning a famous coterie of literary and artistic Bohemians, including Millet, Whistler, Burne-Jones, and Millais, are recalled by Mr. T. Armstrong, C.B., in "Reminiscences of George du Maurier."

"Millais was conspicuous from his stature and his handsome head, as was his brother William, whose presence was much prized on account of his beautiful tenor voice. There was something very strange about the likeness of William to his brother John, whose fine, handsome, and engaging presence is still remembered. I should never have guessed that Sir John had any Jewish ancestor, but he told Du Maurier that he had..." [illegible]

BEWARE OF THE BEEF TRUST.

Chicago Meat Packers Would Like Free Canadian Cattle and Extension of Their Monopoly.

The injurious control of the United States Beef Trust over this country would be one of the most dangerous outcomes of the Reciprocity agreement if it should be adopted between the States and Canada. Particularly would the results of the Beef Trust regime be dire to Western Canada. The history of the Beef Trust in the United States law courts shows that the big six packing companies of Chicago have almost entire control of the producing regions of the Western States.

The United States Beef Trust is made up of the following firms: Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Morris & Co., including the Fairbanks Canning Co., the National Packing Company, under the joint management of Armours, Swifts and Morris; Swarzchild & Sulzberger and Cudahy & Co. The main interests in "the big six," as they are called, control 72 subsidiary packing companies and these 72 tentacles stretch over the length and breadth of the United States, feeding on the fat of the land and crushing out life wherever it is convenient.

Nearly every year the Beef Trust is brought into court for breaking the Sherman anti-trust law. There is a case in progress now in the District Court at Chicago against the Beef Trust for having been accused of being an illegal combination in restraint of trade. It is said the Beef Trust knows no law. In previous cases evidence has shown that 98 per cent of all the cattle killed in leading western cities were slaughtered by the Trust... [illegible]

Cut clover hay when about half the blossoms are brown, cut timothy just as the bloom is falling. Curing clover: Cut it as soon as the dew is off in the morning. At noon shake out the bunches, rake into windrows before evening dews get on it, and let it lie until next day. Next day shake out the hay as soon as the dew is off. You ought to be ready to haul on a hot day by eleven o'clock or certainly after dinner. It spoils clover hay to get too dry. It should never be put into the barn when wet with rain or dew, but a little sap won't hurt it. Curing timothy: If the crop is not too heavy and rank, cut as soon as the dew is off, let it cure a few hours, rake into windrows, and haul to the barn the same day. If crop is rank, cut it in the afternoon, it will wilt some during the night and dew will not hurt it. Next day's sun will dry it in a few hours, when it can be raked into windrows, hauled to the barn in the early afternoon.

How the Treaty Was Made

A Story Inspired by the President's Peace Plan

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In the changes that have come over Europe the principalities of Portonia and Wendra have disappeared from the map. They were carved out of the ancient territory called Helvetia and were adjoining provinces. For years the boundary line between the two was a matter of dispute, and much blood had been spilled without any progress being made to fix it permanently. At last war had reduced them both to bankruptcy.

One day a young man, Herman von Gratz, rode into the capital of Wendra, drew up at the palace of the reigning prince and announced himself as an envoy extraordinary from the sovereign of Portonia, having power to make a treaty with his neighbors of Wendra establishing a boundary line. At the time of his arrival the minister of foreign affairs was with the prince, who, having heard Von Gratz's announcement, turned to his cabinet officer and said:

"Count von Steinwitz, negotiate a treaty such as this young man is sent to make. I do not wish to see it or be consulted with regard to it till it has been signed, sealed and delivered. Then, if it is satisfactory to me, I will make you a marquis, giving you at the same time one of my estates. If the treaty fails to meet my approval you shall lose your head."

At this the ambassador looked very much astonished.

"What surprises you?" asked the prince.

"A coincidence. My sovereign the Prince of Portonia has imposed upon me the same conditions."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, your highness, with this addition, that the treaty must be made. I cannot escape by a failure to agree."

Turning to Von Steinwitz, the prince said:

"Add that condition to those I have named. Take my brother sovereign's representative to your castle and keep him there till you have come to an agreement."

[illegible]

guest, invited him into his cabinet, and the two sat down together over papers and maps.

Now, Herman von Gratz had been sent on this mission because he was a wonder in the game of diplomacy. The two principalities were to him but chessboards. If he gave up a town and gained an island, if he left out a province for future consideration and sliced off a peninsula, it was all for a final checkmate of his enemy's king. During this first morning, when preliminaries for the struggle were alone taken up, his mind was upon a different matter. He was thinking of Bertha and that if he possessed her she must be given him by his opponent in the diplomatic game. But the next day, when the battle began, he temporarily forgot his love, and the older man was surprised to learn that he had a genius for an antagonist.

"Let us proceed," said Von Gratz, "methodically. When I grant you a province for a town or an island we will mark the same on our map, and the agreement shall be immutable. If we do not proceed thus we shall make no treaty and both suffer the penalty."

The count saw the necessity, but acquiesced reluctantly. The boundary ran for a distance of some 500 miles, at times the natural division being a mountain chain, at times a river. The field on which the game was played was so broad that only one who had a head fitted for the purpose could retain at one time its different parts. The players sat down to work at 10 in the morning and never ceased even for a meal till 10 at night. Then on the conventions of both parties they drew the treaty. When it was finished it must be signed, for every step in it was irrevocable.

Von Gratz put his signature to it without reading it. The count dreaded to do the same, but there was no escape. Then his antagonist leaned back in his chair while Von Steinwitz read the document. He had not half finished it when he paled. His enemy had secured an overwhelming advantage.

For a few moments the count gave himself up for lost. Then suddenly he remembered his instructions to his daughter. He had given them with a view to providing for such a contingency as this and had observed the results. Retaining his presence of mind, he expressed no dissatisfaction with the treaty. The seals of both principalities were attached, and the instrument was de facto.

"You will remain as my guest a few days longer," said the count, "while engrossed copies are being made, then I suppose I shall be obliged to part with you."

PROGRESS OF WIRELESS.

The System Is Rapidly Spreading All Over the World.

By the law of the land no vessel carrying fifty or more persons, including passengers and crew, may leave any port in the United States on a voyage of more than 200 miles after July 1 unless it is equipped with wireless telegraph apparatus capable of transmitting and receiving messages over a distance of at least 100 miles, day or night, in charge of a competent operator.

Even without the strong encouragement of the law, without any influence whatever beyond the cold logic of achievement, the world's installation of wireless telegraph apparatus had grown to a grand total of 1,520 stations on ship and shore, exclusive of foreign warships and amateur outfits, up to Oct. 1, 1910, according to a directory compiled by the United States navy department. Of this total 931 were on steamships, yachts and tugs throughout the world. Of the shore stations the United States had 201, of which eighty-eight were on the Atlantic and gulf coasts, forty-eight were on the great lakes, fifty-one on the Pacific coast, sixteen in Alaska and three in the interior. The United States navy had 344 ship and forty-seven shore stations, the army thirty shore and sixteen ship stations.

In 1909 the Marconi company transmitted between ship and shore messages aggregating 510,000 words. The transatlantic business ranges from 20,000 to 73,000 words a week. The British postoffice department reported that in the three months ending Oct. 1, 1910, twice as many wireless messages were sent and received as in any other corresponding period. As the first step toward establishing a ring of wireless stations completely encircling the United Kingdom the government has purchased the stations already in operation. The New Zealand government recently asked for bids for erecting five wireless stations, while fifteen new wireless stations now being constructed along the Amazon and Uruguay rivers in Brazil will be in operation before the end of the year.—Technical World Magazine.

Canada's Great Western Fair and Stock Show & Race Meet at Edmonton Aug. 15 to 18

The directors of the Edmonton Exhibition Association can promise their patrons the very best Attractions obtainable in western Canada this year. They are fortunate in contracting for The Greater Parker Shows early in the season. These are the best shows traveling in the Western States and Canada this year. They were secured by the Dominion Fair authorities of Regina and come direct to Edmonton from the Regina Dominion Exhibition with their special train of 30 cars. In addition to making the Midway the best of its kind they will also put on the free attraction platform in front of the Grandstand, twice each day, Madam Altea's Trained Dogs and Leaping Greyhounds, Stemer Trio Grotesque Comedy Bar Acrobats, Zeraldas Head and Balance Act, Stoneras Select special, Morris' pet Leaping and Wrestling Ponies. In addition the Directors have been fortunate in obtaining the celebrated Finks Mules and Dogs and also the Casting Campbells the best acrobats of their kind from the United Fairs Booking Association of Chicago.

It will be noticed that the dare devil acts and sensational acts where there is danger to those taking part have been eliminated the Directors feeling that the general public does not take kindly to acts where human life is put to too great a risk and which acts are not really enjoyable and are over in a minute.

The directors believe the public like best a good act with plenty of fun and real merit in it and for this reason are sure the patrons of the Edmonton Exhibition Association will go home rested and appreciate the amusements offered.

The Greater Parker Shows will also have free acts in connection with the Midway which will cause a sensation and pleasure to those attending the Big Edmonton Fair on August 15th to 19th next. Excursion rates have been granted [illegible] Railway companies from [illegible] points.

Union S. S. PICNIC

The Union Sunday School picnic was held last Thursday, civic Holiday, to the popular summer resort commonly known as Craig's Lake, located some 4 miles north-west of the town. Beyond the earlier part of the day being somewhat breezy it was otherwise ideal in every respect, and the large number of children and grown-ups who spent the time at the beautiful grove on the lake had a thoroughly all-round good time. There was lots of amusement for the scholars in the form of races of all varities and paddling in the refreshing waters of the lake. DEERING IDEAL BINDER
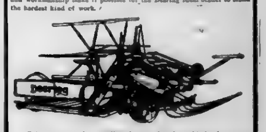
5, 6 and 7 ft. Cut.
The binder built for hard work. Strong construction, best material and workmanship make it possible for the Deering Ideal binder to stand the hardest kind of work.


Following are a few excellent features found on this binder:
No bolts in the main frame, parts are hot-riveted together, making it practically everlasting.
Pitman is made of best second growth hickory.
The reel has four distinct movements, operated by a single lever.
Roller and ball bearings are placed wherever subject to friction, thus reducing side draft.
Platform bottom is made of sheet steel riveted so that it never catches obstructions.
These are only a few of the many valuable features to be found on this binder.
Call on us and examine this machine, or write for beautiful illustrated catalogue which describes it in detail.

PRINCESS LOUISE.

The Kaiser's Daughter Is Interesting Royal Matchmakers.

COURTSHIP IN AFRICA.

Soudan Swains at Their Lady's Call for a Year.

Some customs prevailing in certain parts of the Soudan have been described by Artin Pasha, who recently made a journey up the Blue and the White Nile. The gentleman is Minister of Education in Egypt and in his letters to his wife gave an account of his experiences, which is now published in a book called "England in the Soudan."

THE DOUKHOBORS.

Queer Russian Sect Which Has Become Canadianized.

The Doukhobor women have been reclaimed from the plow.

No longer do they sweat in the fields of Canada instead of horses. Even as their men are ceasing to be the wild wanderers and fanatical spirit-wrestlers they were when they appeared in the northwest several years ago, so the new world's environments have drawn the women back from the brute level, to which they had been degraded, to the home, with its cooking, its spinning and its weaving — old-time tasks, it is true, but tasks adjusted to their strength.

The melting pot of this western world has recast even the Doukhobors. The colony boasts of a substantial schoolhouse. Doukhobor teachers were educated in the schools and returned to impart the knowledge to their fellow-colonists.

JOINING THE ARMY

Opportunities That Are Open to the Enlisted Man.

HIS PAY AND HIS PROSPECTS.

Even as a Private He Can Run His Salary Up to $30 a Month, and as a "Noncom" He Can Double That and in Time Retire Rich and Pensioned.

There are many opportunities open to the man who enlists in the United States army and wears the uniform of Uncle Sam with honor to himself and his country. The pay is good, the food is good, and the chances for advancement are numerous.

AN AMAZING MARRIAGE.

"Duchess of Kingston" Was a Celebrated 18th Century Character.

Elizabeth Chudleigh, Maid of Honor, the Hon. Mrs. Hervey, Duchess of Kingston and Countess of Bristol, lives in history, or in historical gossip, by her "amazing marriage" with the Duke of Kingston. To be correct, she should be described as alias the Duchess of Kingston, as her famous marriage ceremony with the duke was in the end decided by the House of Lords not to have created a valid marriage, as a previous marriage with Mr. Hervey, afterwards Earl of Bristol, was good and still subsisted. The lady had committed bigamy.

The year was 1776, and the law allowed branding in the hand as an incident of the sentence; but it also allowed benefit of clergy to be pleaded. This was done, and the sentence then as pronounced by the Lord High Steward was—"I am therefore now ..."

COCKSHUTT'S FOR BINDERS

See the Nearest Cockshutt Dealer about a FROST & WOOD— Best Machine Made.

When a strange cow is turned in with a herd she has to undergo a sort of competitive examination. The fighter of the flock, often a reckless looking creature with a horn turned down, walks directly up to the stranger and challenges her. The duel is in good form and is preceded by ceremonious bowing and arranging of the feet. Politeness over, the two brutes lock horns and there is a trial of strength, weight and persistency. Let the one that first gives ground look out for a thrust in the ribs. But once the newcomer has settled her relatives social standing, and knows which of her fellows are to have precedence of her at the hayrick and watering trough, and which she may in turn safely bully, all is peace in the pasture.

The Poor Man's Friend.—Put up in small bottles that are easily portable and sold for a very small sum. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil ... No dealer's stock is complete without it.

It may be that even while running about on the farm hens cannot find the grit they like, or enough of it. See that the boxes are well supplied all the time.

Don't buy a second-hand incubator unless you know the people who sell it, and even then it is a risk. If it has only a few disease germs in it, they will increase and multiply to overflowing, scriptural measure, because of the high temperature you must maintain for incubation. So it's better to buy a new machine than to have your chicks possibly infected.

Use the small eggs. Give your customers the large ones. So shall they call you a square dealer and stick by you and bring you more and more customers. Besides its only fair and makes you feel better.

Rice and other milk puddings must cook very slowly to be good. It is only in this way that the starch grains have time to swell and thicken the milk thoroughly.

AGENTS WANTED

Practical women, one experienced in nursing preferred. Address "VIAVI" Confederation Life Building, Toronto.

Those who closely observe the market look for a steady advance in eggs. The old cold storage supply is well worked off, and new supplies are being collected. The poultry market also promises better results.

THE RESTFUL WOMAN

To come in contact with really restful women is, in the days of hurry-scurry, akin to finding water after long marches across the desert under the hot rays of the sun. Whenever we meet with friends, acquaintances, or relations, we perceive that they are constantly "at it" in some way or another; either physically or mentally they are constantly on the run, so to say. One has "such a lot to do," and another is always saying such brilliant or witty things. We—so many of us—have grown so accustomed to this rapidity of action that we are just a little inclined to look down upon the woman who is different. Yet this different, but not indifferent woman is just the one who is wanted, just the one whom it is good to meet.

BRISTLES

If sows are expected to raise a fall litter it is best to wean the spring pigs at from eight to ten weeks old.

If sows and pigs are properly fed and cared for from the first this can be done with safety and profit.

Some breeders claim that six or seven weeks is long enough for the pigs to remain with the sow, but this I think, is extreme.

With a good supply of freshly separated milk, and by careful feeding pigs can be carried along with great success from the time they are two months old.

It is always best to get the little pigs eating crushed grain or whole oats as quickly as possible.

They will begin to eat when they are a month old if they are given the chance.

Agricultural Prize Lists in Last Stage of Completion

The 600 copies of the Prize List for the sixth annual fair of the Vermilion Agricultural Society are now in binding stage and will be handed over to the Secy-Treas. of the society, R. A. Taylor for distribution the end of this week. The list this year comprises 48 pages against 32 last year. The pages are narrower but much deeper and the list contains a greater amount of matter than that of 1910. The agricultural society occupy 18 pages and 30 pages are solid advertising running to some $200.00. The list of specials is large and the donations of a valuable nature. Entries are stated to positively close Sept. 16—the Fair date being Tuesday, Sept. 19th.

THAT FARM HOME

What is there more inducing to the average farmer's son or for that matter the hired man himself to stay on the farm than attractive home-like comfortable surroundings, connected with the farm home.

How many hired men these days coming from good farm homes in the east, or even the old land that are asked to sleep over some filthy, mouse ridden granary, the whole summer through. He has his worldly wardrobe up there with him, and makes attempts to make himself presentable for probably Sunday church, or a church concert, or a picnic, or probably even for visitors with whom he is supposed to eat his meals.

Probably the granary has a rough, rotten floor, or the roof may leak, making every thing very uncomfortable for him during some stormy night. Or again, the place may be filled with refuse of all kinds, old harness, old torn or half-mouse eaten sacks. His cot or whatever excuse he has for a sleeping place may be in a dilapitated condition, and often through the night the thing may collapse with him. Then he being too tired or out of patience with the condition of affairs to fix it over again, will sleep upon it the way it fell with him. Then in the morning he will waken up with a cold and out of sorts with things in general, and determine to quit at the end of the month. Thus a continual round of change of hired men. The hired man is human and in many cases has been used to a far superior home than that in which he is now living.

You may say that it is plenty good enough for him, probably you may think so, and probably he does not think the same, the result is he moves to more congenial quarters at the first opportunity and then you need another one. The constant changing of hired men tend to make ...

Cream-nut Fudge:—To two cupfuls of granulated sugar add three-fourths of a cup of milk and cook until it forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Then add one-tablespoonful of butter, let cook three minutes, remove from the fire and add one cupful of chopped nut meats. Stir thoroughly, cool in a buttered pan, and cut into small squares.

Prop swinging barn doors open, no matter whether the wind blows or not. You can't tell when it will, and slamming doors lead to broken doors and that means loss.

Needles are small and easily lost, but just secure a small bottle to keep them in and you will not be bothered that way any more.

For five cents you can get a brush that will help wash the vegetables for the table, before cooking. Saves wear and tear on the hands.

Wild oats make a bad autumn crop.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE SUMMER COMPLAINT

Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are babies or young children. In no time of the year is baby in such danger as in summer. At the first sign of illness the Tablets should be given to the little one, for summer complaints come on so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand baby may be beyond help in a few hours. The Tablets should never fail to relieve the sick child and if occasionally given to the well child will keep him well. Mrs. Desire Martin, St. Dennis, Que., writes: "I have a baby three months old who suffered from colic and constipation. Castor Oil was of no help at all, but Baby's Own Tablets speedily cured him and now I always keep them in the house." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

To the Heroines

WE CANNOT refrain from taking off our hats to the ones who are rarely recognized publicly for their heroism during any war. We refer to the ones who do not fight battles, plan campaigns, beat drums and sound the bugles. They are not on the battlefield at all. They sit home, and quietly and in misery keep the children and wait for the return.

Who can overbalance the active courage of the battle against the quiet, helpless, courageous working in the dark? The cannon's opening roar is not so ominous as the beating of a heart at terrible news that one's dear ones have been swept out of life. The sorrow of defeat is no greater than hopeless despair day by day.

To our women, then, we offer a humble, loving acknowledgment of their bravery. Whether in the north or south, in any wars and in all lands, we place a wreath of rosemary—for remembrance.

The women who smile bravely through life's battle, who meet the obstacles day by day and either surmount them or accept defeat courageously are just as much heroes as soldiers on the firing line.

So while our hats are off, let us cheer for the heroes—and the heroines!

O Captain My Captain

O CAPTAIN! my Captain! our fearful trip is done.
The ship has weathered every rack, the prize we sought is won.
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring.
But O heart! heart! heart!
O the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead!

O Captain! my Captain! rise up and hear the bells.
Rise up—for you the flag is flung—for you the bugle trills,
For you bouquets and ribboned wreaths—for you the shores accrowding,
For you they call, the swaying mass, their eager faces turning.
Here, Captain! dear father!
This arm beneath your head!
It is some dream that on the deck
You've fallen cold and dead.

My Captain does not answer, his lips are pale and still,
My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will,
The ship is anchored safe and sound its voyage closed and done
From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won.
Exult, O shores, and ring O bells!
But I, with mournful tread,
Walk the deck my Captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead.

—Walt Whitman.

Yellow Roses

MISS ELLEN sat at ease beside the open window and looked out upon her garden, glowing in the late May sunshine ...

Are You A Doormat?

WHETHER it is better to be scraped, beaten, bruised, worn out and finally thrown out on the dump, or to rise in justified righteous indignation—that is the question.

I think that the doormat attitude is not a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Once a doormat means a second and a third occurrence, and the result is—always the post.

Are you a doormat? There are several varieties of doormats. There is the good-looking mat, that resists the scraping process with commendable assiduity. Again and again relatives can wipe their metaphorical feet on the country cousin, and she smiles and beams and is just as bright as ever. Droves of the city folk can motor out to her big farmhouse—just for something different, you know. They are tired of hotel fare and are now filled with a back-to-nature yearning. Therefore, they will be pleased to be filled with Cousin Sarah's homemade pies. So the doormat spends the week-end in the kitchen, and the scrapers have an unusual sort of time, by Jove! They leave. The idea of taking the smiling doormat back to the city in their forty-horsepower machine never dawns on their superior minds.

That type of woman is a doormat and doesn't know it. I do not know whether she ought to be told or not. It's a question very hard to decide.

In a large club or circle of workers the division is usually quite clearly marked. Drones and workers, loungers and doormats, walkers and walked overs—so the story goes. It is not exactly the division of labor, for there is no division; the condition is a forced monopoly of work.

When the annual fair or sale takes place for the decoration of the parish house, or for the furnishing of fans for summer, some delightful good-hearted doormats will volunteer to see the thing through. So the willing hearts and hands make the cakes, hang the bunting, sell the tickets and then undo the work the next day. Right here I may add that those who are not doormats volunteer directions and adverse criticisms. Sometimes doormatting is its own reward, and this is one of them; but it is very wearing, and any overscraping destroys a generosity in the nature. By dint of much doormatting the woman joins the silent ones in the next church which she attends.

In business! (Hands up in horror, please!) This is the point at which the doormat attitude does not pay. There is one person in your business that must look out for you, because others will not and that person is you. Perhaps the condition is traceable to the fact that the personal element is eliminated in the business world, but there is a reprehensible tendency to convert human beings into doormats of the tough, wearing variety.

A hardening process that antedates Locke and his theory has accumulated force with the years, and is now at its zenith.

"Wipe your feet" on the official doormat. There is one in every business. It's the case of "the manager kicks the office boy and the office boy the cat." When the kick is no longer passed, you have found the doormat.

"Give that extra work to Hawkins. He can't kick." So the doormat accepts the extra burden with a concealed rebellious feeling that would bring tears to his eyes if he had time. He hasn't. Pile on the work, gentlemen! Scrape your shoes and kick ... gently, for the doormat cannot object. He began business wrong, and he ... his family and he hasn't a ... spirit left, anyhow. So help yourselves.

I remember, years ago, a ... who was seated at the end of a row of desks. He was a doormat of the good natured kind. He watched the papers come down the row, each pupil taking the best in the pack handed to him. The last pencil generally arrived at this desk in a disreputable condition. Well, Ben accepted this condition of affairs for weeks and weeks. Finally he interviewed the teacher. "Miss Blank, do I look like that?" he said, pointing to the mat before the door. No, he didn't. "Well, the fellers think so—an I don't want 'em to get a wrong idea. I'd like to give some other scraper a chance."

The humor of the thing appealed, and the doormat had its position changed. The class also was treated to a dissertation on doormats, their use and abuse, and the entire atmosphere was changed, just because one boy objected to the injustice of the thing and objected in the right way.

That's the point of the story. Righteous indignation, followed by calm objection will do much to change conditions. If justice be an absent factor in your business, it is time to change letterheads. Personal pride is one of the greatest contributing agents to success. The doormat lacks this element, or it would not be one.

The more you allow men and women to walk over you the more they will do it. The law of habit is exemplified in doormats. Be a man! Be a self respecting individual! Be a woman! Be a sport, and object when, for no sensible, respectable reason, some one treats you as if you were a harmless, necessary mat.

The servile acquiescence to a scraper never accomplished much in this world of ours. You were not endowed with personal pride and self-respect if it were not intended that they should be used. If you are a doormat, throw yourself away and begin again. But don't make a doormat out of the other fellow!

BARBARA LEE.

WANTED—Man to take charge of farm steady job to right man. Apply Brunswick Hotel, Vermilion

1. The portion of the present plant, comprising the gas producer and gas engine has been considered ineffectual and obsolete. This leaves only the dynamo, switchboard, building and lot and the pole line and wire to be considered.

2.—Of the various suggestions made in the report of the engineers the council chose (A) to endeavor to purchase the present plant exclusive of the gas producer and engine. (B) Or failing that to erect and equip an entirely new plant steam operated.

A. Would cost the town $15,-[illegible]000. B. Would cost the town the sum of $12,270.00. A would give the town an 35 K. W. dynamo [illegible] of about 2000 [illegible] C. P. capacity. B would give the town a [illegible]0 K. W. dynamo with about 1300 lamp capacity.

The estimated revenue of the plant is the sum of $6000.00 the estimated expenditure of the plant the sum of $6375.00. Net loss per annum $375.00.

The members of the council feel that due allowance has been made for expenditure and are fully convinced that the estimated revenue is not as large it might be but prefer to be conservative, and there is every reason to believe that the revenue will soon be, by the natural growth of the town so that the deficit shall not extend beyond the first year of operation of the plant and the value of the light as an advertising medium to the trains must not be overlooked, as the coming or leaving on the late trains will surely count for something.

The voting on the by-law will take place on Saturday the 12th, and the secretary will be on hand in the Council Chamber of the town hall and will show any interested citizens the full reports of the engineers and also various estimates so that any and every ratepayer can go into the matter before casting his vote for or against the by-law.

On behalf of the Council of the Town of Vermilion.

Faith in Vermilion

J. W. G. Morrison, barrister, states to the Standard that he has just completed arrangements with agencies of English and Scottish capitalists, whereby $200,000.00 have been placed at his disposal for loans on improved farms in the district of Vermilion. This is the largest amount of private capital that has come into the district for investment purposes and shows that Vermilion stands well on the list with British investors.

A Sham Love Fight

In Which the Lady Holds Her Own to the Last

By F. A. Mitchel

Copyright by American Press Association.

"Marcella," said Major Harrington, "I shall never give it up."

"Major," replied the young lady, "you are wasting your time and energy. ... You must have learned that, and if you expect to marry it is time you were making up to some girl who will be disposed to look favorably on your suit."

"I am making up to a very nice girl, a girl who will eventually look favorably on my suit."

"If you refer to me, I must tell you again that you are mistaken."

"It shall be my part to convince you that it is you who are mistaken."

"Enough of this war of words. Good night."

"Tomorrow there is to be a sham battle. Are you to be on the field?"

"I am to be aid ... of the general of the ..."

"Indeed, that is quite an honor. General Snigson is not given to inviting women to participate with him in army maneuvers."

"Goodby. I would advise you to try a certain young lady whose father wears an eagle on his shoulder."

"Thank you. I shall stick to the ..."

[illegible]

[illegible]

... Then, sheathing his sword, he dismounted, gave his horse to an orderly, and, going to a tree, lay down on his back in the shade. The fine tickled his nose as he covered his face with his handkerchief. One of his captains remarked that he looked as if he had been killed practically as well as theoretically.

How long the major lay there he didn't know, for he went to sleep. He was awakened by the tread of horses' hoofs on the turf and was about to rise and salute some general who was doubtless riding by with his staff when he heard a voice that he recognized as that of the general of the blue.

"Who's the dead man?"

"Major Harrington."

A shriek.

Harrington took in the situation at once. The shriek had come from General Snigson's aid, Miss Laraway. Instead of rising and ending the fight it would be more entertaining for Marcella if he lay still. Besides, he wished to hear the rest.

"He isn't dead, Miss Laraway, any more than the rest of his command. They're all theoretically killed."

This was said by the chief of staff. The general had ... and turned away. All that Harrington heard after that was the tread of horses' hoofs as the party rode away.

[illegible]

Harrington sat up and looked about him. Some distance away were the general of the blue and his staff ...

BEGGARS OF LONDON.

Many of Them Partial to the Sham Sickly Infant Scheme.

There is no city in Europe, according to an American citizen who has returned from a business trip to England, where there may be seen so many beggars in the streets as in the British metropolis, says the Washington Herald.

"These beggars—halt, blind, maimed—come for the most part from the 'beggars' colony,' the most lawless district in all London. It is hidden in the heart of mean streets in the borough of Kensington and is called Nottingdale.

"These 'tale pitchers,' as they call themselves, are men and women who hire starved looking children by the day to enlist the sympathy of the benevolent. There are old soldiers and sailors, with bogus boards and records complete; there are 'shabby genteel' men in tattered frock coats and carefully brushed broken boots, who talk of 'college days;' there are the musical beggars, who live by singing; there are the begging letter writers, and, finally, there are the beggars who solicit under the pretext of offering matches, collar buttons or shoestrings for sale.

"A 'tale pitcher' who knows the ropes can hire a sickly infant at the rate of about 12 cents a day. An unusually wretched looking infant will be dearer, but a whole family of neglected infants can be borrowed for 48 cents and 'no questions asked.' Many of these professional beggars make as much as $4 a day."

When others seem so wrong."

How very many people there are in the world who are not understood, even by their closest friends and relations. Sometimes, but not always, they are quiet, observant people, who do not talk much but who "look on," maybe criticising and judging others—not favorably, perhaps, because they do not come up to their own standard of what is right and proper. They seldom let their feelings come to the surface or put their troubled thoughts into words. Perhaps they feel intensely any neglect or indifference on the part of their friends, but, rather than speak about it, they wrap themselves in a mantle of cold reserve and suffer in silence, and so earn for themselves the reputation of being unloving and unsympathetic.

They gather false impressions and hug them closer as the days go by, and thus they are not "understood."

To be misunderstood by those we love is the cross and bitterness of life.

Very often these undemonstrative people make truer friends than their more gushing neighbors. A log will burn much longer and stronger than a whole bundle of thorn bushes. Beneath a cold exterior sometimes beats a heart that is warm and tender. The heart knoweth its own bitterness, and there are many who have secret troubles and have had bitter disappointments, but who yet contrive to remain sweet. There are so many hard places along the road for most of us. Each day brings its vexations, its pettiness, and its small miseries. We are not all constituted alike, and ...

THE FARMER SHOULD PRODUCE HIS OWN LIVING

One reason why the farmers of the last century always had money stored away in a bag behind the chimney, was that the farm was a factory in which almost everything needed in the home was produced, so that while the amount received for the crops was not so large as the returns of today, it was not necessary to pay it all out for subsistence. Those were the days of large families, when it was common to find eight, ten or twelve strong, healthy boys and girls sitting at the table, each of them a contributor to the family fortune and many hands made light burdens.

It would not pay us of this generation to spin our own wool, weave our own cloth and knit our own stockings, but there is much we buy at the store and warehouse that we might produce more cheaply and of better quality at home. At how many farm homes does the baker stop with his aerated bread? If the farmer were to take his own wheat to the mill he would get wholesome flour and middlings and also bran in return, and that would lessen his feed bill. How often does the butcher stop at the farm house with twenty-cent steaks, twenty-two cent roasts, and other cuts at proportionate rates? And yet the farmer by taking a little trouble could have his own meat the greater part of the year, and at probably a third the price he pays the butcher. If more alfalfa were grown there would be smaller feed bills and if the hoops were tightened on the old churn and a little time given to butter-making, it would not be necessary for the farmer to buy creamery butter at fifty cents a pound.

TELLING HIS FORTUNE

"Have you ever had your fortune told, Mr. Wincomb?"

"Yes. A lady told my fortune only about a week ago."

"What did she tell you was going to happen to you?"

"I don't believe you would much care to hear, would you?"

"Oh, yes, really I'm awfully interested. You know I tell fortunes—a little—myself. Suppose I tell yours and you can decide whether there's anything in it or not."

"Very well, go ahead."

"I shall have to look at your hand."

"Here it is."

"Well, let me see. Oh, you have an awfully interesting hand. You are going to live a long, long time."

"She told me the same thing."

"And you are going to be—not terribly rich—but fairly wealthy."

"You have a very strong will. Did the other lady tell you that?"

"Yes."

"And you possess artistic taste and would have been a successful actor if you had gone upon the stage."

"You're getting it just as she did."

"And—and—yes—you are going to be married within a year."

"Exactly what she told me. Can you see anything about the lady's personal appearance?"

"She will be about ... with brownish hair and beautiful ... eyes ... —and——"

"Go on, please."

"Oh, I don't believe I can say any more."

"Please look again. Do I know her now?"

"Yes. You have known her for several weeks."

By-Laws Carried

Electric Light and Side-Walk By-Laws Endorsed by Ratepayers

The By-laws submitted to the ratepayers by the town council and on which the vote was taken Saturday last, received a strong endorsation, both carrying by large majorities. The sidewalk by-law developed very little opposition only 3 votes being cast against the raising by debenture of the sum of $[illegible] for this purpose; on the other hand, 12 votes were recorded against the Electric Light By-law to raise $15,000.00 by debenture, to install a municipal owned and operated electric light plant.

The vote stood as follows:

ing the peculiarity in the herds of creation.

One day, having surprised a man making a more deliberate and careful scrutiny than usual, she expressed her opinion to James, the elevator man.

"You needn't talk about the vanity of women after that," she exclaimed scornfully. "Men look at themselves twice as long and twice as intently as the vainest woman that ever breathed."

"You didn't hear what he said to you, did you?"

"No."

"He said he'd been away for four days, and he just wanted to see how he looked."

The Horseman

Last month at Indianapolis, Ind., R. J. Mackenzie of Winnipeg bought four [illegible] trotting-bred stock for export back to Canada. The horses are [illegible]

... Indianapolis that the same owner's Chamber of Commerce candidate, Joe Patchen II., had recently worked a mile in 2:03¼, with the last half in one minute and the last quarter in 30 seconds.

This work undoubtedly demonstrates that the big son of Joe Patchen Bessie Hanchill has a rare turn of speed and also that he will be ready for the races when the bell rings, but all the talk about this horse being favorite for the Detroit classic is "bunk" pure and simple. Why should he be? He has never been in a hard race or shown that he is a real race horse, while some of the others that he will have to meet at Detroit and other places along the line have raced well. For instance, Brasham Baugh [illegible] right around 2:04 heat after heat last year, and before the campaign of 1918 was more than half through it was common talk that he was being saved for the big slow pacing stakes [illegible], and it was also figured that all of the rich purses were made to order for him.

[illegible] matter of fact Joe Patchen II. has nothing to warrant his occupying the position of favorite over Brasham [illegible]

A SEARCHING INVESTIGATION WILL PROVE SUPERIORITY OF

IDEAL WOVEN WIRE FENCE

Investigate IDEAL fence. Do like the railways. Test the laterals for elasticity—the uprights for stiffness. Test both for smoothness and heaviness of galvanizing. Test the lock for gripping-tenacity. Put a roll on the scales and weigh it. The more searching your investigation the greater the triumph of IDEAL fence.

When finished, you will have indisputable evidence that IDEAL is the stiffest, strongest, heaviest, most rust-proof woven fence. If you are like the railways you will erect for permanency. That means an order for IDEAL fence. But first of all let us send you our free booklet, so you can see the different styles for hogs, cattle, etc.

For Services Rendered

Tom Pott brought his remarks to a forcible peroration.

"What I say is this, Jim. If it's the fat for the boss, it's a fair screw for the man who's helpin' to make the profit. And you've got to ask for it, or take the goods to another market. Look at me. I touched fifty bob last week."

"I've been at thirty for the last four years," Jim confessed, gloomily.

"There you are!" cried Tom. "Case in point. Here's me and you, twin brothers, images of each other, both presumably endowed with the same intelligence and both pen-drivers. Here's me pouchin' fifty weekly, and you touchin' a measly thirty. Here's both of us with the annual leave, me for the seaside and very likely a run over to the Continong, and you sitting in those beastly diggings nibblin' your nails or paddlin' around the park. Why?"

"You haven't the rotten luck to have old Narrerby for a boss," returned Jim. "He's a skinflint."

"You're for bread and cheese all your blessed life, while other chaps, who're not afraid to put their hands out, grab the pie. Come with me, and get a bit of manhood into you," rejoined Tom.

"I'm not going out this year," Jim answered. "I want the cash for another purpose."

Tom looked at him with surprise.

"Don't say it's a case," he laughed.

"You've guessed it," admitted Jim.

"Meanto say you've found a sensible girl who'll jump at you and your paltry thirty?"

"She don't know the figure," returned Jim.

"Thinks it's more. Going on now for four years, and her people are beginning to throw nasty hints. I'm anxious to save every shilling."

Tom grinned knowingly.

"You've been doing the three pound a week, J. Pott, Esquire," he remarked. "When they get to know—"

"They haven't got to," Jim interrupted, decidedly.

"Anybody I've met?" asked Tom.

"No," replied Jim. "But you'd like her. Name of Emma Blossom, at present parlour-maid with no other than Mrs. Narrerby. Mrs. N. thinks there's nobody like Emma."

"And she's pining for a home of her own, eh? What are you going to do about it?"

Jim found his hat.

"I'm going round to her people for an hour," he said. "What time's your train?"

"In an hour," answered Tom. "Sure you won't come? Well, take my advice, and let me know what you want for a wedding present. So long!"

"Good time!" Jim jerked out, as he moved away.

"Evenin', mother. Evenin', dad," he said, entering the little house with an assumed air of jauntiness. "How's things?"

"We've just been havin' a little argyment," said Mr. Blossom. "Mother declares the sparks of to-day ain't half so eager to settle down an' make some good, sensible, willin' girl happy as they were in her time. I've been stickin' up for our side."

Tom rubbed his chin thoughtfully.

"They don't marry quite so soon," he agreed. "Struggle for existence is keener for one thing."

"Peg was twenty, I was twenty-two, when we got wed," Mr. Blossom observed. "We don't regret it, eh, mother?"

The lady laughed and wagged her head.

"How old might you be?" queried the artful parent.

"I'm twenty-eight," Jim answered shortly.

"Fancy, mother, I'd been married six year at his age."

"And I'd had three at Em's," the lady smiled.

"Try a pipe," said Jim, offering his pouch. "Shouldn't be surprised if tomorrow turns out fine."

"How long have you been coming here, Jim?" asked the father. "Peg says seven years; I say six."

"Only four," Jim returned easily.

"You won't see Em for a bit," the air confided. "She's gone to the sea with the family."

"She told me," Jim mumbled.

"Wonderful how the missus has taken to her. Hard, domineering little [illegible] Narrerby's under [illegible] down proper."

"I've heard," said Jim. "He works [illegible]"

"You're doing pretty well, with [illegible]," Mr. Blossom insinuated.

"Oh, so-so," remarked Jim, rising. [illegible]

In the street he stopped with clenched hands.

"I'll see him first thing in the morning," he muttered.

II

At the time I knows, Mr. Ephraim Narrerby, who was seated at his desk busily writing, shot out a gruff "Come in!" [illegible] Jim Pott edged through the doorway.

"Well?" growled Ephraim.

"I wanted to ask you for an advance [illegible]"

Ephraim glared at him sternly for several seconds.

[illegible]

Ephraim looked up as his manager entered his office.

"Ah, Morris," he said, "I shall be away probably until Wednesday. My folk are at the sea. Reserve anything requiring my attention until my return."

"Very good!" exclaimed the manager.

"And keep your eye on that fellow Pott. He's getting too big for his boots. If you find him slacking, let me know."

Two hours later Ephraim stepped from a taxi at Charing Cross Station. Before his peremptory lady had left for St. Ives he had assured her that if pressing business did not prevent him he would join her. As to that event his station would have been Paddington; some matter of moment apparently required his presence elsewhere.

III

On the subsequent Monday week, at nine o'clock in the morning, Jim Pott returned to his duties.

The cashier threw him a nod as he entered and shortly afterwards approached his stool.

"What the dickens have you been up to, Pott?" he shot out. "Since he came back on Wednesday the guv'nor's been like a madman. Wants to see you the instant he arrives!"

Jim stared at him in wide-eyed surprise. Before he could return an answer Ephraim himself strode into the office.

"Pott, I want you!" he jerked out.

Inwardly quaking, Jim followed him to his room.

Ephraim turned on him as soon as the door closed.

"Have you told any of those fellows where you've spent your holiday?" he demanded fiercely.

"No, sir," returned Jim.

"Did you write to that girl while you were away?"

"No, sir, I did not," answered Jim.

"Do her people know where you've been?"

"They do not," replied Jim.

Ephraim turned, and shut up the roll of his desk. When he looked round again his expression was almost agreeable.

"They need not know," he suggested. "Nobody need be told!"

Jim stared at him blankly.

"Before leaving for the holiday you stated a request which I refused," said Ephraim. "I've been thinking the matter over. After all, it's only human for a man who has found the right girl to wish to marry as soon as possible. From this week you will draw fifty shillings!"

Jim, doubting if he had heard aright, stood with mouth slightly agape.

"You—you mean this?" he stammered incredulously.

Ephraim stared at him queerly. The fellow's surprise was cleverly assumed.

"I shall require you to earn it," he said, with a grim smile.

Jim laughed.

"I thank you, sir," he faltered. "You—you don't know what this means to me!"

Ephraim grunted. He fancied he knew quite well what it meant to him.

"Not a word to that Blossom [illegible] of last Monday night!" he snapped.

"Not a word to a living soul!"

The command banished the laugh from Jim's face. For a few seconds he wondered if Ephraim was quite himself.

"I must have your promise, or—"

"Not a blessed word!" ejaculated Jim instantly. After such generous treatment, I—"

"That's understood then," Ephraim interrupted. "You can go!"

And scarcely knowing whether he was on his head or his heels, Jim returned to his desk.

ACTIONS APPROVED

The outcome of the lighting question for the town which has loomed up large in the deliberations of the Council for the past twelve months and which has been finally settled in the endorsation of the Electric Light by-law by the ratepayers on Saturday last, cannot fail but be a [illegible] source of satisfaction to everyone in the town.

The carrying of the by-law, while it assures light for the town—also is a vindication and stamp of approval of the actions of the council in dealing with the Vermilion Electric Supply Co. The report of the Engineers [illegible] gaged by the town, is sufficient to show that the money advanced by the town looked liked a very poor investment. The principal [illegible] gisting the old company [illegible] right but if it had been [illegible] in the vain expectation that [illegible] would finally come, the [illegible] tainly would not have been desirable in face of the later developments.

AT EDMONTON

At a convention of Liberals in Edmonton Wednesday, Hon. A. C. Rutherford, ex-Premier of the province, was nominated as a candidate for the Dominion House. A Liberal convention is to be called shortly by the provincial executive at which the Hon. Frank Oliver, minister of the Interior, will be nominated.

AID SOCIETY

Every community in the Province of Alberta should have a live active Children's Aid Society. There are always cases of neglect and cruelty in every part of the country, which should come under the care of some person or persons who would be responsible for bringing the details of the case to the attention of the Department of Neglected Children, in order that the parents might be prosecuted for the criminal neglect of those for whom they should be [illegible]

[illegible]

PREVENTION

The most successful way of preventing people from developing into criminals, is by filling their lives so full of healthy, normal affairs that there will be no danger of having time for mischief or for the depredations which usual[ly] develop criminals.

Miss Grace Abbott, director of the League for the Protection of Emigrant Children, states that children who come from rural districts where they have been filled with wholesome outdoor exercise, or children who come from the districts of Germany, where supervised exercise is prescribed, are absolutely free from criminal taint upon their arrival in this country, and [illegible] only after spending some months in the tenement districts of the American cities, that these children fall from grace. Miss Abbott is convinced that education along the lines of play is the solution of the problem of juvenile crime.

One of the greatest features of the Boy Scout movement is the fact that it fills the boy's life full of active physical work, at the same time developing ideality to the extent of making him consider it beneath his dignity as a true Boy Scout to do anything which would result in harm to his own life or to the property or character of others.

[illegible] smaller centres to find philanthropists who will donate gymnasiums or club-rooms, but it should be possible for every village council to set aside athletic fields for purposes of team play in the summer and to be used as skating rinks in the winter.

School teachers should be interested enough in the children to give a little of their time to supervising their play and organizing them into teams for purposes of competition. This means only the investment of a little bit of money on the part of the councils, [illegible] time and energy on the part of teachers and leaders in the community and the result will be reaped a hundred fold in character and citizenship, in a very short time.

To Control Natural Resources

Conference of Premiers at Ottawa Results Favorably

Ottawa, August 14th.—The three prairie provinces will be given control of natural resources by the Federal Government, minerals—waterpower and second-class land—all except homestead lands. Manitoba and Saskatchewan will be extended to the Hudson Bay and Alberta to the Peace River.

The settlement will give the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta all mines, minerals, mineral land and royalties, all lumber and timber land, swamp land, grazing land, all land requiring irrigation and all water and water power covered by the irrigation act.

The only question of principle left unsettled is how much—if any—of the revenue now allowed the province in lieu of lands should be cut off, and this will be discussed at a conference held between the members of the Dominion cabinet and the provincial premiers as soon as possible after the ministers return from their constituencies and doubtless will be settled on a fair basis.

The principal has been recognized that the three prairie provinces are entitled to their natural resources the same as the other provinces of the Dominion with the single exception of the land fairly fit for homesteading without expenditure of money, which land must be retained by the Dominion for free homesteads in compliance with its immigration policy and promises.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued

The Letter

[illegible]

. . . leave Starlight with her. He wasn't as good for knockin' around as a range pony, and I didn't know what I'd be doin', so I took my staff off him, picked out a tough little mustang from the home herd, shook hands with her again, an' started. I glanced up toward old Savage, and she read my thoughts. "I'll take flowers to him now and again," sez she, "and I'll go up there and talk to him about you, and Happy, Happy, we'll both be lonesome until you come back." And so I kissed her on the lips, and rode away the second time.

SHERMAN AS A COLLEGE PRESIDENT

As I believe that he was the ablest and best college president that I ever knew, so I believe that he was the greatest grand strategist of our civil war. This tribute to General Sherman comes from a man who taught in the Louisiana State Seminary and Military Academy, now the Louisiana State University, while Sherman was its superintendent during the two years preceding the outbreak of the war. [illegible] organized and started the school and was its first head and Mr. David F. Boyd, who writes this tribute, was a professor in the great soldier's faculty. [illegible] The American College, New York, was his Professor of Ancient Languages, and later his successor. He tells of their first meeting:

I [illegible] in the afternoon of the day before our Louisiana State Seminary was to open, I reported at the office of the superintendent, Col. W. T. Sherman. He was absent. I was received by a sprightly young man, the orderly. [illegible] Sherman soon came. He received me very kindly, and graciously [illegible] with him and in his chat [illegible] was chatted about everything. He was then as he ever was, the prince of talkers. I fell in love with him at first sight. His appearance then was very striking. Tall, angular, with figure slightly bent, bright hazel eyes and auburn hair, with a tuft of it behind that would, when he was a little excited, stick straight out.

Mr. Boyd soon learned that Sherman was a born organizer and executive officer who could run successfully any enterprise "from a saw mill up to an army [illegible] men."

One soon saw in him two men, the stern exacting man of business or duty and the kind, sympathetic friend and adviser. [illegible]

[illegible] ing an office with a salary of $4,000 a year and house free of cost, to return North a poor man with nothing assured for the support of his family. This was Sherman's first sacrifice for the Union.

I happened to be with him in his private room when the mail came, telling us of the actual passage of the Ordinance of Secession of South Carolina. Sherman burst out crying, and began, in his nervous way, pacing the floor and deprecating the step which he feared might bring destruction on the whole country. Every now and then he would stop and, addressing himself to me, he would exclaim, as if broken-hearted, "You, you people of the South, believe there can be peaceable secession. You don't know what you are doing. I know there can be no such thing as peaceable secession. If you will have it, the North must fight you for its own preservation. Yes, South Carolina has by this act of secession precipitated war. Other Southern states will follow through sympathy. This country will be drenched in blood. God only knows how it will end. Perhaps the liberties of the whole country, of every section and every man, will be destroyed, and yet you know that within the Union no man's liberty or property in all the South is endangered. Then why should any Southern State leave the Union? Oh, it is all folly, madness, a crime against civilization!"

Governor Moore, even before the passage of the Ordinance of Secession by Louisiana, had seized the forts in lower Louisiana and the barracks and arsenal at Baton Rouge with all its munitions of war. Our school was a State ordnance post and Sherman was still ordnance officer, and so a large consignment of the captured muskets and munitions was shipped to him. I shall never forget his disgust and mortification that he was thus called upon to take a part, however insignificant, in what he called "treason." He complained to me most bitterly that the Governor and Bragg, his military adviser, would expect and ask of him as it were to do such a thing, and his receipt for those arms was his only act of aid and comfort to the Confederacy. Southerner and Confederate as I was, I could but sympathize with him—a victim of circumstances placed in a false position.

Shortly Louisiana seceded, and his resignation went promptly in.

The morning he left he and the last [illegible]

THE BOND OF FEAR IN TURKEY

How The Hidden Cabal is Breaking Down

[illegible]

. . . that the bond of fear is now loosened. The revolution, as the Americans say, has "made good." It is two years since the last active adherents of Abdul Hamid writhed in the air at the end of a rope on Galata Bridge. The committee party has established itself well, now it begins to fall to pieces. It is not afraid of reaction any more in the sense of a return of Abdul Hamid or a despotism of the old kind. The cord that bound the faggot together has worn through. The political bundle that we called the Young Turks is falling apart.

It was bound to. Look at the diversity of its constituent parts, you find clever, ambitious political adventurers in it (the term is not used in a bad sense), like Djavid and Hussein Djahid—the Radicals, the Socialists. You have the staider, less clever, less Radical Prime Minister and many others of his color. Then there are the senior officers of the army, who are rather inclined to be impatient under the dominance of the political section of the Committee Party, and the junior Committee-trained officers who are said to be ready to support it. You have that cautious old man the Minister for War, who is at the head of the army and, knowing that the army is the great thing in Turkey, is biding his time in a correct and non-committal manner that is very upsetting for people who are inclined to be afraid of him. There is too the very important religionist element, Ulemas, whose mentality is precisely on the level of that of an English mediaeval priest, and who are inclined, as he did, to regard politics in the light of a struggle for power between the religious and the civil elements in the State.

The first and most manifest effect of the loosening of the party's bond of union has so far been to reduce the outward political life of Turkey to the level of a rowdy schoolboys' debating society. Politically, of course, the Turks are in fact no more than children. They have no political traditions, no parliamentary experience or precedent. No party in the chamber is pledged to a definite and intelligible programme. Members change their positions from day to day. Their political convictions are confused with personal jealousies and antagonisms. During the last ten days they have lost respect for their leaders, the only thing that could keep them in any semblance of order. The Grand Vizier is with difficulty persuading new hands to fill the vacancies in the [illegible]

THE COLDEST PLACE ON EARTH

What is said to be coldest place on the globe is the region of Verkhoiansk, Siberia. Here is a convict station, but during the most of the year no guards are needed to keep the prisoners from running away, for in the more severe portions of the winter no living creature can remain in the open, and during the three most severe months, when 85 degrees below zero, no one dares to venture out for more than a few moments at a time.

Ordinary steel tools will snap like glass and unseasoned wood becomes almost as hard as steel. When one breathes a powder like the very finest snow falls at one's feet. It is said that there are less forms of animal life here than elsewhere in the world, and some of those found are not found elsewhere, seemingly having been created especially to inhabit so frigid a region.

FACTS ABOUT GLASS

[illegible]

The Rocking Chair

ONE of the most awful crimes ever contemplated in Canada is that which is announced to take place at Sault Ste. Marie, in August, when Angelina Napolitano is to be hanged for killing her husband with an axe. The date of her execution was graciously fixed for the middle of August so that such a trifle as the hanging of the mother may not interfere with the birth of her baby in July.

The women of Canada are petitioning the Minister of Justice for a commutation of the sentence, this being all that is ever left for women to do. The men in their stupidity make blunders daily—horrible criminal blunders—then the women come forward and do their little best to rectify these blunders.

Every Canadian woman is horror-struck at the awful crime these jurymen of Sault Ste. Marie have committed, not so much a crime against the mother as a crime against the unborn baby. The probabilities are that it will be sent into the world either a ready made criminal or an idiot. For even though the petitioners should be successful in obtaining some change of sentence it will be too late to be of much benefit to the child, for the awful agony of mind endured by this poor woman, awaiting not only the dangers of child-birth but the certainty of a disgraceful death should she live through her first trial, must have the worst possible effect on the nature of her child.

The brute who was her husband [illegible] every day of his life, he beat her till she was in such a state she had to be taken to the hospital and he tried to force her to earn money for him by leading an immoral life, but as he was a man and the jurymen also [illegible] decided that Angelina was guilty of murder [illegible] she had rid the world of a dangerous [illegible] murder is against the law, but when [illegible] there are always plenty of extenuating circumstances [illegible] an abnormal state of mind incident to the increasing of the population in the way ordained by Nature [illegible]

I am sure the Garden of Eden was located in the Qu'Appelle valley, for it looks as though there was nothing it might not produce and provide for, from an elephant to a bumble bee, or from an onion to a palm tree.

When Adam was naming things he gave the Assiniboine River this name because he couldn't help it. He just simply knew it must be Assiniboine because it looked like Assiniboine, and everywhere from its mouth to its source it looks the same; any one of its snaky curves can be recognized at once; everywhere its waters are the same color, its banks are everywhere covered by the same fluffy willows and it makes always the same shaped curve.

Having once seen the Assiniboine from Main Street bridge you might be dropped from an airship anywhere along its course and immediately realize that you were still on the good old Assiniboine.

Last week we reported the visit of a committee from Vermilion to Lloydminster with a view to obtaining the location of a creamery at this point. Lloydminster is to hold a meeting on Thursday evening, August 24th, when the matter will be discussed and the committee from Vermilion will be present. The date of the Vermilion meeting is Tuesday August 22nd in the Royal George Theatre at 8 p.m.

Last week we reported in the Standard that a creamery was to be established at Vermilion as soon as 100 cows had been secured. Since then, stock at a depth of 6 feet was struck at the top of the hill. Mr. Mosely pumped the water out to a depth of 15 feet, when it again rose to the old level, showing the supply to be a heavy one.

Sad Fatality In The Town

John A. Welsh, A Rancher, Was Thrown From His Horse and Has Skull Fractured

John Welsh, a young rancher, who has been stopping at the Messrs. Cummings ranch one mile north of town, for the past month or so, was thrown from his horse at the corner of Main St. and Alberta ave shortly before 6 o'clock to-night, and had his skull fractured, death resulting shortly after seven.

The fatality was the outcome of a race round the block in business section of the town. The dead man and W. Cummins mounted their horses at the Brunscombe Block to race to the corner of Main and Alberta Ave, Cummings going up 1st Street and down Alberta to the corner of Main and Welsh down Halpen and up Main. Welsh crossed the corner ahead of Cummings going right across the road, his horse swerved for the turn close to the Edwards building and stopped dead, the rider shooting over the animal's head with frightful momentum and dashing against the side of the building the back of his head striking the concrete foundation.

Eye-witnesses of the tradgedy were soon on the spot and here the unconscious man into the Vermilion hotel. Shortly after on the arrival of Doctors Ryan and Head-Patrick, it was found that the injuries were of a fatal nature, the skull being fractured and a little after seven death took place.

The deceased man had a homestead 20 miles south of the town and had been intimately acquainted with the Messrs. Cummings for several years. His home is at Bobcaygeon, Ont., where his father an another and two sisters reside, a brother lives at Toronto and another at Milk River, Alta., who will reach here Friday and take charge of the remains. A cousin, Geo. J. Johnson of Edmonton is here. The deceased was 29 years of age and an expert horseman.

Capture of a Desperado

A Scheme That Was Well Planned

By George Edward Burns

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

When Bunker the noted desperado shot up the town of Eureka, killed the cashier of the [illegible] bank and helped himself to some $30,000 in currency, being an expert in that line, it was thought by the citizens to be high time something was done to stop such irregular proceedings.

Within half an hour after Bunker and three assistants rode out of town a meeting was called at the hotel and measures taken to break up the gang. A posse was organized consisting of a dozen citizens, and later placed under the orders of a detective who was telegraphed for and in a few hours reached Eureka by special train. Pierce Robbins, the new [illegible] but with no effect. Then Bunker said to him:

[illegible]

"Conductor, I'm in [illegible] of this train. There will be no stopping just now, and we're going to move at full speed. You sit down there and keep quiet."

The conductor obeyed the order, but one of the farmers protested. He said that he and his wife were ticketed for the station just passed and didn't wish to go any farther. Bunker told him to shut up so fiercely that he obeyed the order at once.

The man who [illegible] came forward [illegible] something to Bunker which seemed to be satisfactory. The train was running at full speed and the two men were evidently well pleased at their chance for escape. Each had a revolver in his hand, though no one disputed their will. One of the farmers' wives gave evidence of hysterics, while the other, appearing to rely upon being a woman, berated the robbers soundly. Her husband begged her to be quiet, while the husband of the other woman tried to keep his wife from a collapse. The few other passengers in the car sat still, not daring to move a finger. As for the conductor, he sat crouched down in a seat trembling like a leaf.

One of the farmers and his wife were on one side of the car, and the other pair were a few seats behind them on the opposite side, both being near the middle. Bunker stood with his back against the forward door, while the red headed man stood in a similar position with regard to the rear door. The woman who had protested got up from her seat and turned it over so that she would ride backward. The robbers made no objection to this, and the husband meekly acquiesced.

WHAT TUNNEL MEANS.

Prince Edward Island Has Much to Gain by New Scheme.

The supplementary estimates recently brought down in the Dominion Parliament containing a grant of $30,000 for a survey of the proposed tunnel under the Strait of Northumberland to connect Prince Edward Island with New Brunswick, will make the "million acre farm" practically a part of the continent.

The construction of an all-rail route to the mainland would mean many improvements in Prince Edward Island. Regular and daily communication is now maintained during the season of open navigation by two steamers under a subsidy from the Dominion Government. Regular navigation is generally closed from the middle of December to the middle of April. During this period ice-breaker steamers running with more or less regularity carry passengers, the mails, and some freight to and from Pictou in Nova Scotia. Under unfavorable conditions the mails, on sleds, are pulled over the ice between the two capes named above.

Prince Edward Island now produces annually about $10,000,000 worth of field and animal products. Owing to the uncertainties of navigation after November the farmers are forced to sell, no matter what the markets then may be, shortly after their crops are harvested. No manufacturing exists on this island except to supply a few of the local wants. Labor is abundant and cheap, such labor leaving this province in large numbers for the United States and the western provinces of Canada. All efforts to utilize this labor supply in local manufactories on a larger scale had to be given up, as the means of shipping manufactured goods from there are, during at least four months of the year, practically impossible. An all-rail route to the mainland would at once [illegible]

CANADA'S SHARE.

Dominion Has Played an Important Part in Steam Shipping.

It is interesting to note that Canada has taken quite an important part in the development of steam navigation. The "Accommodation," built by Molson in 1809, was the first passenger steamer to ply upon British Colonial waters, and ran between Montreal and Quebec. The first steam vessel to make a transatlantic passage was also built and owned by Canadians. The "Royal William," as she was called, was built at Cap Blanc, Quebec, by George Black and J. S. Campbell for the Quebec and Halifax service of a Quebec company. She was built of wood on a clean lined semi-clipper model, 176 feet overall, keel 146 feet, breadth of beam inside paddleboxes 29 feet 4 inches, breadth outside paddleboxes 43 feet 10 inches, depth of hold 17 feet 9 inches. Her measurement tonnage was 830 tons. On April 29th, 1831 she was launched and christened after the King, by the [illegible] of the then Governor-General, Lord Aylmer. She was towed to Montreal, where her engines were installed, and in the fall of the year made one or two trips to Halifax. Although she had auxiliary sails to assist her engines in favoring winds, the "Royal William" was propelled by steam alone.

When in Halifax she came under the attention of Samuel Cunard, founder of the Cunard Line, and he became very much interested in her, and ultimately became a director in the company which owned the vessel. It is said that it was through his connection with this little steamer that the mighty fleet which bears his name was formed.

In 1832, trade being very poor in Canada, it was thought advisable to send the "Royal William" across the Atlantic to be sold, and on August [illegible]

CANADA'S GOLD IMPORT.

They Mean a Heavy Influx of Capital For Development.

[illegible] May no less than $4,200,000 [illegible] gold was shipped from New York to Canada, though the total [illegible] for this year are only $10,[illegible]. At certain periods of the year [illegible] would indicate a money strain in [illegible]. For example, the movement of Canada's large crops every fall is [illegible] by a withdrawal of the Canadian banks' funds held in New York.

But the reason of the gold movement in May is one which proves gratifying to Canadians, says Fred. W. Field in The Toronto Star Weekly. It was due to the heavy investments of British and foreign capital in the Dominion. Many of these investments require exchange operations. There are no adequate facilities for handling foreign exchange in Canada, with the result that the sale of exchange in New York against heavy credits in Europe placed large balances with the Canadian agents in New York.

The [illegible] exchange in finance refers to the payment of an obligation in one place by the transfer of a credit from another place. By this operation the obligation is discharged without the direct borrowing of money. The exchange itself is an order of [illegible] in one place for the payment of [illegible] in another place. There is really [illegible] practical difference between a bill of exchange and a draft. The term [illegible] of exchange is usually applied [illegible] an order for money payable in a foreign country, whereas the term draft is applied to an order payable within the country of its origin.

The rates for New York exchange at Montreal have been unusually low, lower than the gold shipping point. Even at the then prevailing low rates at Montreal, New York exchange was scarcely saleable there, and the banks found it more advantageous to ship [illegible]

Owing to the long period of idleness there is now no stock of coal available in the Western towns. THE STANDARD

VERMILION, ALTA., AUGUST 9 1911

The political campaign is inaugurated at Vermilion. The Conservative candidate and the provincial Conservative leader opened the opening shots here Tuesday night. The electors have heard a tremendous mass of argument raised against the reciprocity pact, in fact the numbers present at the meeting must feel that it has not a redeeming feature, that Canada had everything to lose and nothing to gain by the adoption of reciprocity with the United States, from the addresses they heard on that occasion. Friday night the electors will be afforded the opportunity of hearing views opposed to those of the speakers of Tuesday night. On every issue there is a lot to be said on both sides and the reciprocity question is no exception to the rule. It is a live issue and one of far reaching effect, and it will only be after hearing thoroughly discussions of the question by our public men that the majority of the electors will be enabled to intelligently mark their ballots on Sept. 21. The policy of this paper will be to deal impartially in reporting meetings held at Vermilion throughout the campaign, whether they be Conservative, Liberal or Independent Farmer, and make its criticisms from an independent standpoint.

The terrible fatality which is reported in another column of the Standard, while deeply regretted by all of us—comes as an awful warning against reckless and daring riding or driving within the crowded confines of the town. Such an act might a corpse of danger to the participants, but a constant menace to the life and limb of pedestrians, men, women and children. Besides, many a mother's heart trembles for the safety of her little one where low motors regarded constantly. All racing, fast, careless or reckless riding or driving, are a direct contravention of the by-laws of the town. Let the and affair of to-night act as a corrective to any who have heretofore been prone to look rather carelessly on such matters.

The Baker Survey party returned from north of the Saskatchewan this week having finished the season's work.

W. O. Nelson and Chas. Bowling representing some 50 farmers of the southern part of the state of Minnesota reached here to-day and are going north of the Saskatchewan.

J. P. Harvey who has been with the Baker Survey, left for Queen's University, Kingston, to continue his coal age course.

Campaign Meeting At Vermilion
Conservative Candidate and Provincial Conservat. re Leader Address the Electors

The Conservative meeting in the Royal George Theatre Tuesday night, was well attended the large hall being filled. Many more than this in the United States, big issue now before the electors of Canada discussed on the public platform. The audience was opened with the presence of a large number of ladies. Norman Murray, president of the Young Conservative club, presided, and on the platform were seated several of the prominent citizens of the town and district. The first speaker was A. G. Clark who opposed Premier Sifton at the by-election in June of last year; he thanked the people of Vermilion for their generous support to him on that occasion. He was followed by the candidate, F. A. Morrh, who was heartily applauded on rising to speak. During his two hours address the closest attention was given him.

He stated was a mastery presentation of the issue of reciprocity, which the speaker would not go so far as to call as reciprocity at all. He discussed it as an election cry to detract attention from the record of the administration. If, he said reciprocity was a good thing for the farmers why not for the manufacturers, who he claimed were left untouched. The pact meant that the farmer sold his products in open market while he was forced to buy in a protected one. Why not treat everybody alike. He pointed out that had offered reciprocity to agricultural implements, but that the Canadian negotiators, Messrs. Fielding and Patterson, had refused They had an opportunity of giving the farmers what they had been demanding for years but did not do it. There was, the speaker claimed, a reason The charge was being made that the Conservatives were allied with the interests, the meat guys and the combines What, said he, are the facts—Mellon Jones, a Liberal senator and a warm friend of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, is president of the implement trust in Canada, the Massey-Harris. Senator Beck, another good friend of the Liberal party, is president of the Frost-Wood company. Senator Edwards, president of the Canada merger with its $70,000,000.00 of watered stock, and Senator Cox, the man who would not wait, is a strong supporter of the agreement—on the friends of the Liberal party. Senator Cox is president of 32 companies and mergers, aggregating a capital of $250,000,000.00. They were all shouting for reciprocity. They were all shouting for reciprocity because they had found practically a new $70,000,000 market, where was it? The United States had enough but year of natural products to export $450,000,000 worth, one we compete in a market which produces such a huge surplus, and they were to be assisted that the American farmers can send their products to Canada if prices warrant it, and he thought they did. He quoted from the report of the American tariff commission, for the Canadian negotiators had no figures, showing that in natural products prices did rule higher in Canada than in the United States, by some markets vary almost every day. He would admit, however, that the price of wheat was higher in Minneapolis than in Winnipeg, and equally so then in Chicago. Minneapolis was not an exporting centre it consumed the greatest milling industry in the world, it exported a certain amount of hard wheat to mix with the Americans wheat so as to produce a certain quality of flour, it had to pay the high price because of the fact that the American farmer got the advantage of it owners the tariff and the advantage is lost. Should Canada pour in wheat and that country prices will come down, as the price in Liverpool is governed by prices in Liverpool fixed the price of wheat for the world. Chicago, which is an exporting centre is governed to some extent by the controlling prices in Liverpool, just the same as Winnipeg. He would remind the farmers that in sending their wheat over to the United States they were also sending their resources for bread and sheets would go to feed American cattle. Under the agreement we have to pay a heavy duty to get those by-products back to Canada. It would be giving the Americans a tremendous advantage over us in the cattle industry. He dwelt upon the fourteen nation treaty pointing out that the Canadian farmer was not only being brought into competition with the American farmer but with the farmers of all trade other countries, including Australia and New Zealand, either being given similar advantages in the British market. Denmark could send in butter into Canada free and so could Australia. Australia and the Argentine republic in cattle and they are doing it today. All these countries have attained their great industries and are in position to ship perishable products to all parts of the world cheaper than we can because we have the best and cheapest facilities It is, he said, a part of the Conservative policy to encourage exportation of cold storage so that the farmers here can ship the finished products as a result of the raw material in cattle. The speaker showed that Alberta's natural market laid to the east in British Columbia, that province was rich in resources but would never be a farming country, it would be dependent upon Alberta for its farm products we had a splendid market there now but per the past year Ontario and Quebec market will have to handle it the farmers of Washington, Oregon and other States are not going to have reciprocity the opportunities are the past the Conservative party were in favor of reciprocity he said that was in a wise time, but we were dealing with conditions as they exist in 1911 and not as they existed 20 or 25 years ago. Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself has thanked heaven that the day was now passed when Canada wanted reciprocity with the United States, he thinks now that the day has not really passed. The Conservatives, the speaker claimed had never favored such a pact hundred sort of an agreement as this. In closing Mr. Morrison referred to the great progress made by Canada, to the warm tie that bound her to the motherland and appealed to the electors to continue along the path they had so well trod for the past 40 years, to remain prosperous and our prosperity shall be greater if the people will repudiate this alleged reciprocity agreement on the 21st of September, as he had no doubt they would. It was Canada for Canadians and Canadians for Canada.

Mr. McArthur, leader of the Conservative party in Alberta was the closing speaker. It was his first appearance in Vermilion and he made a good impression. He dealt largely with provincial affairs With regard to Federal politics he stated that he was not in favor of the New Bay railway which Mr. Borden if returned to power had pledged the Conservative party to build in four years. The inauguration of state aid to the skilled most industry, the government ownership and control of the terminal elevators and the appointment of an independent tariff commission—would be far more advantageous to the people of this country as any imaginary advantage they hoped to derive from reciprocity. The Conservatives platform, he claimed, owed honor to the interests of the people of the West then any that had yet been enunciated; it was a people's platform—it contained every demand made by the farmer's delegation but year save and except reciprocity. He thought that a ben the farmers of the country gave the matter their serious consideration, would see the whole question subside and quickly, they would cast their votes in favor of the Conservative candidate, Mr. Morrison.

The meeting closed with the national anthem and cheers for the candidate.

BEGIN RIGHT

JUNE and weddings hold an important place in every woman's calendar. If she is not one of June's brides, she is an onlooker, and all women love the newly married. If you are one of the "just married," begin your days right. There is nothing quite like the advice of the experienced. Lessons are learned and deductions are made through the great teacher, EXPERIENCE. The results of the day's problems, questions and tasks are given to you through topics on this page. Discussions on subjects that touch life in all phases are conducted through the medium of this paper. In every story or poem there is a thought worth while, which will be retained by you after the story has been forgotten. This kernel will be added to the store of ideas that determine the thoughts and actions of every human being.

Begin RIGHT! Begin NOW! Make this page a weekly event. Read the prose, the poetry. Let something be added to your experience by each edition.

We advise that you insist upon the presence of this page in your home. It is something of which you need never feel ashamed; something of which you may well be proud.

And as an announcement that holds interest, the poem shines forth in its little corner. The question of a wedding or no wedding is threshed out. A group of stories deals with that eternal verity—love. The entire page is good, and it is yours.

Let no opportunity be overlooked by which you can live a deeper, broader and sweeter life.

ON A WEDDING DAY

And underfoot in flowers,
With wings that slept on fragrant airs
Through all the happy hours.

FAITH BERRIFIELD

Your Leisure Hour

A PHILOSOPHER a few hundred years ago suggested that the real man or woman is seen in the hour of play or recreation. Work demands a certain subservience to rule and authority. We sink our identities in the routine, the law and order that our vocations force upon us; but when the closing hour is struck, the controlling wheel stops, and we show ourselves as we really are.

Watch a child at its play and, if you are keen in the study of humanology, you will get an index of his character in his methods of amusing himself.

I am often constrained to smile at the people around me. There's one man, for instance, that plays poker at every opportunity. He's a plunger, pure and simple. I don't know much about the purity of his card methods—for all I know he may be the card sharp of the age—but he's simple to the nth power.

He has appropriated the spare room of his home and has nailed a card table in the center of the floor so that it can't possibly be utilized by his mother when the dressmaker wishes to cut out the latest pattern in tunics or boleros. Around the room are invitingly comfortable chairs, and here and there are ash trays and pipe racks. All the comforts of a mining gambling joint are here. And every hour of his leisure time is spent in the blue haze of this den. If he had spent one-half the energy in opening a few good books that he has taken to open jackpots he would be a philosopher of the first water.

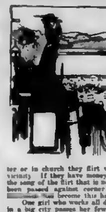
His cousin Alyce is another one who does very well to point a moral and adorn my tale. Her leisure hour is spent in embroidering. What that girl has not done in the way of fancy stitches would not pay me to mention. I feel like an innocent babe when she opens her embroidery bag and her big, blue eyes and says: "Don't you ever do any of the new artful-crafty stitches? Everybody is crazy over it?

Her eyesight is gradually going back on her, and I wish to scream when I think what she has not read. I can quote Shakespeare until the cock crow, and she thinks I am very bright. I have such funny ways of putting the truth. Poor William!

One serious-minded druggist has decided that after all he has not yet "found" himself. So between the compounding of prescriptions and the weighing of rock candy he juggles with two and sometimes three potatoes and a couple of forks. The circuit for him. He has absolutely no sense of humor and no yearning for the fresh air. His fault is a woeful lack of the necessary balance that we should maintain.

Would you like to marry the man who spends his leisure time and most of his money at cock fights? Or dog fights? Honestly, now, are not the loud suit, the diamond horseshoe pin, the passionately colored tie and hosiery and the conspicuous "long green" indices of a certain lack of refinement that is very hard to live with? They speak to me of brutality and an absence of the sensibility that would not "set foot upon a worm."

Oh, you flirt! Have you seen the man of any old age pull on his chamois gloves, adjust his hat in the approved [illegible] style, twist up his poor little, stiff little waxed mustache and walk down the street to give the girls a treat? Honestly, there are specimens of the masculine that occupy every spare moment in flirting. At lunch hour they flirt with the [illegible], when riding home from work they annoy the pretty girls in the car; when at the theater or in church they flirt with the fair [illegible] in their vicinity. If they have money, it's with the [illegible]. It's the song of the flirt that is never done. Wh[illegible] laws have been passed against corner lounging and flirting—[illegible] become this habit of the [illegible].



One girl who works all day from 7:30 to 6 in a mill in a big city passes her few fleeting moments that she can call her own in reading. She is an omnivorous reader, and I thank the times in which we live that this soul, hungry after knowledge, can at least find the Pierian spring which it seeks. Her body is pale and thin; she carries a poor little lunch in her black cloth bag; but there is a book also in it, and I somehow believe that she doesn't feel the cold. She is profiting by the priceless treasures of the past. Her heritage is a hunger for the best in life, and she is getting it.

In a way, the leisure hour shows what we are developing into. It casts a shadow of our future. No one for one instant can deny that the mill girl and the "sport" are bound for different ports. The attitude of the human being toward the world, especially in his leisure hours, cannot but determine the direction in which he is sailing. It is as the slant of the sails. You have seen two boats in the same wind moving in opposite directions. The pilot at the helm is the one to determine the angle of the sail.

A sincerity, a great wish to grow into something greater and better, and a hopeful attitude toward the future crop out when you are not thinking about any special work. They show in the limelight of the leisure hours.

Never mind what he does when he is under orders from a superior or when he is filling time for his living. Let me see the man at play, and I'll tell you if I wish him on my visiting list. Don't you agree with me?

BARBARA LEE.

Farmer To Run In Victoria

W J. Jackman of East Clover Bar Nominated at Farmer's Convention Saturday—Platform Adopted by Meeting.

Vegreville, Aug. 19—At a convention held in the Farmers' Hall here this afternoon the farmers of the Victoria Electoral district unanimously nominated W. J. Jackman, of East Clover Bar, as their candidate in the coming Federal general elections. The new farmers' organization to be known as the "Victoria Farmer's Independent Political Association." was organized with the following officers: President, P.S. Austin, Ranfurly; vice-pres. W. J. Jackman, East Clover Bar; secy-treas. R. H. Hunt, Lloydminster; executive, Messrs. Lahore, Bavie, Stone, Hamilton, Taylor and Gilchrist.

The platform as presented to Sir Wilfrid Laurier by the United Farmers' Association at Ottawa last December, was the one adopted with the addition of a direct legislation plank. In accepting the nomination Mr. Jackman pledged himself to carry out the wishes of the convention to the best of his ability, if elected, and he further placed his signed resignation in the hands of the executive to be made use of by them in case he failed to do so.

Farmer Candidate Spoke Monday

Small Number Out but Candidate Makes Good Address

Monday night the farmer candidate spoke at Vermilion. The meeting was not generally known, and the consequent result was a small attendance, however the candidate, W. J. Jackman, gave an able exposition of his platform. It embraced much of what the two old line parties stand for. He stood for the construction of the Hudson Bay railway as a government road, chilled meat industry and reciprocity but wanted free agricultural implements. He said it was never intended that the manufacturing industries of Canada should be protected by a high tariff forever but was intended to foster them until they became strong and then gradually withdrawn, [illegible] they were sufficiently strong to be able to take care of themselves. Direct legislation was [illegible] plank in Mr. Jackman's platform [illegible]

Meeting At Islay

Islay, Aug 26 F. A. Morrison, Conservative candidate addressed a public meeting here tonight. It was well attended. [illegible] was chairman. The meeting at first was inclined to be hostile but through Mr. Morrison's able presentation of the Conservative attitude towards reciprocity at the close of the meeting practically everybody present rose and cheered. Afterwards many who had [illegible] before in the country, came to him and pledged him their influence and support.

J. W. G. Morrison of Vermilion, also spoke dealing clearly with the Conservative platform. W. J. Jackman, the farmers' candidate, was to have spoken but [illegible] a telegram from Vegreville [illegible] in the afternoon [illegible]

RESEMBLES A MERMAID.

If the Dugong Had Long Hair It Would Make a Real Sea Woman.

The old stories about mermaids do not seem so improbable after all when one looks at a full sized dugong. The only thing it lacks to make it a real sea woman is long hair.

This enormous fish has flippers instead of fins and rudimentary arms. The flippers end in four distinct fingers and are startlingly like the human hand.

In the diamond fields young Barney Barnato (real name Barnett Isaacs) and young Cecil Rhodes were recognized in 1876 as the two ablest speculators. Sir Lewis Mitchell, in his biography of Rhodes, calls Barnato the Napoleon and Rhodes the Wellington of that rough community. Rhodes, judging by appearances, was still a shy and awkward man addicted to classical studies, his ambitions unknown.

PAINTER IS HONORED

J. H. F. BACON TO DEPICT THE CORONATION.

Young English Artist Is Chosen Among His Peers to Perform the Arduous Task of Putting the Westminster Abbey Ceremony on Canvas — Made a Picture of King Edward's Crowning.

When a British monarch is crowned there is always a keen rivalry among the artists of the realm to see who shall be chosen to make the official picture of the ceremony. It is one of the highest honors that can be given to a painter and at once stamps him as pre-eminent in his art, but it is so arduous a duty that most artists are afraid of it.

At the coronation of King Edward the man chosen to do the work was Edwin A. Abbey, who painted the

WHEN THE DAYS ARE HOT

It takes hot days to do the crops good. Corn needs it a drop of sweat on every hill is the rule. Grass needs it especially when ready to cut and cure for the winter's feeding. Every growing thing needs it, down to the little pockets stretched out in the sunshine.

So press the cultivating now. Give every hill its due share of attention. Three good stalks to the hill, do such [illegible] and some earth all around. Push [illegible] haying too. Sunshine beats shade for curing timothy and clover.

The nicest way to cure clover is to cut it when the blossoms are all in bloom but too ripe, for they will shell and fall off, put it up in good-sized bunches and leave it there till well sweat out. Open before it begins to heat, and draw in.

The good warm days put the last tinge of [illegible] on the wheat and rye too. You may have to lay off haying a day or two to cut these crops. Be glad to do it, for there is gold in the yellow of the wheat. Have help enough to set the bundles up right after the binder, and leave the stalks out only long enough to dry the stalks of straw well. Get them under cover then as soon as possible.

When the next rainy day comes offer your services to your wife, and spend a few hours in doing odd jobs around the house.

One of the commonest complaints of children is worms, and the most effective application for them is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

Are Your Children Properly Fed?

LET us talk about the right feeding of children. Of course, you want your children to grow up strong and healthy; you want to equip them for the battle of life with rugged constitutions and good red blood. Now, the first step is to see that they are properly fed. And these words "properly fed" mean much in the diet of children. For it isn't quantity that counts, but quality.

There is no better food under Heaven for growing children than plenty of first class bread and butter. They thrive on it, grow strong and fat and rugged. Their systems crave it because it is a complete, well-balanced food.

But the bread must be good—the very best, and the best is made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR which contains the full nutriment of the best Red Fyfe wheat—for only wheat of this character contains enough of the right quality gluten to balance the starch. Gluten makes bone and muscle, starch makes fat. It takes the right combination of both to make properly balanced bread.

Bread made from OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is richest in blood building, muscle building, health building gluten. Children like it better and thrive better on it.

With "Royal Household" you need never have anything but the very best results for it is always the same, absolutely uniform, year in and year out and is just as good for Pastry as it is for Bread.

If parents knew this important difference between ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR and other flours they would never use any but "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD".

POISONED BY FLOWERS

Flowers are delightful things, yet you may easily have them too thick and fast.

In the South of France they grow acres of the sweetest and most glorious blooms. These blooms are brought up by the distillers and it is a strange fact that when the fragrant things are gathered into mounds they occasion serious complaints in those who have to handle them, the scent acting as a poison to the nervous system.

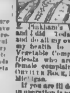
WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. Orville Rock, R. R. No. 4, Paw Paw, Michigan.



If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

A Useful Hint

Tumblers which have always been used for milk should always be rinsed in cold water before they are washed in hot. When this is done the milk does not stick to the glass and there is no danger of their looking cloudy.

The electors have now heard the issue of reciprocity discussed at three political meetings in the town within the past ten days, and from now on will have an opportunity of studying the question at a much more comprehensive manner.

W. H. Whyte was the unanimous choice of the Liberals of Victoria in convention assembled at Vegreville Saturday last.

At the greatest Liberal convention ever held in the city of Edmonton, Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, was again unanimously choosen as their candidate for the House of Commons.

The death of Lars Johnson of Hopkins, will be learned with deep regret by his many acquaintances in the district. Deceased succumbed after a dangerous operation for rupture at the Edmonton hospital. The remains were taken north to Hopkins by his brother-in-law J. S. Valentine.

600,000 of Alberta will become 4,000,000 people and if we have a prosperous community, the loyalty of the people will take care of itself. The loyalty of the people of Canada was not whether the Empire was prepared to pay 5c more a bushel for wheat grown in Canada than in a foreign country. The last reason why he supported reciprocity was because Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the first federal statesman to recognize the fact that the prairie provinces should be put on an equality with the other provinces by the handing over to them of their natural resources.

A GIRL TO TRUST.

So Thought President Lincoln When He Handed Her a Pass.

During the civil war Miss N., a high spirited Virginia young lady whose father, a Confederate soldier, had been taken prisoner by the Union forces, was desirous of obtaining a pass which would enable her to visit him. Francis P. Blair agreed to obtain an audience with the president, but warned his young and rather impulsive friend to be prudent and not betray her sympathy for the south. They were ushered into the presence of Mr. Lincoln and the object for which they had come was stated. The tall, grave man [illegible] to the little maiden and [illegible] looking searchingly into her face, said:

"You are loyal, of course?"

Her bright eyes flashed. She hesitated a moment [illegible] with a force [illegible] and honest as [illegible]

"Yes, loyal to the heart's core—to Virginia!"

Mr. Lincoln kept his intent gaze upon her for a moment longer and then went to his desk, wrote a line or two and handed her the paper. With a bow [illegible] When [illegible] Mr. Blair began to [illegible] for her im[illegible]

[illegible] he said [illegible] very careful [illegible]

[illegible] opened the paper. It contained these words:

Pass Miss N. She is an honest girl and can be trusted. A. LINCOLN.

Red Jacket's Memory

Red Jacket, the Indian chief, had more confidence in his own memory than [illegible] papers of white men. There was a contest at one time before Tompkins, an early governor of New York, in regard to an ancient treaty. The agent said one thing, but Red Jacket corrected him. "You have forgotten," said the American agent, "We have it written down on paper." "The paper then tells a lie," was the confident answer. "I have it written here," continued the chief, placing his hand with dignity upon his brow. "You Yankees are born with a feather between your fingers, but your paper does not speak the truth. The Indian keeps his knowledge here. This is the book the Great Spirit gave him. It does not lie." A reference was made to the treaty in question, when to the astonishment of all every word that Red Jacket had said was confirmed on the document.

Amused Only the Actors.

In his "Random Recollections" Charles H. E. Brookfield, a highly esteemed actor on the London stage, says: "I remember a piece which we produced at the Comedy theater, written by a popular author and very strongly cast, which amused us all so much that we could hardly rehearse it. Charles Hawtrey used every now and then to warn us 'Now don't speak too soon on that. There's certain to be a big laugh and we don't want them to miss the next line.' We rehearsed for six weeks. On the first night nothing went wrong, but the piece. There was not one laugh nor one round of applause from start to finish. We took off the comedy in two days, during which we rehearsed as a stop gap a conventional three act farce with no literary pretensions. I think it ran for a year."

Queer About the Eyes.

Prince Troubetskoy, the artist, once painted in Paris the portrait of an American who was cross eyed. The painter thought a great deal about the matter, and finally made his picture cross eyed, too, so that it should be a faithful likeness.

When it was done, the original looked at it and said:

"It seems to me—it seems—why, hang it, this picture is cross eyed, isn't it?"

"Why no more than you are, sir," said Prince Troubetskoy.

"Well, perhaps you're right," murmured the American. "It seems to have a queer look about the eyes, though."

Her Fathomless Eyes.

It was the hermit Thoreau, whose mistress was wood and stream, who wrote: "The lover sees in the glance of his beloved the same beauty that in the sunset paints the western skies. It is the same daemon here lurking under a human eyelid and there under the closing eyelids of the day. Here, in small compass, is the ancient and natural beauty of evening and morning. What loving astronomer has ever fathomed the ethereal depths of the eye?"

Chaos and Effect.

La Monit—Children are as much worse than they used to be. What do you attribute it to?

La Moyne—Improved ideas in building.

La Monit—What has that to do with it?

La Moyne—Much. Shingles are scarce, and you can't spank a boy with a tin roof.

Hard Work.

"I suppose you have heard about young Chumley? He is very seriously ill as a result of overwork."

"You don't say so. What has he been doing to bring it about?"

"Trying to collect his thoughts."

Giving Him a Chance.

Master Pickles—I think that if I went out of the room Mr. Spooner would kiss you, Ada.

Speak For Reciprocity

Premier Sifton and W. H. Whyte Present Issue to Electors

Though Friday night was wet and disagreeable, a good sized audience assembled in the Royal George theatre to hear Premier Sifton and W. H. Whyte, ex-M.P. for the riding, speak on the reciprocity issue. The large hall was nearly full and despite the rain, a large number were in from the outlying districts. The speakers were closely followed as they laid before the farmers the advantages they would gain in having the markets of the United States opened to their products. As the speakers entered the hall they were accorded a hearty reception. Mayor Dunsmore occupied the chair, owing to Dr. Ryan being called away, and immediately introduced Mr. Whyte who was applauded on rising to speak. He devoted his attention to answering the arguments advanced by the Conservative candidate at the Tuesday night meeting. Regarding Mr. Morrison's attitude at the present time in condemning the reciprocity pact, he could say that his views at the last general election were entirely different, for he knew for a fact that in parts of the constituency many of the electors had voted for Mr. Morrison, from being told by him that the Conservative party was in favor of reciprocity with the United States. Looking at the question, which was the issue in the present election, from every point of view he could see nothing but advantages for the Canadian producers in a wider market for their natural products. When the speaker said the reciprocity agreement was read in the House of Commons after the return of Messrs. Fielding and Patterson from Washington, it was received with rappings of approval on both sides of the House and it was not till a much later date that the opposition to the pact developed from the Conservative side. The statement that Melvin Jones, Senators Frost, Edwards and Cox were all shouting for reciprocity, he stated that Senator Edwards was the only one who had expressed himself upon it, in a conversation with Melvin Jones he had rather thought him opposed to it, so much for the interests. We find Sir Edmund Walker of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, opposed to reciprocity, but he did not object to the financing of the cotton crop of the United States with Canadian money, he said. They were told the U.S had exported something like $450,000,000.00 worth of natural products but they must bear in mind that nearly two-thirds of that was the cotton crop alone. The speaker claimed that it was the Minneapolis market that set the price of wheat in America and statistics showed that the average price of wheat was as much as [illegible] more at Minneapolis than at Winnipeg. In dealing with the enhanced values of cattle on the American market as compared with Winnipeg prices he took his figures from the Year Book of Canada, Mr. Morrison he believed had quoted exclusively from the report of the American tariff commission, he was surprised that Mr. Morrison would go to the States for anything. The figures he had quoted at previous meetings were borne out by the Conservative member for Lisgar, Man., W. H. Sharpe, in speaking in the House of Commons, April 15th., 1910, said:

"Let me for a moment direct the attention of the minister to the conditions existing in Western Canada. In the little town of Manitou in 1908, the elevators handled over 300,000 bushels of wheat, but last year a spur railway was built across the line into North Dakota and an elevator erected there, with the result that last year instead of handling 300,000 bushels on the Canadian side there was only 100,000 bushels handled, while the United States elevator handled 200,000 bushels. Our farmers took their grain across the line and shipped it in bond [illegible] Canadian lake ports and by pursuing this course they received from [illegible] cents a bushel more for their grain than if they had dealt in Canada." The speaker further quoted Mr. Sharpe on cattle prices as follows:

"There were 110,000 head of cattle shipped to the city of Winnipeg last year and all the farmers could get from the beef combine in that city was an average of $3.87 per hundred weight, while at the same time the price of similar cattle at Chicago was $6.27 per 100 pounds. There must be something wrong with the cattle trade when such a condition exists."

This would show them exactly how things stood relative to prices for their products. As to the natural products being lost to Canada, he asked what became of the by-products of the 59,000,000 bushels of wheat the West exported to Great Britain last year. He also went on to point out that last year's western wheat crop was over 100,000,000 bushels, this year the estimate is 200,000,000 bushels, at this rate it would be but a matter of two or three more years when the wheat crop would be 500,000,000 bushels, the need of wider markets was apparent to all as there was a limit to the English market. In closing he expressed confidence in that the people of Canada would endorse the reciprocity agreement on Sept 21st next.

Premier Sifton was the closing speaker, he delivered a strong address and pointed out the many benefits which would accrue under reciprocity to the province of Alberta. The western farmers had asked for reciprocity for 40 years and there could be no doubt as to their attitude on the question. We had the best alfalfa country on the American continent, the best soil and climate for wheat growing and along the slopes of the Rocky mountains inexhaustible supplies of coal, just the kind required across the border for the smelting industries. A policy he claimed that builds up this country and makes open markets was one for the benefit of the country. It was desirable that the people of this country would be able to ship their products wherever they please and at whatever time they please. If it was desirable to sell it in the home market of Canada, or in their interests to put it on the markets of Great Britain and Europe they should be able to do it, but it was so much more desirable if a third choice was given them as it is now by the efforts of the Liberal party in Canada. If, said he, a merchant had two customers, would he object to a third? It was purely a matter of good business. The farmers want more markets and open markets, but not particularly for the few cents more a bushel for wheat the open markets are for the encouragement of people to come to this country because the open markets will bring population to Alberta. THE MILL

How a Picture Was Painted Under an Inspiration

By EDWARD GILLETTE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There is no more dainty bit of scenery, to my thinking, than one of those little patched up, tumbledown, moss covered water mills of the olden time. They are always situated at the lower end of a pond, nestling under trees and half buried in shrubbery. They speak of a past when farmers were used to carrying a sack or two of grain to mill on horseback before them to have it ground. Now the grain is grown on bigger farms in bigger bulk, and the individual farmer's product is lost in a great cereal river that flows to mills driven by steam and with stacks towering hundreds of feet high. Progress is there, but the little water mill of the past is only useful to furnish themes for the artist.

I am one of those knights of the brush myself. One day, coming upon such a simple scene as I have mentioned, I opened my three legged stool, set up my easel and began to work in my colors. I have the picture I made of the mill, and no money would induce me to part with it. There is a story connected with it, told me while I was painting, which, appealing to my fancy, rendered my work especially successful. The picture and the story go together.

While I was at work a man under a faded straw hat and suspenders uncovered by coat or waistcoat came up behind me and looked at my work. He was a middle aged countryman, with those furrows in his face that seem to be transferred there from his eyes being constantly fixed on furrows made by his plow. He seemed to take a deep interest in my picture.

"There's somethin' wanted on that little space beside the wheel," he said.

mill for less than two or three hours' grind.

"Janey stood up well for about half an hour—it seemed fifty times as long—then she began to give out. The only thing I could do with her was to brace her up by puttin' my arm back of her. She didn't seem frightened or ready to cry, but she looked at me with a tired smile and kept on workin' the treadmill.

"But pretty soon she got so tired I knew she'd have to git a rest, and I looked about for somethin' to cling to away from the wheel. There was a break in the wall surroundin' the wheel that left one of the stones so we could git our hands on it. I pushed off with Janey, and we clung to the stone.

"We got a kind of a rest, but it wasn't pleasant being in water over our heads keepin' ourselves up that way, and Janey's teeth began to chatter. I was beside myself with terror for her. It was she who was puttin' the best face on it all, sayin' that the grist would soon give out and the water would be turned off. But I knew that her strength was goin', and I dreaded a time when it would leave her all at once.

"Then I tried hollerin' ag'in, but I hadn't so much power behind my voice as I had when I called before and couldn't make so much noise.

"I knew I'd got to do somethin' or pretty soon it would be all over with us. It occurred to me that if I could get my weight on to the side of the wheel that was goin' up the motion would be slower. I asked Janey if she could hold on where she was for awhile. She said she could, but I knew she couldn't.

"I had to put my arm around her, and, partly by swimmin' and partly by clingin' to the wall, I worked my way toward the back of the wheel. The hardest place to pass was between the wheel and the wall. I expected both of us would be crushed.

"When I got by that part of it and got Janey and myself a hold of the wheel I felt better. But we couldn't stop the wheel; all we could do was to cling to it till it pulled us out of the water and then catch hold lower down. I did this, but Janey could only keep changin' her hands all the while as the wheel revolved, she bein' supported in the water. Knowin' that this was our only chance, I threw all the ...

EUROPE SETTLING DOWN.

Not Getting Any Quieter, but the Land Is Slowly Sinking.

Geologists have of late years come to the conclusion that the entire central European plain, which extends from northwestern France through the Low Countries and north Germany to the Russian Baltic provinces, is slowly sinking.

The lowest section of this great coastal region is that part of Holland which lies from fifteen to twenty feet below sea level and has to be protected by immense dams and dikes against the danger of being submerged.

A Dutch engineer named Ten Cate has studied this subject, and he deals with Holland's danger at length in De Ingenieur, a Dutch technical paper. His investigations go back 2,000 years, and his conclusion is that the Dutch coastal sinks eight inches in a century.

This does not seem very alarming, but every little counts in a country which lies naturally so low as the Dutch coastal provinces. Besides, there is no justification for assuming that the settling down process will always be regular, and a sudden subsidence would be a very grave matter indeed.

Ten Cate proves his assertions by pointing to the situation of remains of Roman settlements in the Low Countries, which he calculates must now lie from five to fifteen feet below their original level. They were built some sixteen centuries ago.

A further indication of the lowering of Holland's level is the fact that the low hills or mounds to which up into the middle ages people and their cattle used to flee for safety at flood times would not now afford the necessary protection.

LIEUTENANT TO HAYS

E. H. FITZHUGH IS AN INDUSTRIAL FIELD MARSHAL.

The Man Who Runs the Grand Trunk Railway For His Chief Has Steadily Worked His Way Up From a District Superintendency Until He Has Become First Vice-President of the Road.

In a sense, E. H. Fitzhugh, first vice-president of the Grand Trunk Railway, is the old English type of business man. This is the kind of man who hates publicity, who is honorable in all his dealings, whose word is as good as his bond, and is so constituted that he says very little and does much. This type of man looks upon the business which he is administering as a personal or private trust, and would no more think of divulging inner workings of the company than he would of betraying the confidence of a friend. This is all very well for the company, but, as we said earlier in the article, it is hard on the man who is looking for copy.

Mr. Fitzhugh, like many other of our Canadian railwaymen, was born in the United States, first seeing the light of day in Montgomery County, Mo., in 1853. After some few years experience in the banking world he entered the railway office as a clerk in the St. Louis, Kansas City & Northern Railway, and when that road was absorbed by the Wabash he took a position with the latter company. It was here that he made the acquaintance of Charles M. Hays, and when the latter joined the Grand Trunk he was soon followed by E. H. Fitzhugh.

When Hays came to the Grand Trunk he found a good many "remittance men." These were the younger sons and other relatives of ... who were sent out to Canada to be out of the way ...

LEGION OF HONOR.

The Order That Was Founded by the Great Napoleon.

THRIVED DESPITE RIDICULE.

The Despotic Corsican Proved by the Inauguration of the Decoration That He Was a Keen Student of French Human Nature.

France owes the Legion of Honor to Napoleon. All orders of chivalry had been abolished by the revolution and had left a gap which it was not easy to fill. "They are mere gewgaws," said Monge, the chemist, who had taught the revolutionists how to make gunpowder out of plaster of paris. "Gewgaws, if you will," the first consul answered, "but people like them. Let us approach the question frankly. All men are enamored of decorations, the French more than any. They positively hunger for them, and they have always done so."

This was at Malmaison in 1802. In May the conseil d'etat was invited to consider the project of the institution of the Legion of Honor. It was ridiculed by many, notably by Moreau, who as victor of Hohenlinden was bitterly jealous of the victor of Marengo. At a dinner party he sent for his cook and said to him in the presence of his guests: "Michel, I am pleased with your dinner. You have indeed distinguished yourself. I will award you a saucepan of honor." Mme. de Stael was also satirical upon the subject. "Ah, one of the decorated!" she used to ask each guest who was shown into her salon.

But Napoleon had gauged human nature correctly. His Legion of Honor did meet a felt want, and it was definitely inaugurated on July 14, 1804. Among the eminent men of science and men of letters on whom it was then bestowed were included Laplace, the mathematician; Lalande, the astronomer; Cuvier, the naturalist, and Legouve, the poet. The most notable name omitted was that of Bernardin de St. Pierre, just then in disgrace for ...

Keep Fair To Its High Standard

Every Effort Should be Put Forth To Surpass Previous Exhibits

Date, Tuesday Sept. 19

Vermilion, Aug., 29th., '11

Editor Standard,

Dear Sir:—I should be pleased if you would make it known through the medium of the Standard that I shall be at the Town Hall, from 1.30 to 6 p.m. on Saturday, September 16th, to receive entries for the Fall Fair and assist anyone to fill in entry forms.

Last year many exhibitors left their entries until the day of the Fair when it was impossible to accept them, but I hope this year exhibitors will make their entries in good time.

There are quite a number of new classes especially in Ladies' work and some valuable prizes are being offered, and as every lady has some good work worth showing, we hope they will bring it along and help the Fair. Then there are $40 offered for butter. The Children's work is open to children from all schools in the district and we hope they will join in the competition—there is no entry fee for children's work. I am afraid the late harvest may make it hard [illegible] for some of the farmers to exhibit but with a little special effort, I think they will be able to keep our fair to its high standard and even surpass our previous Fairs.

Everyone should show something and come to the Fair and bring their friends.

Yours truly,
H. A. Taylor,
Sec.-Treas. Agricultural Society.

School Inspector Larker returned the beginning of the week from a holiday spent at Guelph, Ont. He reports weather so hot that he felt wilted all the time he was away.

Liberal-Conservative Platform

The Liberal-Conservative party, through its leader, Mr. R. L. Borden, gives its pledge to carry out the following policy if returned to power:—

1 A thorough reorganization of the method by which public expenditure is supervised. The increase of what is known as ordinary controllable expenditure from 21,000,000 in 1896, to nearly $74,000,000 in 1911, is proof of extravagance beyond any possible denial.

2 The granting of their natural resources to the prairie provinces.

3 The construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, and its operation by independent commission.

4 The control and operation by the State of the terminal elevators.

5 The necessary encouragement for establishing and carrying on the chilled meat industry.

6 The establishment of a permanent tariff commission.

7 The granting of substantial assistance towards the improvement of our public highways.

8 The extension of free rural mail delivery.

9 The extension of civil service reform.

10 The granting of liberal assistance to the provinces for the purpose of supplementing and extending the work of agricultural education and for the improvement of agriculture.

And, lastly, it pledges itself to a course of policy and administration which will maintain independent and unimpaired the control of our own affairs by the parliament of Canada; a policy which, while affording no just cause of complaint to any foreign nation, will find its highest ideal in the autonomous development of Canada as a nation within the British empire.

She is the Most Beautiful of All the Names in the Keen of Her Lover

By Clarence Mackie

Copyright by American Press Association, 1901.

The cloth was a most deserted thing. Summer afternoon had drifted through the early evening. Now one by one indoors revealed their forms. One found how the fire had died behind the bars, and how the ashes were white with the night. Would there be wondered myself lately to get that added period to my day, just once in a while. Where did you draw from, eh?"

"Some one from through the back across town? I did not just get to the office this morning. I sat down on doing it when I came in the morning."

"What was I doing? Why, I say Peggy, you're a flattering sort of friend to have it put yourself in a new frame of mind. Let me see. Oh, I was thinking of you."

It is natural to ponder long, I suppose, when one has been with her for a while

POLITICS AMONG BIRDS

It was a frosty morning in the fore part of September, 1911, that one of the prominent farmers in the Vermilion district in northern Alberta, was taking a stroll around his farm meditating upon plans and regulations for the successful prosecution of farming operations. He suddenly heard a commotion of strange voices; at first he thought it sounded like a political pow-wow of the good old Lincoln-Douglas Days, but on further observation he discovered in the corner of a large wheat field an immense flock of blackbirds. One of the most noticeable features of this vast assemblage was that some of the members were decorated with yellow rings around their necks and red plumage on their heads. Being somewhat conversant with bird language, our worthy tiller of the soil, gleaned from the talk of these highly decorated and loquacious birds that they were emissaries from "Reciprocity Bills" domain sent up here from the south to consent among the feathered population a foolish desire for something called "reciprocity."

The writer of this little episode is not very well versed in biblical lore, but if I remember right, it says in Solomon's proverbs, that "A wise man gets an idea into his head; but a fool gets it in the neck," or something to that effect, and this is the idea I wish to convey, that reciprocity is a big word for "dumbing", and the reciprocity speakers can be likened to a Yankee peddler who sent in selling a pair of pants that "these are big enough for any man and small enough for any boy."

Yours truly,
Sandre Rounsvelt, Jr.
Vermilion, Sept. 5th.

Reverberating gunshots could be heard away across the different marshes all last week and proclaimed the opening of the battle, and started the plump fowl on their early morning flights. Several duck-shooters are reported as coming down from Edmonton last week and hiking for old familiar haunts, going by train or automobile to such noted places as Islay, Kitscoty, Birch Lake and to the large lakes north of Vermilion, where the elusive water birds are to had in abundance.

There has been a rush on the ammunition stores and as usual, some of the amateurs of the game, have been seen out in elaborate tan duck costume, shooting caps and all the other personal accoutrements that is necessary and superfluous. Staid business men have swept all care to the winds, and old friendships have been revived in the shooting lodges. It seems certain that duck for dinner will be a favorite ration in Vermilion from now on.

Ducks are reported to be very plentiful this year. The ample supply of moisture creating conditions which bring this result. They are as well, in prime condition, owing to the abundant feed from the prolific ground this year.

There is a mistaken idea prevalent that prairie chicken may be shot after Sept. 1, but the only open season for this bird is the month of October.

The open season for duck ... closes from August 23rd to Dec. 31.

[illegible] ... at any time ... [illegible] ... wild geese.

Constable McPhail, R.N.W.M.P. states to the Standard this morning that all deputy game wardens ... received instructions from Benj. Lawton ... [illegible] ... to enforce the provisions of the Game Act. He further stated that several of the settlers residing in the Vermilion districts have complained to him that a good deal of Sunday shooting is being carried on already. He intends to bring to justice all parties responsible for shooting on that day.

Any resident of this province accompanying or aiding a non-resident to hunt or shoot without the necessary permit, shall be held equally to have violated the law and shall be liable to like penalties.

List of Demonstration Farm Buildings

Laid Out in Full View of Passing Trains Great Thing for Town

Through the kindly assistance of J. Commons, the Standard is enabled this week to give a complete list of the buildings, dimensions and other interesting particulars, that are now in course of erection on the Vermilion Demonstration Farm by the provincial government.

All the buildings are laid out in such a manner as to be in full view of passing trains and consequently will prove a great advertisement to the town. They are as follows:

Manager's House, 30x30, cement basement.
Farm House, 18x26
Cow Stable, 36x72, 14 ft wall, cement, hip roof.
Horse Stable, 42x44, 14 ft wall, hip roof.
Pig House
Sheep House
Pavillion.
All foundations of cement.

Special Council Meeting

A special meeting of the town fathers was held in the council chamber Monday night, the Mayor in the chair and all members of the board with exception of Coun. Roseborough, present.

A petition requesting 6ft walk instead of 4ft on north side of 1st Street, north, from Bulyea to Alberta Ave. was read from ratepayers interested.—Owing to nature of the business transacted in this section of the town and the breaks occasioned by crossings, the council deemed it inexpedient to construct a wider walk than 4ft at the present time as it will eventually have to be replaced by a cement walk.

E. S. Glassford was awarded the contract for laying the required sidewalks and crossings in the town.

A motion was passed instructing Secy to write Public Works dept re the bridge crossing Vermilion river, and if possible have same replanked as it is in a dangerous condition.

The Highways & Park committee was empowered to proceed with the work of grading road north of the Pilkie subdivision, and crossing of Bulyea Ave and First St north.

Letter was read from J. C. Drekle, per Alex. Inglis, re town procuring competent man from manufacturing firm of gas-producer plants and let him demonstrate for a year what the plant could do, town to pay all operating expenses and collect all revenue. On motion the proposition was not entertained.

A motion was put and carried that Finance committee interview the bank or banks re financing of the Electric Light plant until debentures have been sold, and if satisfactory arrangements can be made that Secy be instructed to wire Bourne & Logan to send a competent engineer at once.

The Fire & Light committee were instructed to test the town hall well.

In the event of the old plant company not accepting the offer of the town for their property, it is probable that the new buildings will be erected on the two lots acquired by the town last year on First St north.

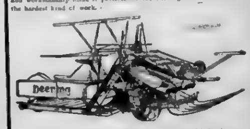
DEERING IDEAL BINDER

5, 6 and 7 ft. Cut.

The binder built for hard work. Strong construction, best material and workmanship make it possible for the Deering Ideal binder to stand the hardest kind of work.



Following are a few excellent features found on this binder:

No bolts in the main frame, parts are hot-riveted together, making it practically everlasting.

Pitman is made of second growth hickory.

The reel has four distinct movements, operated by a single lever.

Roller and ball bearings are used wherever subject to friction, thus reducing side draft.

Platform bottom is made of sheet steel riveted so that it never catches obstructions.

These are only a few of the many valuable features to be found on this binder.

A FARMER'S EXHIBITION

What does an exhibition mean to the average farmer? It means that some of the very best in live stock some of the largest and most appropriate farm machinery that is especially designed for its benefit is shown or is a education. It means that he may seen some of the most appropriate and desirable types of live stock [illegible] a beef animal a dairy animal a Clydesdale, a Percheron a Shire Stallion or a fancy light harness horse [illegible] the most approved [illegible] fanning [illegible] which he may take [illegible] his seed wheat. The latest type of drill or cultivator [illegible] walking sulky gang [illegible] steam plow. Then too [illegible]

[illegible]

And then there are the home [illegible] exhibits of flowers and plants [illegible] there are the dairy exhibits to see [illegible] last but not least there is the [illegible] of all the noted [illegible] to be seen. Taking [illegible] into consideration [illegible] the annual exhibition [illegible]

WESTERN HARVEST PROBLEM

How to Supply the Pressing Needs of the Growing Western Country

Winnipeg.—As the summer progresses and the wheat growth of the West advances toward maturity there comes this year, as [illegible] comes every year, an appeal for help in the harvest fields and the probability is that even though eastern Canada may [illegible] of out thousands of men and boys to aid in the garnering of the grain the West will, Oliver Twist-like, ask for more.

This problem of how to supply the pressing needs of a new and rapidly growing country for a few weeks [illegible] is all the irritation [illegible] to [illegible] is one of those which can only be solved by co-operation and looking ahead. It is true that the government through its immigration department is advertising in the hands of newspapers throughout Great Britain and the United States [illegible] the harvest is plenteous and the laborers are few and that some [illegible] can be gained in that way, but [illegible] would undoubtedly be much better if more dependence was to be [illegible] upon individual effort.

Take the case of a man who goes to the Canadian West from old Canada [illegible] any of the Western or Central States or from Great Britain. He is a very unusual man indeed if he does not take up his pen in hand [illegible] of his pioneering and [illegible] to complain of [illegible] of the snow or of the [illegible] of any dozen other difficulties which pioneers have to overcome. He [illegible] as a matter of course not with any desire to knock the new country but animated by that human sentiment which seeks comfort in trouble and failing to find it in a new locality looks for it in the old home. [illegible] that same man has made [illegible] often does he write home [illegible] of his fortune? The habit of [illegible] home is much like the habit of taking the local newspaper from [illegible] a year or two or three and then it is dropped because of the new environment crowding out interest in the old. How much better both [illegible] and the country would [illegible] for such a man to write home [illegible] at home of his good fortune and ask them to send a brother, a cousin or even only an old acquaintance to help him gather the crops.

That would be a practical individual way of solving the harvest problem [illegible] it would be [illegible] advertisement for the West [illegible] we all know there is no advertisement as good as a satisfied settler and it would create a new bond of interest between the man in the West and those left behind at home.

And the most attractive feature of the suggestion which comes from W. D. Scott the head of the immigration branch is that it is just the sort of thing which will appeal to the sentiment of the westerner and is at the time reasonable in cost.

Every packet of Wilson's Fly Pads will kill more flies than can possibly be caught on three hundred sheets of sticky paper.

DR. JOHN WAUGH TAKES UP IMPORTANT DUTIES.

Ottawa Is Sorry to Lose Prominent Educationist Who Becomes Inspector of Continuation Schools For the Province—Will Make His Home at Whitby, Where He Was Formerly Stationed.

The many friends of Dr. John Waugh in Ottawa have been pleased to learn that he has been appointed by the Provincial Government inspector of the continuation schools for Ontario. He has held the position of lecturer on Psychology and English in the Ottawa Normal School here for over a year and has proved himself one of the foremost educational thinkers and teachers of the Dominion and his removal from the capital is much regretted. Dr. Waugh was formerly public school inspector in Ontario County and he formerly resided at Whitby, which he will again make his home. There will be a large increase in the number of continuation schools necessitating the appointment of a second inspector.

Prisoner's Face.

"You and I have met here before," said Mr. Curtis Bennett, the Bow street magistrate, the other day to a prisoner at the Marylebone Court, London, where he was presiding in the place of Mr. Plowden, who was indisposed. The records were examined, and the prisoner was found to have been dealt with there by Mr. Curtis Bennett seven years ago.

Born in 1846, the son of Rev. George Peter Bennett, for thirty-two years vicar of Kelvedon, Essex, Mr. Curtis Bennett was educated in his father's [illegible] and was called to the Bar in 1876. He acted as [illegible] for Essex for two years, and has been a police magistrate since [illegible] are walking and reading.

A good raconteur, Mr. Curtis Bennett has a big stock of anecdotes for [illegible] One recounted by him has a [illegible]

"Cracker" Johnson was up before the O.C. [illegible] luck had been dealt against him [illegible] having a friendly [illegible] with a redcap.

"I'm sorry to see you here again, Johnson," said the colonel. "I'll take a great interest in you. I've known you ever since you were a boy, and, as you know, your father was my colour-sergeant. In these circumstances I shall not punish you so much as I would otherwise have done. Fourteen days' C.B."

"Thank goodness!" gasped poor old Cracker.

"What do you mean, sir?"

"Thank goodness," went on Johnson, "you didn't know my grandfather!"

Took Them In.

London clubland is laughing over a very comical story. Some [illegible] Caledonians in London run a Bohemian little circle and they dined together once a week at their social gathering. Two or three nights back a distinguished Oriental visitor was introduced. He was swarthy of color and solemn of mien and wore magnificent robes. He was presented as one of the Indian coronation guests of the King, and it was explained that he wished to see a little of the Bohemian life of London. His highness was respectfully welcomed, and the customary complimentary speeches were made, his highness being accompanied by an interpreter. For two hours he solemnly looked on, eating little and drinking no intoxicants. Then, to the surprise and delight of the company, it was announced that his highness would sing an Indian love song. The Indian prince stood up and electrified everybody by suddenly, in accents that would not have disgraced Harry Lauder, breaking out into "I love a lassie." Then the Scottish Bohemians knew that they had been completely "spoofed." His highness was a "brither Scot" in disguise. He escaped with his life.

ABOUT SIGNBOARDS.

Queen Elizabeth Resented Some Pictures of Her.

The popularity of signboards in early times was due to the fact that as the majority of citizens were unable to read, it was incumbent upon the tradesmen to hang out some sort of sign indicating his wares. So early as the reign of [illegible] II., records "The Globe," publicans were compelled by law to have a sign, but with tradesmen the sign was optional. Competition rendered its use imperative. The tradesmen vied one with another as to who should display the largest signs, which were projected as far as possible, with the result that they almost excluded the light from the narrow streets, and were a danger to pedestrians. That these signs did not pass unnoticed in high circles is proved by the statement of Sir Walter Raleigh that Queen Elizabeth, being displeased with portraits of herself, "made by unskilful and common painters," gave orders that they be "knocked in pieces, and cast in the fire." The monarchy was widely represented by signboards, and there were "King's Heads" and "Queen's Heads" without number. "Bullen Butchered" figured as a sign over an alehouse after the death of the luckless Anne, and this became in time the "Bull and Butcher."

When Charles I. came to the throne, by way of ingratiating himself with the citizens of London, he granted them, among other favors, the right of hanging out signboards. This proclamation added to the zeal of the tradesmen, and their signs attained to greater dimension than ever. The Commonwealth coming into being, the signboards had to be adapted to the change in the political situation. Jno. Taylor, the water poet, who had the temerity to proclaim his royalist sympathies by adopting as a sign for his ale-house the "Mourning Crown," was compelled to take it down, so he promptly stuck up a drawing of himself, adding the words—

There's many a head stands for a sign;
Then, gentle reader, why not mine?

Any signs that savored of popery came under the ban of the authorities. With the return of Charles II. to the throne, a further blow was struck at signboards, which forbade them to be hung across the street, and condemned those of unwieldy size.

It would appear that there was a tendency to honor this act rather in the breach than in the observance, for it is recorded that in 1718 a sign in St. Bride's Lane was so heavy that it pulled down the front of the house, killing a cobbler, the king's jeweler and two ladies. When the craze for effective signboards was at its height many prominent artists profited thereby. Hogarth painted signboards, and several stood to the credit of that reckless genius George Morland. Lawrence was represented by a forgery, for his pupil Harlow, after a quarrel, conceived a diabolical plan for [illegible] revenge. Harlow was staying at [illegible] Head, Epsom, and he painted a sign after the manner of his master, signing it "T.L., Greek street, Soho," which sign was proudly displayed for many years to the great disgust and annoyance of Lawrence. Mr. Wale who helped to found the Royal Academy and was its first professor of Perspective, painted many signs, and one which was a full length of Shakespeare enclosed in a carved gilt frame was the great attraction of the town as it swung over a tavern in Little Russell street, Drury lane. But this along with other signs was swept away by an act passed in the reign of George III., which ordered all signs to be affixed to the houses.

I.D.B. Dodges.

There are many stories of I.D.B., i.e., illicit diamond buying, in South Africa. Mr. Louis Cohen tells of some of the dodges in his Reminiscences of Kimberley's early [illegible] Ostriches were enlisted in the traffic and used as carriers. Often the poor animals were first kept without food until they were on the verge of starvation, and then given lumps of meat containing diamonds which they bolted. Safely arrived at the [illegible] the [illegible] friends of man were immediately rewarded for their services by having their stomachs ripped up and the embedded baubles taken out. Dogs too were utilized, being fed balls of meat containing diamonds, and driven across the river under the very noses of the police. [illegible] pigeons were [illegible] to fly through the air with brigands [illegible] enclosing diamonds sealed down with wax were also expedients employed with decided and profitable success.

Envy of Autograph Fiends.

Every preacher who occupies the pulpit at St. Paul's in London, signs his name after the service in a book that is kept in the vestry, a book which dates back to 17[illegible], the earliest signature in it being "Edward St. [illegible]." This is the autographic [illegible] the most valuable [illegible] as it contains the signatures of great numbers of eminent churchmen for nearly 200 years. HOW AUSTRALIA HANDLES IT.

Tuberculosis Seen to Be But a Painful Memory in That Land.

Health conditions in Australia are better than in any other country on the globe if the low death rate of less than a thousand a year may be accepted as an index.

The death rate from tuberculosis has steadily been declining during the last 25 years and is [illegible] per cent. of the total deaths, which is a lower percentage than any published by any other country which compiles its statistics in an equally accurate manner.

In New South Wales the notification of cases of pulmonary and throat tuberculosis has been compulsory for over ten years. The walls and ceilings of houses in which cases occur are sprayed with a solution of formalin and the floors are washed with a solution of corrosive sublimate.

The effectiveness of the educational campaign is shown by the fact that open air sleeping is more general than in any other country. There is scarcely a dwelling house constructed nowadays in Australia, even a laborer's cottage, which is not provided with a suitable veranda for outdoor sleeping. There is very little expectorating on the sidewalks or other public places.

Ordinances to prevent the contamination of milk and other foodstuffs are well observed. In shops where it is [illegible] customary to find [illegible] for the purpose of catching dust. [illegible] large cities, like Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide and others, have tuberculosis sanatoria and also a large number of beds for chronic cases. The Greenvale Sanatorium, near Melbourne, will compare favorably with similar institutions in Europe and [illegible]

Gratifying progress has been made in treating chronic and more particularly open cases of tuberculosis in New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia. It is estimated that at least 50 per cent. of these cases have been passed by hospitals and a good proportion of the remainder under supervision. The health authorities [illegible] to reduce the danger of transmitting the infection to a minimum.

Nile's Green Water.

The "green water" of the Nile is quite a different thing from the green water of the ocean.

About April 15 the Nile begins its annual rise and a month later the effect is felt at Khartoum. A very curious phenomenon accompanies the increase in the appearance of the green water.

For a long time it was believed that the color came from the swamps of the upper Nile lying isolated and stagnant under the tropical sun and polluting the waters with decaying vegetable matter. With the spring rise swept into the [illegible] appearance [illegible] Egypt.

Conservative Platform

The Liberal-Conservative party, through its leader, Mr. R. L. Borden, gives it pledge to carry out the following policy if returned to power:—

1 A thorough reorganization of the method by which public expenditure is supervised. The increase of what is known as ordinary controllable expenditure from 21,000,000 in 1896, to nearly $74,000,000 in 1911, is proof of extravagance beyond any possible denial.

2 The granting of their natural resources to the prairie provinces.

3 The construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, and its operation by independent commission.

4 The control and operation by the State of the terminal elevators.

5 The necessary encouragement for establishing and carrying on the chilled meat industry.

6 The establishment of a permanent tariff commission.

7 The granting of substantial assistance towards the improvement of our public highways.

8 The extension of free rural mail delivery.

9 The extension of civil service reform.

10 The granting of liberal assistance to the provinces for the purpose of supplementing and extending the work of agricultural education and for the improvement of agriculture.

And, lastly, it pledges itself to a course of policy and administration which will maintain independent and unimpaired the control of our own affairs by the parliament of Canada; a policy which, while affording no just cause of complaint to any foreign nation, will find its highest ideal in the autonomous development of Canada as a nation within the British empire.

INTERESTED IN VERMILION PROPERTY

Jas. Outram, London, England in Town this Week

James Outram, of London, Eng is in Vermilion this week looking over the country and attending to large town property interests recently acquired here. Mr. Outram is completing a business trip of no little magnitude making a complete tour of the United States where he studied the investment field at first hand. He was not favorably impressed with the conditions existing at the present time, money he said, was very tight and the effects of the drought most severe in many of the states of the union. He considered it refreshing to come into northern Alberta and view such a magnificent stretch of rich productive country with marked evidences of rapid growth and prosperity on all sides.

Mr. Outram sails on the 22nd for England and will deliver addresses there on this country, and as he stated to the Standard, particularly on Vermilion and district. In March next, he will locate here permanently and handle his business interests at Vermilion.

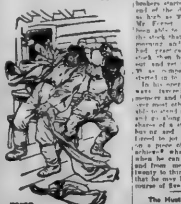
CHAPTER I.



THE LAUREATE.

Alfred Austin Has Published His Memoirs of Men and Events.

Mr. Alfred Austin, the Poet-Laureate, who has written his reminiscences, is not only a poet, but also a barrister and journalist. He practiced only a few years at the Bar, and his reminiscences are mainly occupied with his career as a journalist and man of letters. He was educated at Stonyhurst, and the son of worthy parents in comfortable circumstances living near Leeds.

Mr. Austin once heard Lord Wolseley giving a useful piece of advice to a young officer who asked what was the best way to "get on" in the army. The answer was very simple: "Try to get killed."

There is a good deal of intimate political matter in Mr. Austin's second volume. Lord Wolseley, we learn, was highly indignant at being ordered back by the Government after the failure of his expedition to relieve Gordon. Writing to Mr. Austin, he expressed his feelings in the words: "He (a great party leader) deserves to be torn to pieces in the market place by an indignant people."

The author was once asked by the then Sir Francis Jeune what he thought of Mr. Chamberlain, to whom he had been talking at luncheon.

"How did he strike you?" "As being a hard-headed visionary," I replied, "who brings the most business-like and practical mind to bear on the impracticable, not to say the unattainable."

Years after Mr. Austin told Mr. Chamberlain of this estimate; and the great statesman was pleased, saying: "It is not unflattering, is it?"

It is well known how on a historic occasion Lord Randolph Churchill "forgot Goschen." Mr. Austin has retold the story of that strange event, from a new point of view and from behind the scenes. Mr. Austin warned Lord Salisbury "Randolph is aspiring to push you out of the saddle."

FORE!

A Few Real Good Golf Stories From the Old Land.

The golfing season is in full swing again. The grip of golf on mankind gets tighter every year. There are almost exactly twice as many golfers, it is estimated, as there were fifteen years ago.

It was no less an authority than Mr. Balfour who said "Golf is the only game." It is certainly a game for statesmen, for it is played in the most serious of spirits, and its rules are more numerous and more complicated than the rules of procedure in the British House of Commons. When the golfer does chuckle, it is usually over a question of rules.

Last summer two beginners were playing over a course in the Midlands of England. As one of them was about to play a calf moved into the line of his shot. He sent his caddie ahead to drive it away, but his opponent objected.

The other player, somewhat indignant, demanded his reason. The objector drew from his pocket a well-thumbed copy of the rules, and pointed out that, though loose objects could be removed from the line of a shot, nothing that was growing could. A calf, he pointed out, was distinctly in the growing stage, so it must not be interfered with. The other looked resigned, played, and hit the calf on the head, spoiling his shot.

A cow is the heroine of a story—probably untrue—that they tell on a London links. A drive was hit into the cow's mouth, the ball staying there. The man who made this notable shot hit on the ingenious idea of getting a brilliant score for the hole by driving the cow on to the green, and persuading it to drop the ball in the hole. This was eventually accomplished, by means of his heaviest club, and the player turned triumphantly to his opponent.

"My hole!" he exclaimed. "Did it in one!"

LATE DUCHESS OF DEVONSHIRE LOST FORTUNES AT CARDS.

English Noblewoman Who Died a Few Days Ago Was One of the Most Celebrated Society Belles of the Last Century and Her Affairs Were Matters of Current Gossip—Said to Have Lost $2,000,000 in Gaming.

The Dowager Duchess of Devonshire, whose death in London the other day was a result of the excessive heat, was a remarkable woman—such a woman as is more often found in romantic novels than in real life. She was 78 years old, but her photographs, by which she was known the world over, make her appear much younger. She was but a child when with her German father, Count d'Alton of Hanover, she came to England, largely because the Prince Consort, Albert, husband of Victoria, was a German. As Countess Louise d'Anhalt she was presented at court at the age of 17. She was then noted for her beauty and vivacity and was immediately surrounded by noble and princely suitors. From among them she chose Lord Mandeville, who three years later became Duke of Manchester. The duke was a rake, a gambler and a spendthrift and it was through him that the beautiful duchess became enamored of the gaming table.

She was only 19 years old when she became the mother of a son who ...

DON'TS FOR EVERYBODY

Don't forget the "Good-morning" at the early morning meal. Well-bred people on entering the breakfast room generally give a salutation, which is as a rule in good form.

Don't laugh continually when talking. Many young people do it to avoid bashfulness. Others acquire this habit; but in either case it is a breach of good manners.

Don't let your politeness be always for the visitor. An agreeable speech, a tender word, a compliment now and then, is much appreciated even by your own family, softening the rough roads in life and making an encouragement when needed.

The best times we have ever had have been when we were trying to do the right thing the right way.

HOW HE JUDGED

The great Albini tells a hot one. It seems there is a manager out West his wife is the leader of the orchestra, and while the show is on he watches his wife and does not look at the act. If he discovers his wife wiping her nostrils with a handkerchief, that's his cue that the act is about to be completed. So, one day, after the first show, one of the actors asked the manager why his wife always played the first show with the handkerchief in her hand. The rube manager replied "I take my opinion from my wife's actions whether the act remains or not." Then the actor said, "You'd have a fine time some Sunday if your wife had a cold in her head."

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

Would Free Trade With United States Hurt Preference?

A great many people believe that if any measure of Free Trade be adopted with the United States the only natural result of that policy would be the ultimate breaking down of the British Preference which has existed between Canada and Great Britain for the past thirteen years.

In 1898 a preference or a reduction of duties to the extent of 25 per cent was extended by Canada to the United Kingdom, and in the year 1900 this preference was increased from 25 to 33⅓ per cent. The existing Canadian tariff, (that of 1907), while it does not everywhere grant a preferential duty of exactly 33⅓ per cent has a schedule of duties which vary from article to article, but in which the general principle of the reduction of duty by one third in favor of Great Britain has been observed.

Rank of Lumber Provinces 1910

The total lumber cut of the Dominion of Canada for 1910, has just been compiled by the Forestry Branch. Reports were received from 2763 firms operating sawmills, which is 700 more than reported last year. Thus the 1910 report is a better estimate of the actual lumber production than ever before. Nearly nine billion feet of lumber was cut during 1910 throughout the nine provinces of Canada, which represents a total value to the country of seventy seven and a half million dollars. This is about fifteen million dollars more than the value of the 1909 lumber cut. Ontario, as in former years, holds the premier position as a lumber province. Its forests are made up of diversified species, which enabled it to produce one-third of the lumber for the Dominion. British Columbia, however, will soon take Ontario's place, from predictions made on the 1910 report. In 1909, the Western provinces produced a trifle over half as much lumber as was cut in Ontario, while for last year the amounts returned from the two provinces were practically the same. Although one-quarter more lumber was cut in Quebec in 1910 than in the year previous, the increase was not sufficient to maintain it in second place of importance, which position was usurped by British Columbia. The remaining provinces New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Manitoba and Prince Edward Island cut lumber in the order of importance given, but together supply only one-sixth of the amount for Canada.

Veneer Manufactured and Used in Canada

Including natural and imported veneer 92,046,000 square feet, valued at $768,500 were produced or used in Canada in 1910. This is an average cost of $7.47 per M. square feet. Of this amount, 90.9 per cent. was native wood and consists of 14 species; the most important of these were birch and maple which together form over one-half of the total native woods. These were manufactured into veneer in the [illegible] were [illegible] panel work and vehicles. Elm and basswood are next in importance and together form about 1-8 of the native wood. These two species of veneer are made by smaller mills in the fruit district and are used for fruit baskets, packages and cheese boxes. Imported woods $140,587 amounted to one-tenth of the total amount of veneer used.

Railways or Reciprocity—Which Will You Have?

Box 37, Vermilion, Sept. 11 1911

The Editor Standard.

Dear Sir:—I have been asked by several friends to publish extracts from two letters I have had from England with reference to the reciprocity treaty now so prominently before the electors. The writer of these letters is a man of considerable experience in the British money market and has very heavy investments in Canadian securities and is the English director of the C.N.R. The importance of these letters can scarcely be overestimated and I ask the electors (no matter to which party they belong) to give them their careful consideration. The first letter is written March 16 and says:—

"This reciprocity treaty has added immensely to the difficulty of my work lately.—You see the British investor has for some years past given to Canadian investments a very remarkable preference. Canada has not only obtained the greatest amount of our money for her developments but she has also obtained it much cheaper than any other country on similar security. Thus, Winnipeg has been able to sell her securities at a much lower rate of interest than the City of New York, and Canadian industrials have been able to raise money easily at from 5 p.c. to 6 p.c. whilst similar and better established industrials in the United States have been begging for money at 7 p.c. This has been the result of a great wave of enthusiasm for Canada and all things Canadian. This sentiment has been checked, if not killed, by the reciprocity negotiations, and English investors are selling Canadian investments in increasing volume and it is easier to hold back Niagara Falls than to influence the great mass of investors in this country when once they get an idea into their heads. You may imagine how much this adds to the difficulty of Canadian finance in London.

(Signed) R. M. Horne-Payne

The second letter says:—

Aug 1st, 1911

"You will be in the heat of a general election when this letter reaches you. I hope and pray that the reciprocity treaty may be defeated for the sake of our Empire and its splendid institutions of freedom and justice, and because I know that the greatest prosperity and happiness of Canadians and Englishmen alike are bound up in the strength and independence of the Empire. Looking at the matter also from a lower plane—the passage of the treaty means a setback to the Dominion as it will be very difficult to raise fresh capital."

(Signed) R. M. Horne-Payne.

Now, sir, it is very evident from the above letters that if Canada wishes to borrow money for building her railways and for industrial purposes from England, we shall have to retain the confidence of British investors or pay ruinous rates of interest for our money, and the only way this confidence can be regained is by throwing out this iniquitous reciprocity treaty and showing the British investor that we are still true to the old flag. I don't think I need say much about the need for railways in Western Canada. Everyone knows it. Railways simply mean that the country can become settled, that the farmer can draw his produce to the elevator without having to go several day's journey with it they mean that the property of homesteaders is increased fourfold in value and that he can get his supplies in comfort. Give us the railways and the people will see to the development of the country but without them the wonderful resources of the West must remain locked up; its coal deposits must remain unworked and its rich land will still continue to be prairie. We know what the railways will do for us, but it would take a powerful microscope to see what benefit we are going to get from reciprocity. If we get reciprocity we shall loose the confidence of the people who have provided the money to build our railways and fall into the hands of people who have only 1 per cent. invested in them. I don't think it will take any thoughtful elector long to decide which will be most to his benefit—Railways or Reciprocity.

Some of your readers may imagine that this is all fancy—if so can he explain why the Vermilion Town bonds which were offered for sale before the reciprocity treaty was suggested were readily sold at a premium when they only carried 5 1-2 p.c. interest, whereas they can only be sold now at a discount although they offer a higher interest, 6 p.c. The reason is plain. The British investor has lost confidence and you have to pay for it—and the same thing will take place in every case unless we prove by our votes that we will have nothing to do with so called reciprocity.

Yours sincerely,
H. A. TAYLOR.

Rural Line Into North and South

Telephone Line To Be Built To Campbell Lake and Cummings

The Standard learns that it is the intention of the public works department of the provincial government to construct rural telephone lines into the north and south country from Vermilion this fall. The line north will give service to the Campbell Lake district, and that south to the Cummings and Battle River settlements. The successful outcome of the movement to obtain the service for these districts will be hailed with delight by the settlers.

Acquired Townsite Property

Which Will be Improved and Built Upon Will Materially Assist In Present Rapid Growth of Town Cityward

A number of English capitalists have become interested in Vermilion and its great possibilities as a distributing point and a railroad centre—with the result that they have acquired large holdings of land in the townsite of Vermilion.

The plans of the company, though not [illegible] form yet, are to improve the property and erect several buildings upon it, open up and grade streets, etc. This will probably be done next spring.

Cedric A. Morris of the Alberta Townsite company, the Standard's informant [illegible] a former visit [illegible] impressed with the progress Vermilion has made this year, and states that he expects to see the steps of advancement that have been made this year simply the start of an epoch of rapid development for Vermilion, which has now passed its infantile state.

A Happy Gathering

A social evening was held at the home of Mr and Mrs Wm Bryden Saturday evening by the employees of the Vermilion Brick Yard on the closing of the season's operations. After light refreshments were served, in the unavoidable absence of the directors, the manager Mr J King was voted to the chair and an impromptu program of songs and speeches was very much enjoyed. A pleasing break in the programme was the presentation to Mrs Bryden of a very handsome easy chair and lamp by the employees as a token of esteem. A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of Auld Lang Syne. Billy was also the recipient of two very useful articles, one a fine cuspidor and a well ask Bill.

WHEAT GROWING IN AUSTRALIA

Australia is rapidly becoming one of the wheat countries of the world, and as there is a prospect of wheat prices remaining at a fairly high level for some time and as wheat growing is one of the easiest and simplest forms of agriculture it offers an exceptional opportunity to immigrants with a little money and experience. C P R WILL EXPORT COAL

To the United States—Extensions Being Built on Lines.

It is stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway is preparing to market immense shipments of coal in the United States in the near future. The C P R is expending huge sums of money in rushing to completion extensions from the Pacific Coast and the northern boundary of the United States to its productive coal deposits in the Rocky Mountains. The C P R lines already come within striking distance of the international boundary at several points and with the other extensions that are now being built the Rocky Mountain coal mines will be in active competition with United States mines for the trade of the Pacific northwest. An idea of the enormous expenditure involved in the building of these new western lines by the C P R can be had from the statement that altogether construction work is being gone on with on over one thousand miles of new line. Most of these extensions are being built as feeders from the country north of or parallel to the line, but are also a goodly number of miles of track which is stretching down toward the boundary line and they afford excellent opportunities for the building up of the C P R of a flourishing trade in Canadian Rocky Mountain coal with the United States.

If one be troubled with corns and warts he will find in Holloway's Corn Cure an application that will entirely relieve suffering.

Married In Haste

But There Is No Record of Repenting at Leisure

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"I wish you to be my bridesmaid," wrote my friend Clara Wightman, "and you are to be matched with George's best man. Of all men John Burkin is the best except George, who, you know, is the best in the world to me just now. And I have a feeling down in my heart, dear, that you and John will make a match. He is everything you could wish for, except means. But he is self reliant, ambitious, full of energy and hope, and, after all, a marriage with that kind of man brings more happiness than wealth. At any rate, it brings more zest to life."

I don't know anything that will more interest a girl than to have some one say, "I have a man picked out for you to marry." A pleasing curiosity is aroused at once. True, these partners picked out by a third person are usually just what the girl doesn't want, or he doesn't want her, or they are repellent to each other. Nevertheless till they meet they—at least the girl—lives in a world of romance. She wonders what he is like ... [illegible]

What in the world could the man be driving at?

"Now, it has occurred to me that—I'm a practical sort of fellow, you know—I have thought that the most sensible thing I can do—of course there isn't much time for such an important move— What I am trying to get out"—

For heaven's sake, get it out!

"The matter I am driving at is that I'd like to take your daughter with me as my wife."

Well, I declare! He wants to take some one down into that barbarous country simply for company to help him through with his spare time. He won't take me!

There was a brief silence, at the end of which I heard father ask, "Have you spoken to my daughter?"

"I have not. In any event I would have asked your permission to do so, and this very unusual haste renders it ... ."

"So far as I am concerned," said father, "I have no objection. I will call Sadie, and if you think you can induce her to consent to such a hasty marriage you are quite welcome to try. But if you will be guided by an older man, a married man, you will not word your proposition to her as you have to me. I would advise you to tell her that this move is the result of love, not an expedient. It doesn't matter that expediency is your principal reason. We must give women a little taffy, you know."

Oh, these men!

But a matter of far greater importance arrested my attention—at least it seemed more important at the time. Father went to the door and called me. Of course there was no answer. He went out into the hall and called again. Then I heard him go upstairs. "Where's Sadie?" "She's below." "No, she isn't." "She surely isn't up ..." [illegible]

PAPER-MAKING PIONEER

John Barber Has Been In Business Half a Century.

John R. Barber, ex-M.P.P., who recently celebrated his seventieth birthday, is undoubtedly the most widely known paper manufacturer in Canada, and in point of years of continuous connection with the business is an outstanding figure. He has seen over half a century of constant identification with the industry. It is fifty-five years since he first worked in a mill finishing room. The mention of the name "Barber" at once brings to the mind the thought of paper, and all other makers in Canada look upon him as the doyen of the trade. His father, James Barber, was the first man in Canada to learn paper-making by hand. With his sieve, vat, and blanket he was an expert at the work, and turned out enough sheets every week to draw thirteen and fourteen days' pay. The mill, where he labored, was at Crook's Hollow, which in 1860 was a great manufacturing centre, five miles from Dundas. The father of Hon. Adam Crooks, who was the first Minister of Education in Ontario, owned the industry. The first mill of the Barbers was erected at Georgetown in the middle fifties, there being at that time only three other news plants in the country, that owned by the Taylors on the Don being one of them. The initial product of the Barber plant was three carloads of wrapping paper, and the Grand Trunk was then being built.

The wrapping paper was heaped on three flat cars for shipment to Toronto by means of a construction train. In those days locomotives burned wood and there were no box cars. As the engine puffed and snorted it emitted many sparks and John R. Barber, then a boy in his teens, along with several men from the mill, rode on the flat cars. ... [illegible]

PIONEER'S PRIVATIONS

HIS LOT NOT SO PLEASANT AS MIGHT BE SUPPOSED.

The Easy-Going Fellow Depicted in the Magazines Represent Only One Side of the Hardships That Confront the Path-finder In the Wilds—Death and Suffering Are the Frequent Reward of the Frontiersman.

There is a great difference between pioneering as it is in real life and as it is in the magazines. Stories of exploration in the wilderness parts of Canada, racily written and with pictures to boot, are very entertaining, and they contribute much to the haze of golden interest that is gathering about the north. Life in Canada would be tamer and poorer without the best of new things in new regions, out of which good reading matter is made. But the stories are at times not so fascinating in real life as they are in print, says Aubrey Fullerton in Toronto Star Weekly.

The romance of the new West and the new North comes not without cost. Pioneer work, and rare adventure, and possible danger, go always with the wide spaces, and beautiful scenic and natural charm. And what makes the wilderness interesting, so far as stories go, is that there is a deal of human effort behind the scenes.

To say nothing of the homesteaders, the miners, and the railway builders, all of whom are life and blood of the West and the North, there is a hosty of men whose history if it could be gotten together, would give romance—adventure without end. They are the men who ... [illegible]

SOUTH SEA FASHIONS.

The Dusky Native Belles Have Queer Ideas About Dress.

It would be hard to find a spot where the subject of dress does not sway the feminine mind. To the world at large its observance causes either a great fund of pleasure or a good store of amusement. In the category of amusement may be placed the proceedings of the dusky belles described by Beatrice Grimshaw in her book, "In the Strange South Seas."

A lace trimmed garment of mine, usually worn at night under the shelter of sheets and quite went to a Sunday morning church as a best dress in full daylight on the person of the laundress intrusted with my wash. The funny side was so conspicuous that she never got the reproof she deserved.

A certain flower toque made of poppies, a blonde unknown to the Pacific, first drove the women of the island half distracted with excitement, then led thirty-six native ladies to appear simultaneously at a dance wearing excellent copies of my Paris model done in double scarlet hibiscus from the bush.

A wedding from which unfortunately I was absent furnished the finest display of native dress that ... that year. The bride wore fourteen silk dresses, not ... at once, but one after another, changing her dress again and again during the reception until the white spectators were fairly giddy.

THE POCKETKNIFE

Many Machines and Processes Used in Its Making.

ART IN FORGING THE BLADES.

To Become an Adept In the Delicate Work of Tempering Edge Steel Necessitates a Long Course of Training and Years of Experience.

The labor of making a pocketknife is, as usual in every industry that is carried on by the aid of a great deal of machinery, much divided. Each blade must go through six separate processes—first, forging; second, laying on the "tang," that part which is inserted into the handle and through which the blade is riveted; third, marking or stamping with the name of the manufacturer; fourth, "choiling," or filing a depression in the neck of the blade between the sharp edge and the heavier part or "tang"; fifth, tempering; sixth, grinding.

All this applies to the two ordinary blades of a knife. Nail blades are subjected to still another process—namely, the cutting of the file, which is a department of work in itself.

Should we inspect the material room of a knife manufactory we should find heavy iron presses, which stamp out from sheets of brass or iron the metal ... and lining. The bright tips on the end of the knife, called "bolsters," are pressed out of German silver under another heavy weight, which does its work in one blow. Huge shears cut from sheets of steel, used only for this purpose, long strips that are afterward fashioned under a press into springs for the back of the knife.

The rod of steel from which the blades are made is taken from the material room to the forge. Here one end is put into a bed of hot coals, the bellows are pumped, and the end is soon red.

The skilled forger then hammers the blade into shape upon his anvil ... [illegible]

Charged With Murder

Word was received at Edmonton that the mounted police are searching for Jim Atkinson, a half-breed, who, it is alleged, on Monday afternoon shot and killed Mylo Brooks [illegible] several miles from St. Paul des Metis. Atkinson [illegible] himself in a house near the scene of the alleged murder. He is alleged to be a good shot and the officers did not take any unnecessary chances in the move to dislodge him. The tragedy is reported to have been the outcome of a drinking carouse in which both men were participating. Atkinson is well known here and was in town two weeks ago, when he spent sometime in the Standard office.

The Liberal-Conservative party, through its leader, Mr. R. L. Borden, gives it pledge to carry out the following policy if returned to power:—

1 A thorough reorganization of the method by which public expenditure is supervised. The increase of what is known as ordinary controllable expenditure from 21,600,000 in 1896, to nearly $74,000,000 in 1911, is proof of extravagance beyond any possible denial.

Canada Rejects Reciprocity

Conservatives Practically Sweep the Country - Majority of Over 40

Seven Cabinet Ministers Reported Defeated

The Dominion elections are over and the Conservatives practically swept the country from Atlantic to Pacific. The latest returns show a majority for the opposition of 46 seats, with late polls and recounts these figures will probably be somewhat changed. The government went to the country with a majority of 44 and the above results indicate the veritable landslide. Ontario almost went solidly for Borden, while in Quebec substantial gains were made over the previous election. The Nationalists only got two or three seats. Borden, according to late advises, has been elected in Halifax, although earlier reports counted him defeated, but this would make no difference as a seat would be provided for him. He will be Canada's next Premier. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will retire from public life which he has served for so many years.

The most remarkable feature of the contest has been the defeat of seven of the cabinet ministers. Messrs Fielding and Paterson, who negotiated the reciprocity treaty, went down to defeat. The others are Sir Fred Borden, Templeman, King, Graham minister of railways, and Fisher minister of agriculture. Oliver, Lemieux and Beland alone are elected.

The government appealed to the people on the question of reciprocity. By a tremendous majority the answer has been that it was not wanted. The electors were very decisive in their verdict.

In Alberta, returns show the election of White, Oliver, Douglas, Clark and Buchanan for the Liberals and Herron and Bennett for the Conservatives, a Liberal gain of one seat. In Saskatchewan the Conservatives gained two seats and one in British Columbia, while Manitoba remains as before.

In this district with 108 polls heard from White is leading by 522 majority. The Conservatives were confident of carrying the seat for Morrison. Jackman will lose his deposit.

The Conservatives carried Calgary (Bennett) by 3000, and Winnipeg (Haggart) by nearly 5000.

The SILVER HORDE

By REX BEACH

"We're all right this time," observed Emerson. "It's a store." Then to the woman he said briefly, "We want a bed and something to eat."

On every side the walls were shelved with merchandise, while the counter carried a supply of clothing and skins.

"What you want?" demanded the squaw.

Boyd and Fraser, divesting themselves of their furs, noticed that she was little more than a girl—a native undoubtedly.

"Food! Sleep!" Boyd replied.

"You can't stop here," the girl answered firmly.

"Oh, yes, we can," said Emerson.

The squaw called, "Constantine!"

The tall figure of a man emerged, advancing swiftly.

It was the copper hued native who had rescued them from the river earlier in the day. The Indian girl broke into a torrent of excited volubility.

...

"I certainly am," agreed that cheerful person, now fully at his ease.

By and by the girl came, and after showing them to a room she excused herself on the score of having to see to the dinner. When she had withdrawn Fraser puckered his lips into a melodious whistle, then observed:

CHAPTER II.

"Who is she?" asked Emerson.

"You heard, didn't you? She's Miss Mantle and she certainly some remarkable lady," answered the crook.

"Yes, but who is she? What does this mean?" Emerson pointed to the furnishings and fittings about them. "What is she doing here alone?"

"Maybe you'd better ask her yourself," said Fraser.

For the first time in their acquaintance Emerson detected a strange note in the squaw's voice.

The Indian girl summoned them, and they followed her through the long passageway into the other house, where to their utter astonishment they seemed to step out of the frontier and into the heart of civilization. They found a tiny dining room perfectly appointed, in the center of which was a round table gleaming like a deep mahogany pool, upon the surface of which floated snowy hand worked napery, glittering silver and sparkling crystals, the dark polish of the wood reflecting the light from shaded candles.

POWER OF AN AUDIENCE.

Influence It Exerts Over an Actor or a Speaker.

No orator living was ever great enough to give out the same power and force and magnetism to an empty hall, to empty seats, that he could give to an audience capable of being fired by his theme.

In the presence of the audience lies a fascination, an indefinable magnetism, that stimulates all the mental faculties and acts as a tonic and vitalizer. An orator can say before an audience what he could not possibly have said previous to going on the platform, just as we can often say to a friend in animated conversation things which we could not possibly say when alone. As when two chemicals are united a new substance is formed from the combination which did not exist in either alone, the speaker feels surging through his brain the combined force of his audience, which he calls inspiration, a mighty power which did not exist in his own personality before he rose to his feet. No public speaker ever forgets that first surprising feeling of confidence.

Actors tell us that there is an indescribable inspiration which comes from the orchestra, the footlights, the audience, which it is impossible to feel at a cold rehearsal. There is something in a great sea of expectant faces which awakens the ambition and arouses the powers of power which can never be felt except before an audience. The power was there just the same before, but it was not aroused.—Success Magazine.

ASSOCIATIONS OF CHILDHOOD

We could never have loved the earth so well if we had had no childhood in it—if it were not the earth where the same flowers come up every spring that we used to gather with our tiny fingers as we sat lisping to ourselves on the grass—the same hips and haws on the autumn hedgerows—the same red breasts that we used to call "God's birds", because they did no harm to the precious crops. What novelty is worth that sweet monotony where everything is known, and loved because it is known.

The wood I walk in on this mild May day, with the yellow brown foliage of the oaks between me and the blue sky, the white star-flowers and the blue-eyed speedwell and the ground ivy at my feet—what grove of tropic palms, what strange ferns or splendid broad-petalled blossoms could ever thrill such deep and delicate fibres within me as this home scene? These familiar flowers, these well-remembered bird-notes, this sky with its fitful brightness, these furrowed and grassy fields, each with a sort of personality given to it by the capricious hedgerows—such things as these are the mother tongue of our imagination. The language that is laden with all the subtle inextricable associations the fleeting hours of our childhood left behind them. Our delight in the sunshine on the deep-bladed grass today, might be no more than the faint perception of wearied souls, if it were not for the sunshine and the grass in the far-off years which still live in us, and transform our perception into love.—Geo. Eliot.

For Health and Economy Eat more Bread

TEN cents will feed an ordinary family a day on first class bread. This does not mean ordinary bread. For there is an important difference between ordinary bread and first class bread.

It isn't a difference of looks or methods of making or baking. It is a difference of nutrition, food value, healthfulness. And this food value depends on the flour used. For there is a wide difference between flours.

If all flour were the best flour, then all bread, properly made, would be good bread. But all flour is not first class because all wheat is not first class. Wheat, you know, varies in quality almost as much as apples or potatoes; there are as many different grades of wheat as there are grades of butter—or wood.

And every difference in grade represents an actual difference in nourishing value, food elements, wholesomeness. Flour made from a low grade of wheat is by no means so healthful as flour made from high grade wheat. Now the wheat that goes into is of the very highest grade. It contains the highest possible percentage of nutritive value. The makers of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" maintain expensive laboratories and baking departments where skilled men scientifically analyse each day's milling. None but the very best Red Fyfe wheat—rich in nutrition and healthfulness—can pass. For this reason bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR contains the maximum of food value and furnishes the maximum of energy and strength. And for the same reason "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" makes the finest pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, rolls, and pastry of all kinds. It is the one flour that a housewife should use in order to have her household baking strictly first class.

HERE'S HOW YOU ARE KNOWN ABROAD

A quarter circle in the upper left hand corner means 'green and has not travelled much,' indicating that the servants should learn him to tip properly.

A straight upright mark on both sides of the lock means "very liberal."

A horizontal straight mark in the upper right hand corner means "no good."

A mark like a "V" in addition to the last mentioned but placed on the other side of the piece of baggage around the corner from the other mark means "absolutely no good."

A diagonal mark in the lower left hand corner means a "disagreeable crank."

A cross on the lower right hand corner means a "crank, but good."

You must understand that the waiters and all the other servants of European hotels make their living out of the tips that are given them.

The hotel pays the employees nothing in the case of waiters, and next to nothing in the other cases with the understanding that the guests will pay them.

If the guests fail to pay them the servant's fail to make a living.

...

We have devised a means of protecting ourselves from the tourist kind of patrons who omit to tip. Experience has proved that our methods are effective.

HUMBLE AMBITION

If my resolution to be a great man was half so strong as it is to despise the shame of being a little one, I should not despair of a house in Lincoln's-Inn Fields with all its appurtenances, for there is nothing more certain and I can prove it by a thousand instances than that every man may be rich if he will. What is the industry of half the industrious men in the world but avarice? And call it by which name you will, it almost always succeeds.

VERMILION, ALTA., SEPT 20 1911

Now that elections are over, let us all remember that we are brothers in building up a great nation.

THE VOTE

Sufficient corrected returns of the Dominion election have been received to show that the Laurier administration has met with an overwhelming defeat at the polls. Reciprocity throughout the length and breadth of Canada has received its death knell and in spite of the personally of the distinguished chieftan and leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who for the past fifteen years has retained the reins of office for the Liberal pary, the proposed reciprocity agreement turned the mass of the electorate against the party. Though his government has sustained defeat, Sir Wilfrid Laurier will still hold with the people of Canada the exalted position won by his service to his country and King.

LOCAL NEWS.

Did we hear someone mention elections or was it only the coughing of the wind in the tree tops.

See adv. of R. G. Dunsmore—selling out—in this issue. It is of particular interest to farmers.

Don't forget Craig & Falkins big auction next Tuesday on the ranch of W.F.H. Thompson, s.e. 10-50-7, 3 miles southwest of town. Everything to go without reserve as the family are moving to Victoria B.C.

The annual harvest festival service was held in St. Saviour's church Sunday evening as announced last week, and drew a crowded congregation. The large edifice was resplendent with the bountiful fruits of the harvest the decorations being on an elaborate scale and of a beautiful nature The service was particularly bright and joyful, the harvest music being heartily joined in by the congregation The choir rendered a beautiful anthem. Mr. Harding delivered a stirring sermon appropriate to the occasion, which made a deep impression upon his hearers.

Alf. J. Thompson one of the early settlers in the Coyote Valley district, returned Saturday from a three month's visit to Coventry, England. He is looking exceptionally well and reports a most enjoyable holiday. The weather was ideal and no raincoats were required. The result of the trip is that the engagement of Mr. Thompson is announced, the happy event being set for next spring. He was accompanied on his return voyage by Frank Scott of town, and J. Batt who is settling here.

On Wednesday last a very interesting event took place when Mrs. Chas. Pilkie entertained a number of ladies of the Church of England in honor of Mrs. W. F. H. Thompson who is leaving for Victoria B. C. During the afternoon, Mr. Harding, on behalf of the ladies presented Mrs. Thompson with a very pretty pendent. There was an elaborate array of refreshments which everyone enjoyed. All present spent a very pleasant time.

A large gatering of members of St Saviour's Church took place Monday night at the home of Mr and Mrs A Eason on Monday evening the occasion being a farewell to Mr Harding, who has labored so successfully in this mission during the summer and at whose departure to re... college, genuine regret is felt Besides adherents of the church here, there were present some members of Ottawa congregation and several members of the football team The evening was spent in games and other social amusements and refreshments served by the ladies A pleasing feature was the presentation to Mr Harding of a purse in a few suitable words by Mr R A Pilkie on behalf of the congregation, which was fittingly acknowledged.

W. Ellis of Edmonton, spent a day or two in town this week.

W. H. McClinton of Pilot Butte, Sask., formerly in business here, is spending a few days in town.

Mrs. G. E. Hayward, who has been on an extended visit to Eastern points for the past three months, returned to Vermilion Saturday.

Jim Galloway... was renewing acquaintances here this week. His numerous old friends were very much pleased to see him.

Mrs. Jas. B. Hunt will receive for the first time on Friday, Oct. 6th., from three to six p. m., and afterwards on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month.

Jack Collins of Edmonton, was down the first of the week and is leaving for Chatham, Ont., where he will be one of the principals in a most happy event which will be celebrated this month.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McClinton of North Battleford, are visiting in town and their many friends are delighted to see them. They are accompanied by W Campbell of Duntroon, Ont, a brother of Mrs. McClinton' who is on a trip through the West

Harvest festival services will be held at Christ Church, Ottawa district, Sunday afternoon Sept 24th at 3 p.m. by the Rev G F Trench, M A, of Lloydminster The Holy Communion will be celebrated at this service Evening service 7 30 at St Saviour's, town

E H Naylor has ordered a full carload of Doherty pianos and organs which will be placed in his commodious new quarters under the Royal George Theatre Mr Naylor has a nice office fitted up in connection with the music store for handling his large money making business He will occupy the new premises about Oct. 1st and a call on him at his new office will pay you.

H J. Green of Cookeyville, who passed through here with a party to look at land near Vegreville, stopped off a day on his return to visit his wife and daughter Mrs. Lyle Howard and little grand daughter Genevieve. Mr. Green is in the real estate business.

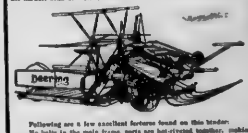
DEERING IDEAL BINDER

5—6 and 7 ft. Cut.

The binder built for hard work. Strong construction, best material and workmanship make it possible for the Deering Ideal binder to stand the hardest kind of work.



Following are a few excellent features found on this binder:

No bolts in the main frame, parts are hot-riveted together, making it pratically everlasting.

Pitman is made of best second growth hickory.

The reel has four distinct movements, operated by a single lever.

Roller and ball bearings are placed wherever subject to friction, thus reducing side draft.

Platform bottom is made of sheet steel riveted so that it never catches obstructions.

These are only a few of the many valuable features to be found on this binder.

Call on us and examine this machine, or write for beautiful illustrated catalogue which describes it in detail.

WESTERN TOURIST TRAFFIC

Mountain Hotels Vastly Improved to Meet Continued Increase

Year by year the traffic to the Canadian Rocky Mountains is increasing at such a great rate that the mountain hotels have some trouble in satisfying all the demand for accommodation during the season. The Canadian Pacific Railway is continually improving and adding to its chain of mountain hotels, but even with the extra facilities thus afforded the accommodations are taxed to the utmost. Every train westward takes with it a new contingent of tourists and it has become a fashionable thing to spend a week or ten days in the mountains before going to the coast.

Banff, being in the centre of the Canadian National Park, is naturally one of the most favorable stop-over points for travellers. It is situated in a district which is most advantageous for mountain climbing, fishing and other sports, and as a result the C. P. R. hotel at this point is well patronized. [illegible] made several new improvements to the [illegible] with the result that it is now more popular than ever. The improvements consisted of the addition of two new wings and a new swimming pool. [illegible]

THE MAKING OF A NATION

A nation is made powerful and to be honored in the world not so much by the number of its people as by the ability and character of that people; and the ability and character of that people depends in a great measure upon the economy of the several families which, taken together, make up the nation. There never yet was and never will be a nation permanently great, consisting for the great part of wretched miserable families.—W. Corbett.

To Clean Ostrich Plumes

While ostrich plumes can be successfully cleaned at home in the following way:

Make a lather of white, pure white soap and a little ammonia and move the plumes about in it. Then press them from stem to tip between the fingers and repeat the process in clean, hot water. Then rinse in cold water to which a very little blue has been added. Hang them up to dry in a draught, and shake them very frequently. Now that straight plumes are in fashion there is no need to curl them.

Try being sorry for the things you have said before saying them.

It is very hard sometimes to tell a man to his face what you think of him.

WHILE THE PLAY WAS ON

Alberta Read the Secret of Her Own Heart.

By VIRGINIA L. WENTZ.

They came in rather late—the first act was well under way. The girl in her soft evening gown swept quietly down the aisle and took the seat indicated by the usher with serene nonchalance. The man with waxed mustache and flashy diamond studs followed ostentatiously. He sat down, much to the annoyance of the party directly behind, after an unduly pompous delay. Ostentation and pomposity were in Mr. Stuart's line.

Mechanically the girl drew out her opera glasses from their bag, but she did not use them. Instead, with a little sigh of content, she leaned back against her wrap, a gorgeous thing, ermine lined, belonging to her aunt, which she had been coaxed into wearing. The lights of the house were low and as she leaned for a second a billowy mass of chiffon and lace against the ermine her heavily lashed eyelids half closed, and she smiled faintly.

Ah, it was so good to be faultlessly dressed from the top of her head to the tip of her shoe all at once—just once sure of herself all around! Not as it had always been with her down in dear old Kentucky—a gown achieved just as her hat was going out of fashion, a new wrap when her evening dresses were beginning to look a bit worn, boots a little shabby just as she was able to get fresh gloves and veil. Her eye fell on the billowy bosom of her bodice. How all her life she had loved lace—real cobwebby lace! And ermine to pretty against—the lordly "feel of the thing!"

Well, now she was in the way to have it all. This month's visit with her aunt in New York had been fecund in results. Dances and dinners, suppers, theater parties, had filled the hurrying days and nights, but still, with her aunt's worldly assistance, she had found time to engage herself to the man beside her. "Capital, my dear!" her aunt had said when she heard the news, kissing her tightly on the cheek. "You see, Alberta, I knew what I was doing when I sent for you, and you had only to come to conquer. Of course Mr. Stuart isn't exactly a paragon of beauty, and he's a bit [illegible]

[illegible]

... Which she then [illegible]

[illegible] that "Spring Song" of Mendelssohn [illegible] Robert Harvey [illegible]

These were the words from Stephen Phillips' "Marpessa" which Harvey had been wont to set to that music, saying, "They seem to be made for each other—just like you and I, sweetheart."

How ever in the world had she made herself able to give him up? It was her cursed love of luxury, she told herself, and what would luxury profit her without him? What a fool she had been! But the worst was yet to do. Tomorrow she was to write the letter which was to stab his dear heart like a knife.

"And an awfully stunning fellow; regular Gibson type, you know. We tried to induce him to join us tonight, but, you see, he lives in Louisville."

Alberta turned her head ever so slightly. The people back of her who had been annoyed at Mr. Stuart's inconsiderateness when he first came in were talking.

"And he leaves for the south tomorrow. Fancy arriving in fascinating old New York one day and leaving it the next! He says she'll warrant he has a sweetheart in Louisville, for he's dead set on going there immediately. This morning we drew just before we sailed into the harbor"— But "she," who was from Chicago and full of western enterprise, finished the sentence for herself.

"I came on him unexpectedly, and what d'ye think he was doing? Leaning over the rail and looking at a picture in his watch. 'Ah ha, Mr. Harvey!' I cried. 'You're caught at last! Will you let me see her picture?' 'In a few moments I'll show you the statue of Liberty instead,' said he, closing his watch softly and unstrapping his fieldglasses. And, would you believe it, the winning sweetness of his smile took all the sting out of his refusal."

"Why don't you strike for him, Maude, and cut the Louisville girl out," came a laughing reply, "or wasn't he looking for a rich wife?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," was the response. "But anyhow he's not rich. But the information from his chum coming over—the one who's going to take us to the [illegible] tomorrow. He comes from an old plantation in Kentucky, [illegible] and people there call him a grand seigneur cause he's considered an aristocrat. It appears Mr. Harvey is an aristocratic poverty and a horror of the nouveaux riches." She smiled daintily and giggled.

A GRANITE BOMB.

Jack Frost Hurled It Down Into the Yosemite Valley.

Definite first [illegible] Mr. J. [illegible] in "Yosemite Trails," describes an experience that must have been wonderfully impressive to the spectator. He had been spending some weeks in exploring the Yosemite valley and the "great rocks," like El Capitan, that wall it in.

Standing one day of late autumn about the middle of the valley, I was startled by a report like a cannon shot, which filled the whole valley with echoes that roared and boomed, repeated and multiplied, in a long continued, glorious tumult.

As the deafening sound died away to sullen mutterings under the visor of El Capitan I was able to distinguish the point of attack by the long, clattering descent of a vast quantity of rock.

The night had been a cold one in the valley, and on the cliffs at eight thousand feet levels of the upper rim the temperature must have dropped almost to zero.

Frost, working quietly with his [illegible] had just succeeded in shifting from the shoulder of the sentinel a trifle of fifty tons or so of granite. For over a thousand feet the boulder fell sheer, swift and straight; then, striking the cliff, it burst like a bomb, shattered into a myriad flying shards and splinters and dislodged a number of fragments that trickled down to the valley in a stream that lasted for minutes.

Then from the spot where the boulder had struck dust began to rise into the quiet air slowly building up and [illegible] like a summer cloud and every [illegible]. It was the flour of granite, powdered instantaneously by the terrific shock.

THE IMPORTANCE OF DIPPING SHEEP.

Dipping sheep to be a practical success must be thoroughly done, and when it is there are no external parasites in the flock. Owing to the efficient work of the United States department of agriculture scab has been almost entirely eradicated from the flocks of America. Still there are occasional outbreaks, showing that in out of the way flocks it still exists, [illegible]

Fair Was Big Success

The sixth annual fair of the Vermilion agricultural society held Tuesday was a huge success and was favored with a fine day and a good attendance. The exhibits were of a noticeably high standard though not so numerous on the whole as last year. The vegetable exhibit was excellent, but grain entries small. Butter, bread, pastry and cakes made a large display as well as fruits. The ladies work was good, what there was of it and a splendid exhibit of schoolchildren's work of considerable merit was shown. The manufacture display by E. H Naylor is deserving of special mention and in our next issue will receive special attention as a move in the direction of making the Vermilion fair one of the big central events of this part of Alberta.

Some fine birds were shown in the poultry exhibit which was an attractive rendevous for fanciers. Live stock had a large list of entries and the class of horses in the judging ring would be hard to surpass in any part of the West. Cattle also made a good showing in both dairy and beef classes. Sheep and hog entries were light, but of good type. The secy has promised list of winners next wk.

Town Will Have Light

Project Greatly Advanced By the Council Monday Night

An actual start has finally been made in the work of installing the municipal electric light plant for the town of Vermilion and everything bids fair that lights will be on ere the short days of winter are here.

The pole line has been purchased from the old company for the sum of $2000.00 which will expedite outside work; a site just west of Wiebe & Son's flour mill is being negotiated for; tenders for the power house have been asked; the Miniely well drill is ready to put down a well; tenders are being call at both Toronto and Winnipeg for the necessary machinery and electrical equipment and Mr. Bowring of the firm of Bowring & Logan, electrical engineers, Toronto, is in town and advising the Council. This was the position of affairs Tuesday.

All other business was excluded from the deliberations of the board at the regular monthly meeting Monday night. The town's electrical advisor was present from Toronto and Mr. Drinkle of the old plant, as well as a full attendance of the Board.

Friday October 6TH.

Is Date Set By Young Conservative Club for Grand Smoker

A grand smoker and concert will be held in the Royal George Theatre on Friday evening October 6th, under the auspices of the Young Conservative Club of Vermilion. F. A. Morrison, the Conservative candidate in the late election, will be a guest and will deliver a short address. Other addresses will also be given.

An orchestra will be in attendance and a good programe of music and songs is being arranged. All friends of the party are cordially invited to be present. There will be plenty to smoke and a good time is expected. A special invitation is extended by the executive through the Standard to the people in the country districts to be present at this smoker.

Siding To Brickyard

Spur 1000 Feet Long Being Laid From Main Line To Brick Kilns

Though somewhat late for the heaviest shipments of this year's output, a spur line is now being laid by the C.N.R. from a point on their main line 1 1-2 miles west of town into the brick yards.

Owing to the uncertainty as to the company getting the spur in this year, operations at the yards were stopped several weeks earlier than was intended. Orders for four or five times their output were received at the yard office.

Horse Broke It's Neck

Livery Team Ran Away and One of the Horses is Killed

As he was driving across the Mc-Phee trail from Vermilion lake to the Campbell lake road Sunday F. H. Miller clerk to Stephens Brothers Limited, met with an unfortunate accident which resulted in the killing of one of the valuable team of drivers owned by the Hayward livery.

Just before reaching the main road there was a short steep rise to breast and Mr Miller touched the team with the whip. The horses jumped, breaking the doubletrees and jerking the driver over the dashboard to the ground. They dashed straight ahead into the barb wire fence on W. Betz farm where one horse was thrown breaking its neck.

the lumber and rubber deforestation expenses of being transported through an unknown country to an unknown destination by a changing gang of whom he also knew nothing.

"Yesterday you seemed to be interested in the Bering business," she finally said.

"I certainly was until you told me there were no reindeer sales left."

"There is one. When I came here a friend of mine from Seattle made me an offer, and I refused it because I thought at the time I had no idea what I was going to do with my property. I hung on to it."

"I can't buy your ship."

"Nobody asked you to," she smiled as I wouldn't sell it to you if you had wanted to. I'm not sure I want to sell it myself. I'm not sure I'm not going to make a success of it. I've been thinking it over, and I've decided that it was a bad night, but didn't realize it.

The family sat up on the rug and roared, and she knew it was a hit night, but couldn't say so.

After Mr Bowser had remarked that it's the best thing I've said about brown things he suddenly stepped his leg and exclaimed:

"Great Scott, but what a foot I am!" Mrs. Bowser didn't contradict his self-estimation, but would have suggested on a few at once. She looked a open eye at him, and Mr. Bowser agreed:

"I can make this house cool and comfortable or hot, you please, and like it just up to your choice of conditions for a month long. After a month of Mr Bowser this summer you'll have to go away to get cool, and you can't go to the country. Why don't you stay here and be comfortable?"

"Drop in the evening and bring your fur coat with you," said Mr. Bowser to the chief engineer, as he stalked at him and poked him in the ribs, or tried to. The essential commander with his choice and blood-curdling yell and he at once began to run amidst the wail.

"Is knowing the right time before the way to make a real present?" asked Mrs. Bowser, with a good deal of irony in her voice.

Tells Wife to Withdraw.

"I'll be back in a minute. Who's in the house?" she was asked in return. "Why, I'm alone. I'm ready now and I'm all up to it, and if you don't say the word I'll go over there and start I'll eat my hat."

"You shall do you want of those brown building and clothes on the floor," she answered.

"Withdraw, madam, withdraw. The enemy has reached the rest, provided at the rational origin.

"I don't believe it. None of your surprises ever are. The paper says the weather bureau has got a new ruling before the advance of a rain storm from the west, and I'll bet you would give up your scheme."

Mr. Bowser waved down the hall and up the stairs, and ten minutes later a happy Mrs. Bowser in the most brownie in Bro storm. Inn not more than ten minutes after that an electrician came to attach the fans to the wires. He established a long lead two of the electric up. The electrician began to work, and after a time said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I wish you'd have your husband come down and help."

"What's the matter?"

"Why, the wire from the street seems to be dead."

"I dunno."

"But you must have seen it brought in."

"I don't think I did. No, I know I didn't. You ought to know your own wires."

Why Fans Do Not Work.

Mrs. Bowser had been listening from the head of the stairs, and she now came down and asked:

"Is it true that fans are putting up Mr Bowser?"

"Yes, dear. That is the great surprise."

"And the men can't find what they call the feed wire?"

"Eh."

"And the men can't find what they call the feed wire?"

"Yes, dear. . . . great joy . . . on me I'll be ruined. There is no . . . wire."

"Withdraw, what do you mean?"

"There are no electric wires laid in this house. The contractor forgot to put them in. If you can hold your surprise you can have a splendid bare evening. I'll wait a week and then Mr Bowser will have to go to the country."

Why Less the Cook.

"Cook told me a month ago that if you tried any more experiments she should leave," said Mrs. Bowser.

"Let her leave and be hanged to it. I don't propose to be waited on in my own house. However, there is no reason why you should leave. I'll get rid of it before why didn't I? Let's see, I'll have to get the carpenter to put a ball and tube for my bedroom fire in the morning. I'll have a number of other things to attend to, and I'll have to run down to the city. I'll have to run in and out of the house all day. Every time I go out I'll have to get my self in trouble and

VERMILION ALTA., SEPT. [illegible] 1911

The return of the Conservative party to power [illegible] means a great deal [illegible] Canada. Mr. Borden is [illegible] people contro[illegible] values, a matter [illegible] advocated by [illegible] west for years, the [illegible] the Hudson Bay [illegible] ernment owned [illegible] by the people [illegible] independent commission [illegible] ing of substantial [illegible] the establishment of chilled meat industry, another demand which has been foremost in the list [illegible] cry of the western farmer for a number of years the extension of the boundaries of the province of Manitoba, the extension of the rural mail delivery system, the appointment of a board of [illegible] commissioners for the west, and last but not least—the restoration of the public domains. This is a very comprehensive policy, and as Rome was not by any means built in a day, it may take some little time before they are all a thing accomplished. But we must give Borden a chance to fulfil his pledges to the people. It will take at least a year before a new cabinet can hope to begin to feel their places. There is a vast legacy for it to clean up. Grave charges of corruption have to be settled; the National Transcontinental mess must be removed and the corrupt public works department thorough[ly] cleansed. The new government must fix the naval problem and the big contracts the late government awarded on the eve of election day. Just what will happen to the navy no one knows. The people are opposed to the proposed expenditure of fifty or sixty millions in building warships [illegible] to hear that eventually Borden [illegible] permanent tariff [illegible] among the first [illegible] government [illegible] In the meantime Mr. Borden will begin his cabinet making. It is expected that its personnel will be announced in a few days. The rest we must leave to the future.

DID HIMSELF CREDIT

Enterprise of E. H. Naylor A Credit to Vermilion Fair

One of the main attractions at the big fair last week was the exhibit in manufacturing industries shown by our progressive and enterprising townsman E.H. Naylor, who is as well one of Vermilion's leading business men. A profitable and interesting hour was spent by the Standard in a review of the elaborate exhibit this gentleman had on the grounds. With F. L. Jost of the Doherty company and three more able assistants, Mr. Naylor was able to demonstrate the superior points and the desirability of the lines he is placing in large quantities in the Vermilion territory. The array of Doherty Pianos and Organs in the main tent were a special attraction and the superior tone of these instruments was noted—the White sewing machine—Capital Cream Separator—Empress Steel Ranges—and the handy man about the farm in the little 2 1-2 h.p. gasoline engine, were [illegible]

A Tragic Affair

Frank, Second Son of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Victim of Exploding Shell—Buried Tuesday

Frankie Jones the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Jones, Second St. north, was instantly killed by the explosion of a cartridge on Sunday evening at 6.30 o'clock. The shot entered the little lad's neck under the jaw, coming out at the top and side of the head, death being instantaneous. The tragic affair occurred in the kitchen of the family home, the four children being alone at the time; their mother having run over to a sick neighbor's but a few minutes before.

Just how the shell which was a 12 gauge, exploded will never be known for a certainty, but the dead boy had it in his hand at the time chopping or whittling it with a knife. An older brother was but a few feet away and saw the explosion and his brother fall backwards to the floor. Profound sympathy is felt for the family in their terrible affliction.

The funeral was held Tuesday from the English church and was largely attended. The room which [illegible] was at school was closed for [illegible] and his fellow pupils attended the funeral in a body. Beautiful floral offerings lay upon the casket and consisted of wreath from Mr. & Mrs. Chas. Pinkney, flowers, Mrs. P. G. Pinkney, wreath, C.N.R. fellow employees of Mr. Jones, wreath, Mrs. C. Carruthers, cross, Fellow Pupils, by Miss Oliphant, cross, Mrs. W. Wood, wreath, Mr. and Mrs. J. Payne.

Through the Standard the parents wish to thank the many friends for their kindly sympathy and aid in their sad bereavement.

Following are a few excellent features found on this binder:
No bolts on the main frame, parts are hot riveted together, making it practically everlasting.
Pitman is made of [illegible] growth hickory.
The reel has [illegible] operated by a single lever.
Roller and ball bearings are placed wherever subject to friction, thus reducing side draft.
Platform bottom is made of sheet steel riveted so that it never catches obstructions.
These are only a few of the many valuable features to be found on this binder.

The reason much suffering between the sexes is needless is simply ignorance and unsatisfactory method.

Mrs. Lot Roscoe

A. Hickey, Esq., Dear Sir,—For the cure of severe indigestion, constipation and sick headache, I have used Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, and have found them to be the best medicine with the exception of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which I have used with the same success.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Lot Roscoe.

"LET MOONEY DO IT"

SUNRISE

The East is blushing! 'Tis a rose
Year in the white and gold;
Sweet as the greenness of a woman's eyes
Is the first light that holds
Large and luminous on from the sea,
And of the days it blossoming
Is one.
Richer and richer as higher and higher
Ladder
Heights and deeper it takes its hue
Brighter it reaches
The space of heaven and the pure of Till all is as rich as a rose can be
And your heart and all believe
Of Fire

Be Warned by Headache

A Tells of Serious Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY - LIVER PILLS

You can stop a headache with powerful drugs. But it is not generally safe to do so.

A headache almost always warns that the derangement of the digestive organs, the liver, kidneys or bowels has begun, or is on the point of doing so. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you not only relieve the headache, but you remove the cause, which will soon lead to more danger and more headaches.

Pains are the result of poison in the blood which the kidneys fail to remove. Sore backaches or aching limbs, you may be sure, point out that the kidneys are sick and require the help that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will give.

They are wonderfully prompt as well as reliable and thorough in action, and their use has made them known the world over as the most successful remedy for all forms of kidney trouble and biliousness.

It is the greatest waste of time and patience to whip a horse that balks. It hates the man who does it worse than he does the whip or the load. It's a little the nicer right where he is and coax him back here without anything in sight or anyone to keep him company. Then he will bring himself in his senses.

The Duke of Marlboro recently bit Harris and then talked about his ill-temper.

No Didn't See the Killing.

Little Jack's father was the leader of the village choir, and one Sunday evening he was singing a solo in the church. Jack was sitting with his mother in the front pew, and when his father began to sing about holding on to the rock the child looked up at his mother and asked her what he was going to do with it.

"I don't know. I was getting on the rock next and couldn't see," was the ready answer.

Women in Japan.

Dutch Chinese shoes seem to be a product the Japanese never thought of keeping secret in subjection, and the Chinese feet are frequently mentioned in the old histories and there have been famous Japanese statesmen.
